JAMES ENGLISH.

In his 81st year, James English died this morning at his home, 546 Gilmour Street, after a week's illness. He was born in Peterborough, and was widely known. For many years he was one of the most active members of the old Fire Department. In fact he was the engineer for a long time, and helped fight many a blaze. Mr. English was a public-spirited citizen, and in his day had contributed his share to the city's welfare and progress. He succeeded to the proprietorship of the Wm. English Canoe Company at the death of his brother William, who founded the business. The funeral will be held on Thursday at 2.30 p.m. from his late residence, 546 Gilmour St., to the Little Lake Cemetery. Mr. English is survived by his sister, Miss Kate English.

FOOD FOR THE TIMES

EMPLOYERS OF ALIENS ARE WARNED TO BEWARE

Chief Grasett Says Firms Are Taking Chances—Police Start Investigation—Mr. T. F. Matthews, of Peterboro' Thinks the Harris Abattoir Fire is a National Loss at the Present Time.

INQUIRY HAS BEEN ORDERED

TORONTO, April 17.—The destruction of the Harris Abattoir with a loss of about $1,500,000 and an inestimable loss to the allies for whom they were supplying food, brings the fire loss in Toronto to munition factories and other concerns which might have been useful to the allies, to the great total of $3,270,000 since May of last year. As a result of costly outbreaks the Police Department yesterday ordered a thorough investigation into the Harris Abattoir fire to determine whether or not there has been any alien enemy activity. The following are some of the recent fires mentioned:

Date.	Place.	Loss
April 15—	Harris Abattoir	$1,500,000
April 6—	Galena Signal Oil Co.	300,000
April 2—	Thor Iron Works	400,000
April 1—	Jefferson Glass Co.	55,000
Mar. 12—	Ferries burned at Hanlan's Point	25,000
Feb. 25—	T. and Y. Radial barns (Kingston road)	70,000
Feb. 5—	Toronto Laundry Machinery Co.	200,000
Feb. 5—	Rosedale Depot	5,000
Dec. 6—	Polson Iron Works	200,000
Nov. 3—	Cluff Amm'n Works	200,000
May 12—	Cluff Amm'n Works	250,000

Grassett Issues Warning.

"Firms who employ aliens are taking chances—and the more aliens they employ the greater the chances they take," said Chief Constable H. J. Grasett. "I know that there are some very decent people among the aliens," said the chief, "but as I said, the people that employ aliens must take their chances."

The chief declared that nothing had been found by the police to show that the fires recently had been of alien enemy origin.

"Fires have been investigated by the police as rapidly and as thoroughly as possible, but we have found nothing to indicate that the fires were started by aliens. In the case of the Harris Abattoir fire last night it seems to have started in the platform, and the constable who saw it and gave the alarm had passed by there a few moments before and had seen no sign of fire. Of course there were materials there that were very inflammable, and that caused the fire to spread rapidly. But the firm has, I am informed by the police inspector of that district, no less than six watchmen on duty around the plant, and if there were any suspicious characters around they should be able to see them.

"It is very easy for people to imagine that fires are of alien enemy origin," commented the chief, "but we have no evidence to that effect. It is remarkable, however, what a lack of precaution there is against fire."

Mayor Church declared that there had been an unusually large number of incendiary fires lately. The Police Board will discuss the situation.

Why Inquiry is Ordered.

"We are investigating the Harris Abattoir fire thoroughly with a view to ascertaining its origin," Inspector Kennedy of the Detective Department, stated to-day. According to the officer there has been nothing uncovered which leads the police to believe the blaze was incendiary, but the destruction of the plant was such a reverse to Canadas' war business that police investigation was deemed necessary."

When Secretary-Treasurer J. S. McLean, of the Harris Abattoir Co., was asked if he thought any connection existed between the fire Monday night and alien activity, replied, "None whatever."

"I think the fire at the Harris Abattoir is nothing less than a national loss at the present time," said Mr. T. F. Matthews of Matthews-Blackwell Co., of Peterborough, who arrived in Toronto yesterday.

Mr. Matthews says that the firm whose premises were destroyed, is under contract to deliver large quantities of fresh beef to the British Government, and he says that this feature of the case is the most serious.

"It is strange that these companies which are destroyed always seem to have something to do with the war," he continued. "I believe that the fires are the work of German agents."

Mr. Matthews says that the beef situation is not so grave at the present time as the bacon, which in Canada is very scarce. In the United States the supplies are more plentiful, thanks to the bumper corn crop which they had last year.

"It will be October before we begin to feel the weight of the extra production in Ontario," he said, "until then we are going to be very short indeed."

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 45 cars, with 831 cattle, 187 calves, 367 hogs, and 15 sheep and lambs.

Trade was comparatively quiet yesterday, following the activity of Monday's market. The average of prices for good and choice butcher cattle was practically the same as yesterday, the general advance for the week of about 25 cents being well maintained, although there were no record prices going yesterday. There was but a very light run of fresh cattle offering, and some of these were held over for to-day's market. The burning of the big Harris Abattoir plant was naturally an all-absorbing topic on the market yesterday, with a good deal of speculation as to when the plant would be ready to resume operations. It is generally expected that a a day or two will see the plant in practically full operation again.

The hog market was weak. A few loads sold at $20, fed and watered, a decline of 50 cents, with one of the abattoirs standing out for a 75-cent decline.

A choice bunch of lambs sold at $21.00.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S EAR

I am glad to say that it is quite well now and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend it is preparation too highly."

EFFRONTERY OF YOUNG LADY AND INFLUENTIAL FATHER BROUGHT ABOUT O'CONNOR'S RESIGNATION

Father Had Influence With the Minister of Labour, and Discipline Suffered—O'Connor Gives Other Reasons—Girl Tried to Run the Office.

"THE BOLSHEVIKI PRINCIPLES"

OTTAWA, April 17.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, in the Commons yesterday afternoon tabled additional correspondence between himself and Mr. W. F. O'Connor, which led to the resignation of the latter as Commissioner of Cost of Living.

On April 6th, Mr. O'Connor, replying to the Minister's letter of April 5th, accepting his resignation (already published) says in part: "I am just in receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, acknowledging and accepting my resignation from your service. I am sorry to receive it. It was my earnest desire that my withdrawal from such service, which withdrawal was bound to occasion much public comment, should seem to have come about under circumstances which would enable you to put a good foot forward.

"It was better, as I thought, that I should, to a reasonable extent, suffer injustice and misunderstanding than that the Government as a whole should be held responsible for a condition with respect to which I at least discharge it of responsibility, so far as past events are concerned.

OTHER CAUSES OF DISCORD.

"Wherefore, my letter of resignation contains one statement at least which will be of interest to the recording angel, for the reason that the files of your department will bear it out, I allude of course to that portion of my resignation which states that I have except, on a recent occasion, been favoured with your unfailing support. If your understanding of the conditions which culminated in my resignation is as your letter to me expresses it, your misunderstanding is so different from mine that for safety sake I must remind you that there were other circumstances, ripe and ripening, which, in all likelihood would have rendered it necessary for me to retire sooner or later from the post which I held under you. I will not even now set up or rely upon them.

Apart from them, however, I absolutely must mention to you one serious cause for dissatisfaction, and that was the non-payment of certain members of the staff. As you know, one member of the staff has served for six months, but has not been paid a dollar. Another has served three months and is not yet paid. Yet another has served over two months but it not paid. One of those mentioned, a lady, I was, by reason of her distress, compelled to pay out of my own funds, concealing the fact that the funds were mine. I do respectfully protest that I ought not to have been exposed to this sort of thing, and I respecfully represent that the indicated conditions should be remedied with out the loss of a day."

"YOUNG LADY'S EFFRONTERY."

Continuing, Mr. O'Connor states that the friction between the Minister and himself was due to one person—a young lady—salary $700 per annum, "who was placed in the department under me by you, and who maintains that through her father's influence with you, she is free of discipline, except at your hands. Since the advent of this clerk a previously perfect office mechanism has been completely disorganized. Having succeeded through personal intervention with you, in procuring or assisting in the procuring of the removal of her immediate chief, (this as you know, some weeks ago) the young lady was guilty of the effrontery of informing the new chief whom I

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

THE COSTUME FOR THE DINNER

THE COSTUME FOR THE DINNER
CHAPTER XLIII.

After many conferences we had decided upon a costume for my dinner. Merton Gray had declared that he would have to sit up nights to paint the place cards, if we didn't make up our minds very soon. We finally gave up the idea of having the guests follow any one period too closely. It meant lots of work and expense. So we decided upon a sort of Dolly Varden costume for the women and short breeches and ruffles for the men. And wigs, of course—that is, wigs for the men; and a choice of either wigs or powdered hair for the women.

I immediately ordered a handsome one made for George. I knew he wouldn't wear it unless it was perfect.

Nothing more was said of my awkwardness at the restaurant nor of my giving away to tears on my way home. But I knew that Mrs. Sexton had felt chagrined, and strangely enough I felt more so because of her.

I was mortified, too, that any friend of George's should see me make such a faux pas, and I knew that Merton Grey had also seen me spill the coffee and had turned away to save me embarrassment. I hoped that George would not hear of the incident. I came very near asking Mrs. Sexton not to speak of it to him, but I couldn't quite get up my courage.

George would be at home in a few days. Mrs. Sexton had gone back to her quiet, friendly manner of the first days when we were alone. I once more was beginning to like her. She let me alone most of the time, only insisting that we keep up some reading and our talks on the duties of a hostess.

"Your husband must not feel that we have played all the time," she remarked.

MADGE LORING FINDS HERSELF DE TROP.

Merton called one afternoon to talk over the place cards. He wanted the list of the guests, etc. We had only just commenced to talk when Madge Loring was announced. Mrs. Sexton had a headache, so Merton and I were alone.

At first I was tempted to say, "not at home," then thought better of it. The servants would think it queer. So I told James to show her in.

"I fear I am de trop," she said, after we had talked for a few minutes. "You were busy," glancing at the open desk. I had received her in the library. Now I was sorry I had not gone into the drawing room.

"I was helping Mrs. Howard in a trifling matter." Merton Gray volunteered.

"How fortunate you are!" she turned to me, "to have Mr. Gray's help is indeed a compliment."

I felt myself blushing, and hated myself for doing so. I could not very well explain that he was helping me with a dinner party, when she was not to be invited, so I changed the subject by remarking:

"I am sorry Mrs. Sexton has a headache. She is staying with me, but felt too ill to come down stairs to-night."

"I always knew that George was clever," she said, with thinly veiled sarcasm. "Now I know it'. I'll bet it was he who invited Mrs. Sexton to visit you. Charming as she is, she is scarcely the company that a young thing like you would choose. Now, I know I am de trop."

AN UNKIND INSINUATION.

It was most unkind of Mrs. Loring to put me in the position she had by her remarks. The intimation that, because of Mrs. Sexton's feeling unable to come down stairs, she had interrupted a tete-a-tete between Merton Gray and me, made me very miserable. The worst of it was that I had not yet learned to hide my feelings.

"I was just about to ask Mrs. Howard if she would not play for me," Merton broke in. I realized that he saw my embarrassment, and was trying to help me. "Perhaps you would like to listen to some music also?"

"I certainly should; Mrs. Howard plays divinely."

Nothing loath, I led the way and, without giving her a chance to say anything more I commenced to play. But I played very badly and realizing that it did not tend to make me more comfortable, I finally stopped abruptly and said:

"I can't play to-night! I am not in the mood."

"Temperamental, like all artists," Mrs. Loring remarked.

"Yes, I guess I am."

"Well, I must be going! I was alone so I thought that I must drive over, instead of twiddling my thumbs at home. I knew George was away, so I expected to find you wearing the willow also."

"You see, you are mistaken." I replied, goaded to an answer. "Mr. Gray took pity on me."

"That's what it means to be young and—charming," she said, then bade me a gushing "good night." Merton escorted her to her car, then, as he regained my side, said:

"Madge Loring is inclined to be catty. Don't let it worry you. She doesn't scratch very deeply."

To-morrow: Mrs. Sexton advises.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction

GIRL'S DRESS.

This quaint little lady wears a frock which very much resembles a coat, but it is really a very smart little tailored dress which will make up well in such wash materials as linen, Indian head, kindergarten cloth, chambray or novelty cottons. The short waist is made in kimono style and it buttons at centre front. The short sleeves may be finished with or without the very narrow turned back cuffs. The round collar of white linene has a hemstitched hem. The one piece skirt is straight at the lower edge and it is gathered to the waist except at each side of the front, where it is caught in box plaits.

The girl's dress pattern No. 8731 is cut in five sizes—4 to 12 years. As on the figure, the 8-year-old size requires 2¾ yards 27 inch or 2½ yards 36 inch material and ¾ yard 22 inch contrasting material.

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES

Would Hold Head Down Face Was Such a Sight

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin and other parts of the body, and although they are not a dangerous trouble they are very unsightly to both you and your friends.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and this is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This sterling remedy has been on the market for over 40 years, during which time we have received thousands of testimonials as to its curative powers over all skin diseases.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about eighteen. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town, I would hold my head down when I would see anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles, and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion. I have recommended it to everyone who is in a run-down condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is All the face is clear."

Arrive and Depart.

"Arrivals" and "departures" have a definite place in French trench philology. When the American troops first entered the trenches their French comrades were very anxious to have them distinguish accurately between the noise of "arrives" and "departs." "I thought they were talking harbor clearances at first," said one Yankee lad. "Then I heard a low, whining sound and a shell exploded behind us. 'Un arrive,' said my companion. He signified that it was a present from the Germans. Soon there was a louder, sharper sound. It was a responsive one from our own batteries. 'Un depart,' he said with great satisfaction. 'Voila!' we had it. The exchange of artillery fire is, after all, a matter of 'arrivals' and 'departures.' Needless to say, the 'departs' enjoy the wider popularity."

Pink Tea Workers Barred.

The head of the canteen department of the National League for Women's Service has requested all "pink tea" members to resign from her division. "I would rather have one dependable woman than one thousand who can't work because they have an engagement to play golf or because it is their afternoon at home," she remarked, according to the Worcester Post.

Red Cross workers and war workers of all types are up against the old-age problems of organizers—how to weed out the indifferent and inefficient worker, the person who enthusiastically enrolls under every new banner, attends a few meetings, throws a monkey-wrench or two into the organization machinery—and disappears until a new "cause" or a brighter banner flaunts into view.

Such women are obstacles in the progress of any cause with which they see fit to play.

Fishing Reciprocity.

An arrangement which settles long-standing fisheries questions between Canada and the United States has been reached. It will remain in force at least during the war. The new agreement, which is regarded as another evidence of how the two countries are striving to break down all barriers that stand in the way of greater production, provides for complete reciprocity of port privileges for the fishing craft of the two countries. This will not only enable an important increase in the amount of fish produced to be made by the two countries, but will do away with the irritating delays to vessels of either country in the ports of the other.

The new pact is the first fruits of the work of the International Joint Commission, consisting of Hon. Chief Justice J. D. Hazen, of New Brunswick; G. J. Desbarates, Deputy Minister of the Naval Service, and W. A. Found, Superintendent of Fisheries, as Canadian members, and Hon. W. O. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce; E. F. Sweet, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and Dr. H. M. Smith, Commission of Fisheries as the United States members. This commission was named to consider the settlement of all outstanding fisheries questions between the two countries.

Following the return of the United States section of the Commission from public sittings on the Atlantic coast, the Secretary of Commerce, with the authority of the President under their war legislation, issued instructions to all their customs officers to allow Canadian fishing vessels to come directly from the fishing grounds to the United States ports, sell their catches there, procure all supplies and outfits and clear back to the fishing grounds, thus doing away entirely with the obstacles they previously experienced. Following this action, the Canadian Government authorized by order-in-Council, under the War Measures Act, that United States fishing vessels shall be permitted to come to our ports for similar privileges without the requirement of a license. As there is a duty in Canada, such duty will have to be paid on fish sold in Canadian ports.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

How a Scientist Was Saved from Death

By F. A. MITCHELL

In the olden time, when there was no traveling facilities west of Cheyenne except mule, horse or stage coach, Prof. Norman Asche, whose soft voice and fair complexion denoted that his vocation must be refined—probably an intellectual one—was riding a mule near the eastern foothills of the Rocky mountains.

The professor had heard that the bones of some extinct animal had been discovered in that region, and he had been sent out by the university in which he held the chair of historic zoology to investigate the discovery.

There were sounds of horses' hoofs coming rapidly from behind, and a man in "plains" uniform, viz., sombrero, woolen shirt and buckskin breeches, came alongside the professor. On reaching him this son of the woolly West surveyed him intently for a few minutes, then said:

"Stranger, will you do me a favor?"

"Certainly," replied Asche mildly.

"Here are some trinkets," said the man, "that belong to my sister. I've got to go to Colorado Springs. I see you're headed for Golden City. Would you mind takin' 'em to her thar?"

"I would be very happy to do so."

"She's Mrs. Cundiff. Tell her her brother Bill sent 'em."

He handed the professor two gold watches, several finger-rings and other jewelry, and without another word turned his horse's head toward Colorado Springs and galloped away.

The next person Professor Asche fell in with was a girl riding a horse straddle. She, too, was typical of the plains. She struck the road Asche traveled from a side road at the same moment he passed the latter.

"Mornen, stranger," she said.

"Good morning," replied the professor, with a pleasant smile.

Denizens of that region at that period on meeting usually began conversation by giving each other an account of what was their business.

"I'm lookin' for some stray mules," said the girl. "What are you after?"

"The bones of a mastodon that have been unearthed hereabout."

"What's that?"

"An animal that lived many thousands of years ago; before this region was sea bottom."

"Luny!" muttered the girl to herself.

"Are you going to Golden?" asked the professor.

"After I find my mules, I may go there."

"Would you mind delivering these things to a woman who lives there?" The professor held out the jewelry with which he had been intrusted.

"Not much," said the girl, suddenly changing her manner and putting a revolver she carried in a more reachable position. "Who are you, anyway? You can't be a road agent. And sure them things was tuk from somebody."

Professor Asche told her how he had acquired the jewelry, and while he was doing so sounds of a number of horses' hoofs were heard coming from a distance. A dozen mounted men came up and asked if the professor or the girl had seen anything of suspicious characters. The Denver coach had been robbed a few hours before.

The girl saw at once that the coach robber, expecting capture, had shifted his plunder to the lunatic, as she supposed him to be, but realizing that the said lunatic story would not be accepted, she said nothing. The professor had put the jewelry back in his pocket, but unknowingly left a gold chain dangling without. One of the men espied it, and in a few minutes all the plunder was taken possession of by the vigilance committee.

The committee did not doubt that the professor, if not the perpetrator of the robbery, was at least trying to get away with the plunder, and were for hanging him at once. Fortunately, there was not a tree in sight. Some were for shooting him, and some were for decapitating him. While they were discussing the matter, the girl was planning for his defense. Presently she said:

"Gents, before you separate this yere little feller's spirit from his body, will you allow me to ask him some questions?"

"Fire away!" said the head man of the vigilance committee.

"Mister, didn't you say that whar we're standin' was oncet the bottom of the sea?"

"Yes, I did," said the professor.

"What are you doin' in these parts?"

"I came out from the East to examine the bones of a mastodon."

"What's a mastedon?"

"An animal larger than an elephant that lived many thousand years ago."

"And didn't you say that Tash mountain was made by the washing of water around it?"

"I did."

The committee listened to the examination of the prisoner with astonishment. At this point the girl turned from him to them and said:

"Gents, isn't it likely that a crackbrained little chap like this could be easily imposed on by a road agent with all his senses in his head?"

"Dead right you are!" said the foreman. "Let him go."

Before nightfall the man who intrusted the professor with the plunder was captured and the lunatic identified him as such.

Pulleys, Shells and Countershafts

Every time a shell is bored or turned—two pulleys, or one pulley and one countershaft deliver power to the lathe.

"That's interesting," you say, but what's the significance of it?

The significance is this:

There are more than 500 munition plants in Canada.

In some of them there are as many as five hundred lathes. In very few are there less than one hundred lathes.

And nearly every munition plant relies upon Dodge Wood-Split or Cast Iron Pulleys or Dodge Countershafts to carry power to the lathe.

Do you see the significance of it now?

When the Allies' Artillery lays down a curtain of fire the fact that many a Canadian-made shell reaches its final destination, is because it was speeded on its way by the reliability of Dodge Power Transmission Machinery.

We confess pride in this, and are grateful for having been privileged to play a part in the great work of munition making.

AN OFFICIAL STORY TELLER

Libraries in Canada Find Special Feature for the Entertainment of Children is Worth While.

In several of the public libraries of Canada story telling to children has for some years been a special feature, says an exchange. Each Saturday morning from fifty to one hundred children assemble at the library in a room set apart for the purpose and called the "Children's Room." The ages of the children vary from six to fourteen years.

At St. John, New Brunswick, story telling has been continued now for three years. This year it has been found advisable to divide the children according to age and to hold two classes of half an hour each. The work has steadily grown in interest, and the demand for books of a less trivial type justifies the work of the committee in charge. During the summer, when opportunity offers and a story-teller of note is a guest of the city, notice is given to the library, and it is often possible to have a special session.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The latter rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

TIRE CARE IN MUDDY WEATHER

"Wet rubber cuts more readily than when dry, and during the muddy season tires should be watched with care," says the manager of a tire company. "A cut or a gash, caused by contact with sharp stones or a frozen roadbed, will cause damage if not properly treated. The only remedy is the prompt filling of the cut with gum rubber or "filler" after toroughly cleansing with gasoline and water. Fabric breaks and deep cuts should be vulcanized."

In Again, Out Again.

The insecurity of tenure attaching to the highest position in the services during war time is neatly illustrated in the story of the man who wanted to buy a birthday present for a friend—none other than Sir William Robertson, then the head of the British general staff. Advised by a lady that an umbrella is always a safe kind of present to give to a man, he proceeded to buy a beauty, relates the Christian Science Monitor. Returning home with his purchase, it suddenly dawned on him that officers in H. M. army and navy have no use for umbrellas. However, he decided to go forward with the presentation, but preceded it with an apology for his lack of thought in making such a purchase, and concluded with a doubt as to its ever being of use to the recipient. "Why not?" said Sir William, "Jellicoe is using his." If Admiral Lord Jellicoe is using his umbrella, he is also making hay while the sun shines, in the sense that he is putting in some quiet recreation after his three years at the grindstone. Only the other day, he was figuring as a skater on one of London's ponds, and quite recently his name was observed on the list of reservations for a squash racket court in a certain popular club. There are not many requests for these reservations nowadays, the younger members of the club in question being for the most part engaged in some form of war activity. The admiral was in good company, however, for there was one other name on the list—the Bishop of London.

Surprised.

A well-known Hampshire squire, noted for his shabby coats, was one day leaning over a gate which commanded a good view of his broad acres.

A well pleased smile was on his lips when he was startled by the sound of a wheedling voice near him.

"Gie us a hand, old chap, to help my poor old donkey up the hill."

The squire turned and, with the smile deepening on his face, pushed the little cart behind with so hearty a good-will that the coster exclaimed with admiration:

"Well, I'm darned if you ain't a good old sort. I say," he went on in a whisper. "I've knocked over two or three of the old squire's rabbits, and I'm darned if you shan't have one." Whereupon, with a great appearance of secrecy, he pulled out a fat young rabbit from under a sack in the cart, and trotted away, leaving the bewildered squire with one of his own rabbits dangling from his hands.

Why Not Wear a Sign?

Pat, being on his holidays, was one day strolling through the streets of New York, when he saw the figure of a man standing before a shop. There was a card pinned to the man's coat on which was written, "Reduced to $5."

Pat somewhat carelessly approached the figure and exclaimed: "Begorra, sir, you're safe enough; I'm reduced to 80 cents."

READY TO EXPLOIT CANADA.

Kaiser Planned to Give British Dominions Away Even In 1912.

The following sensational extracts, are from a brochure, the author of which is said to be Herr August Thyssen, a relative of the well-known German millionaire coal and iron master:—

"When the Hohenzollerns wanted to get the support of the commercial class for their war plans, they put their pleas before us as a business proposition. Business and commercial men were asked to support the Hohenzollern war policy on the ground that it would pay them to do so. Let me frankly confess that I am one of those men who were led to agree. In 1912 the Hohenzollerns said that war had become a necessity for the preservation of the military system upon which their power depends.

"I was personally promised a free grant of 30,000 acres in Australia and a loan from the Deutsche Bank of 750,000 dollars at 3 per cent. to enable me to develop my business in Australia. Several other firms were promised special trading facilities in India, which was to be conquered by Germany—be it noted by the end of 1915.

"A syndicate was formed for the exploitation of Canada. The syndicate consisted of the heads of twelve great firms, and the working capital was fixed at $100,000,000, half of which was to be found by the German Government. These promises were not vaguely given. They were made definitely by Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, on behalf of the Emperor, to gatherings of business men, and in many cases to manufacturers. But not only were these promises made by the Chancellor, they were confirmed by the Emperor, who, on three occasions addressed large private gatherings. The Emperor's speech was one of the most flowery orations I have heard."

Daily Thought.

To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man.—Shakespeare.

SETTLED AFTER 53 YEARS.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—After a fifty-three years' legal fight the estate of John Thompson, whose present representative is Robert A. Thompson, yesterday lost a civil war cotton seizure suit in the Supreme Court.

Meantime, what has become of the forty-three bales of cotton taken by Union soldiers in 1865 and for which the original suit was filed, is not stated.

Telephone Economy

The Need of the Hour

THE vital need of the hour is for economy!

¶ We are urged to save, to conserve our resources. Nothing is so important, so pressing.

¶ We must economize, we are told, in food, in fuel, in clothing, in railway travel—all along the line, in order that the war efforts of our Empire and its Allies may have a clear track to victory.

¶ The telephone, by the very nature of the work it does, is a powerful agent making for economy and efficiency. Without it, business would slow down with a fatal reaction on war effort.

¶ But the increasing scarcity of telephone material of all kinds, and of skilled labor demands that our subscribers should practice a rigid telephone economy—

¶ That they should order only such telephone equipment as is indispensable—

¶ That they should be careful of present telephone apparatus in home or office so as to avoid breakage and repairs—

¶ That they should refrain from unnecessary telephone conversations and make their talks brief so as to keep the lines open for the next caller.

¶ We ask your co-operation in our efforts to keep our service equal to war-time demands.

Beware of the "Kissing Palm!"

A correspondent tells us of a wonderful plant, called the "kissing palm," which has the curious and sometimes embarrassing effect of filling all persons who come near it with an irresistible desire to kiss each other. "It is not a bit of good trying to resist its power," he says; "you simply must kiss everybody near you, regardless of age, sex or looks." A dangerous plant this—not at all the kind of thing to have in a respectable house.

New York's Fire Bells.

Once, and up to a day within the memory of living men, New York had its fire bells. Eleven of them were hung in wooden towers about Manhattan. Gas May Help Win War.

Our illuminating gas plants may win the war for us, according to the American Chemical society. These experts say that the only way of quickly increasing the available supply of toluol is to extract it from the nation's gas. Toluol is the basis of trinitrotoluol, the famous British high explosive T. N. T. The production in this country is confined largely to by-product coke ovens and the entire present output is contracted for. However, by quick and energetic action we can secure an immense supplementary supply of this vitally necessary substance by treating illuminating gas without affecting the quality of the gas appreciably.

Saving Tea for Soldiers.

In England tea has advanced in price to such an extent and it is at the same time so necessary an accessory of diet in the army that it is considered an act of patriotic economy to drink cafe au lait for breakfast instead of the usual cup of tea, notes a London correspondent. Of course, any coffee that is diluted with milk is cafe au lait, but the term is usually applied to the beverage as the French take it for breakfast. That is a mixture of clear coffee infusion to which is added a liberal amount of hot milk.

VOWS TO AVENGE BROTHER.

Duncan Read, Training for Aviation, Lost His Twin Brother in France.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 16. — Duncan H. Read, of Purchase, N.Y., has taken an oath of vengeance on the German, fighting whom, in France, his twin brother, Curtis, fell last week. Read quitted Harvard in his junior year and is now well advanced in aviation. His brother but for the war would have been Yale's 'Varsity football manager last fall, for the twins went to different universities.

Duncan has written to Professor Charles T. Copeland announcing his brother's death, and saying:

"My chief concern now is to get abroad and when I get there to do my damnedest to avenge my brother's death. I won't stand for anything less than the complete conquering of the devils who let this hell on earth loose."

Mrs. R. W. Henderson, Main St. S., Gananoque, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a household remedy for about fifteen years, and for kidney and liver troubles have found them excellent. I have also proved that in a case of tonsilitis or severe cold, if given in time, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will quickly relieve the patient. I have had experience of this in my own family, and think these pills cannot be equalled."

GERMANY'S HUGE DEBT.

Bernhard Predicts Germany Will Owe 150,000,000,000 Marks.

AMSTERDAM, April 13. — Germany's debt after the war will be thirty times what it was at the beginning, George Bernhard, editor of the Vossische Zeitung declared in a recent lecture in Berlin in connection with the campaign for the eighth German war loan. The editor's speech was hardly calculated to afford his hearers much cause for rejoicing. He said that at the end of the war Germany probably would be faced with a debt of 150,000,000,000 marks, as against 5,000,000,000 before the war.

Bernhard said that 14,000,000,000 marks would have to be provided annually after the war through taxation. He estimated the Empire's national wealth at 400,000,000,000 marks, a large part of which is State and communal property. He did not favour a single levy on capital, and said small capital should not be taxed too hard. This, he declared, would mean that the larger fortunes would have to pay as high as 50 per cent., which he thought was not a safe tax from an economic viewpoint.

The latest inducement to subscribe to the war loan is a device by which a man may mortgage his prospective savings for the next ten years by means of a special insurance policy.

QUEBECKERS TO SERVE IN THE FRENCH ARMY

MONTREAL, April 15—Col. Arthur Mignault, who raised and equipped the famous 22nd French-Canadian Battalion and has since spent two years in France as head of a French-Canadian Hospital, has returned on leave. He believes firmly from experience that French-Canadian soldiers should be attached to the French army.

The only consideration calling for this is language, Col. Mignault declares. In war it is necessary to understand. It is necessary that all should speak the same language, whether they serve in England, France or Italy. There is no priority of sentiment where the end to be attained is the same.

In the 22nd which was always till now purely French-Canadian, there are now some English-speaking officers and recruits. Some only speak English and can neither understand or be understood.

BLINDING HEADACHES FROM CATARRHAL IRRITATION NOW QUICKLY CURED

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With all This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old-fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headaches. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is tweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or la grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size, 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

DUTCH HAVE CONSCRIPTION.

THE HAGUE, April 15.—The Government has introduced in Parliament a bill providing for the establishment of compulsory civilian service for the duration of extraordinary circumstances. The bill imposes this obligation upon all male citizens and all unmarried women or childless married women within the mother country between the ages of 17 and 60, with the exception of men in the naval or military service or persons included in specified exceptions. The bill empowers the government in case of war, to control all available hands and, at the present time, to compel all whose activities must not be suspended, lest the country's interests suffer, to continue such activities.

Red-blooded men of courage are on the firing line—and there are many anemic, weak, discouraged men and women left at home.

At this time of the year most people suffer from a condition often called Spring Fever. They feel tired, worn out, before the day is half thru. They may have frequent headaches and sometimes "pimply" or pale skin.

Bloodless people, thin, anemic people, those with pale cheeks and lips, who have a poor appetite and feel that tired, worn or feverish condition in the springtime of the year, should try the refreshing tonic powers of a good alterative and blood purifier. Such a one is extracted from Blood root, Golden Seal and Stone root, Queen's root and Oregon Grape root, made up with chemically pure glycerine and without the use of alcohol. This can be obtained in ready-to-use tablet form in fifty-cent vials, as druggists have sold it for fifty years as Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a standard remedy that can be obtained in tablet or liquid form.

WINDSOR, ONT.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and his 'Pleasant Pellets' are wonderful medicines for home use. I used to suffer with weak lungs, smothering spells and sick-headaches, but since I have taken the above mentioned medicines these conditions have left me. "Such medicines as Dr. Pierce's are worthy of praise and I am very glad to add my testimonial to the thousands of others."—MRS. ELLEN HARDIE, 11 Erie Avenue, West.

placed in charge of the clerks, of whom the young lady in question is one, that unless such new chief, in the administration of office affairs would so comport herself as to gain the approbation of the half dozen minor clerks who were to serve under her, she (the new chief) would be quickly removed from office; and that this result of non-acceptance of the Bolshevik principles of office administration and acceptable action thereupon, would be brought about through the personal influence of the young lady over her father, and of her father over the Minister.

Further on Mr. O'Connor said: — "The young lady is one of several in the department with previous affiliations with the town of St. Thomas. The young lady has not been able to conceal her pride of birth. She has indeed ascribed to it a certain commercial value. It is hard for one who has been a politician to forget all the rules at once, try as one may, so conceiving that you might be embarrassed, politically, by impending events, I spoke to you and advised by you of what had been done, stating that all you need do, is to refer objectors to me. I must confess to considerable surprise at the results. I would not have mentioned the matter to you at all if St. Thomas had not been involved."

Placed on Equal Basis.

Canadian headquarters in London has abandoned the idea of different colors to distinguish service chevrons gained in France and those gained in England. Canadians are now permitted to avail themselves of the privilege granted by the Imperial authorities, which permits overseas troops without service at the front to wear chevrons dating from the day they left their homes for England, though the British troops may not wear them unless they have been at the front. Canadians in France and England are now on an equal basis. Those who left Canada in 1914 are entitled to the coveted red chevron, and others who left subsequently are entitled to a blue chevron for every succeeding year or portion, whether at the front all the time or part, or not at all.

Becomes a Town.

The village of Merritton is to blossom out as a full-fledged town, though unseparated from the county of Lincoln, and will have full control over its streets. This was the decision of the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature after listening for nearly an hour to a warm argument between village and county representatives regarding the inclusion of Merritton's main street in the county roads system.

Manitoba's Loan to Veterans.

The Manitoba Government is loaning returned soldiers, who at present own land ready for cultivation and are anxious to swell the army of food producers, $2,500 to assist them in their efforts.

Victory for Women.

How the women first heard of the victory of their cause in the House of Lords is told by the London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, with the prefixed remark that it illustrates the typically British gift of "reducing all things, however wonder-working and unprecedented, to the ordinary prose of life." "The women who went to Parliament for the last stage of the bill," he says, "were addressed by the policeman on duty at the door with these words: 'Don't be afraid, ladies, you're sure to win.' They had to leave the chamber during the division and waited anxiously outside. Presently, before any of the lords had time to reach them, the door opened and the policeman beamed upon them. 'Ladies, you have won, hands down'."

Some Puns.

Two British soldiers went into a restaurant at Salonica and asked for Turkey with Greece, according to a foolishly-inclined contemporary. The waiter said: "I'm sorry, gentlemen, but I can't Servia," whereupon the Tommies cried, "Fetch the Bosphorus!" When that gentleman arrived and heard the complaint the manager said: "Well, gentlemen, I don't want to Russia, but you cannot Roumania." And so the poor Tommies had to go away Hungary.

The First Sea Lord.

Here is a limerick published recently in Table Talk concerning the pronunciation of the name of the new British First Sea Lord:

An Englishman whose name was Wemyss
Went crazy at last, so it seemyss,
Because people would not Understand that they ought
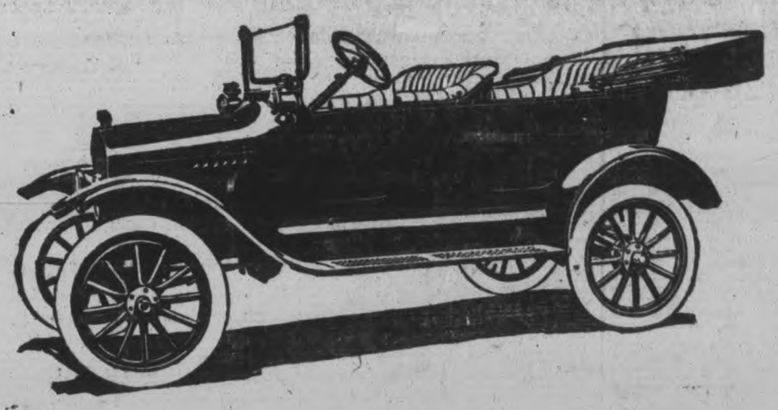
To call him, not Wemiss, but Weems.



A Ford Car Takes the Place of all These Things

WHEN you own a Ford you can do away with many articles that are a source of continuous expense to the man who still drives a horse. For instance, not only your driving-horse and buggy, but the single harness, blankets, whips, currycombs, brushes, horse-shoes, pitch-forks, feed-bins, etc.

In their place you have a speedy, dependable, dignified, roomy Ford Car—complete in itself. It is vastly superior to the narrow, cramped buggy that travels so slowly. And when a Ford is standing idle it does not eat three meals a day, and it requires no "looking after."

A Ford will save you time, trouble, and money. It is the utility car for the busy farmer and his family.

Really "Playing the Game."

When a soldier plays the game, he does things which it requires a braver man than himself to accomplish; he never knows when he's done; he acknowledges no limit to his cheerfulness and strength; whatever his rank, he holds his life less valuable than that of the humblest; he laughs at danger not because he does not dread it, but because he has learned that there are ailments more terrible and less curable than death.

Let the Cows Have Music.

We have it on the authority of a farmer in the state of Wisconsin that cows to which the phonograph, or gramophone, has been played while they are being milked have given two quarts of milk a day more than they ever did before. Professor Harker remarks upon this that cows will do a lot better if they are entertained and amused, and that a great deal depends upon their mood.

Work Requires Expert.

An herbarium is a collection of dried plants systematically arranged and named, for ready reference. If the work is well done the market value is good and the material in constant demand. The two classes of herbaria are kept separate, being the garden plants and the native or wild plants. Only an expert, and a careful one, may collect with hope of profit.

Friendship.

Friendship is a vase which, when it is flawed by heat, or violence, or accident, may well be broken at once; it can never be trusted after. The more graceful and ornamental it was, the more clearly do we discern the hopelessness of restoring it to its former state. Coarse stones, if they are fractured, may be cemented again; precious stones

Alcohol for Fuel.

A committee of Australian scientists is investigating the possibilities of commercial alcohol in place of gasoline as a fuel for internal combustion engines, notes a correspondent. They find that an engine can easily be run on alcohol and that its thermal efficiency, when so run, is somewhat higher than with gasoline fuel. However, they also find that alcohol must be far cheaper by the pound than gasoline, and somewhat cheaper by the quart, if it is to be as economical a fuel in terms of dollars and cents. Moreover, an engine will not start from a cold condition on alcohol.

I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is tweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or la grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size, 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

DUTCH HAVE CONSCRIPTION.

THE HAGUE, April 15.—The Government has introduced in Parliament a bill providing for the establishment of compulsory civilian service for the duration of extraordinary circumstances. The bill imposes this obligation upon all male citizens and all unmarried women or childless married women within the mother country between the ages of 17 and 60, with the exception of men in the naval or military service or persons included in specified exceptions. The bill empowers the government in case of war, to control all available hands and, at the present time, to compel all whose activities must not be suspended, lest the country's interests suffer, to continue such activities.

Red-blooded men of courage are on the firing line—and there are many anemic, weak, discouraged men and women left at home.

At this time of the year most people suffer from a condition often called Spring Fever. They feel tired, worn out, before the day is half thru. They may have frequent headaches and sometimes "pimply" or pale skin.

Bloodless people, thin, anemic people, those with pale cheeks and lips, who have a poor appetite and feel that tired, worn or feverish condition in the springtime of the year, should try the refreshing tonic powers of a good alterative and blood purifier. Such a one is extracted from Blood root, Golden Seal and Stone root, Queen's root and Oregon Grape root, made up with chemically pure glycerine and without the use of alcohol. This can be obtained in ready-to-use tablet form in fifty-cent vials, as druggists have sold it for fifty years as Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a standard remedy that can be obtained in tablet or liquid form.

WINDSOR, ONT.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and his 'Pleasant Pellets' are wonderful medicines for home use. I used to suffer with weak lungs, smothering spells and sick-headaches, but since I have taken the above mentioned medicines these conditions have left me.

"Such medicines as Dr. Pierce's are worthy of praise and I am very glad to add my testimonial to the thousands of others."—MRS. ELLEN HARDING, 11 Erie Street, West.

Effrontery Of Young Lady

placed in charge of the clerks, of whom the young lady in question is one, that unless such new chief, in the administration of office affairs would so comport herself as to gain the approbation of the half dozen minor clerks who were to serve under her, she (the new chief) would be quickly removed from office; and that this result of non-acceptance of the Bolshevik principles of office administration and acceptable action thereupon, would be brought about through the personal influence of the young lady over her father, and of her father over the Minister.

Further on Mr. O'Connor said: — "The young lady is one of several in the department with previous affiliations with the town of St. Thomas. The young lady has not been able to conceal her pride of birth. She has indeed ascribed to it a certain commercial value. It is hard for one who has been a politician to forget all the rules at once, try as one may, so conceiving that you might be embarrassed, politically, by impending events, I spoke to you and advised by you of what had been done, stating that all you need do, is to refer objectors to me. I must confess to considerable surprise at the results. I would not have mentioned the matter to you at all if St. Thomas had not been involved."

Placed on Equal Basis.

Canadian headquarters in London has abandoned the idea of different colors to distinguish service chevrons gained in France and those gained in England. Canadians are now permitted to avail themselves of the privilege granted by the Imperial authorities, which permits overseas troops without service at the front to wear chevrons dating from the day they left their homes for England, though the British troops may not wear them unless they have been at the front Canadians in France and England are now on an equal basis. Those who left Canada in 1914 are entitled to the coveted red chevron, and others who left subsequently are entitled to a blue chevron for every succeeding year or portion, whether at the front all the time or part, or not at all.

Becomes a Town.

The village of Merritton is to blossom out as a full-fledged town, though unseparated from the county of Lincoln, and will have full control over its streets. This was the decision of the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature after listening for nearly an hour to a warm argument between village and county representatives regarding the inclusion of Merritton's main street in the county roads system.

Victory for Women.

How the women first heard of the victory of their cause in the House of Lords is told by the London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, with the prefixed remark that it illustrates the typically British gift of "reducing all things, however wonder-working and unprecedented, to the ordinary prose of life." "The women who went to Parliament for the last stage of the bill," he says, "were addressed by the policeman on duty at the door with these words: 'Don't be afraid, ladies, you're sure to win.' They had to leave the chamber during the division and waited anxiously outside. Presently, before any of the lords had time to reach them, the door opened and the policeman beamed upon them. 'Ladies, you have won, hands down'."

Some Puns.

Two British soldiers went into a restaurant at Salonica and asked for Turkey with Greece, according to a foolishly-inclined contemporary. The waiter said: "I'm sorry, gentlemen, but I can't Servia," whereupon the Tommies cried, "Fetch the Hippocrenus!" When that gentleman arrived and heard the complaint the manager said: "Well, gentlemen, I don't want to Russia, but you cannot Roumania." And so the poor Tommies had to go away Hungary.

The First Sea Lord.

Here is a limerick published recently in Table Talk concerning the pronunciation of the name of the new British First Sea Lord:

Went crazy at last, so it seemyss,
Because people would not

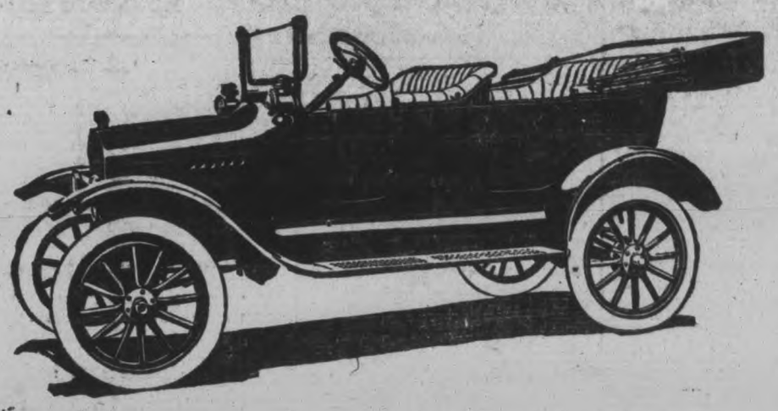
To call him, not Wemiss, but Weems.



A Ford Car Takes the Place of all These Things

WHEN you own a Ford you can do away with many articles that are a source of continuous expense to the man who still drives a horse. For instance, not only your driving-horse and buggy, but the single harness, blankets, whips, currycombs, brushes, horse-shoes, pitch-forks, feed-bins, etc.

In their place you have a speedy, dependable, dignified, roomy Ford Car—complete in itself. It is vastly superior to the narrow, cramped buggy that travels so slowly. And when a Ford is standing idle it does not eat three meals a day, and it requires no "looking after."

A Ford will save you time, trouble, and money. It is the utility car for the busy farmer and his family.

Really "Playing the Game."

When a soldier plays the game, he does things which it requires a braver man than himself to accomplish; he never knows when he's done; he acknowledges no limit to his cheerfulness and strength; whatever his rank, he holds his life less valuable than that of the humblest; he laughs at danger not because he does not dread it, but because he has learned that there are ailments more terrible and less curable than death.

Let the Cows Have Music.

We have it on the authority of a farmer in the state of Wisconsin that cows to which the phonograph, or gramophone, has been played while they are being milked have given two quarts of milk a day more than they ever did before. Professor Harker remarks upon this that cows will do a lot better if they are entertained and amused, and that a great deal depends upon their mood.

Work Requires Expert.

An herbarium is a collection of dried plants systematically arranged and named, for ready reference. If the work is well done the market value is good and the material in constant demand. The two classes of herbaria are kept separate, being the garden plants and the native or wild plants. Only an expert, and a careful one, may collect with hope of profit.

Friendship.

Friendship is a vase which, when it is flawed by heat, or violence, or accident, may well be broken at once; it can never be trusted after. The more graceful and ornamental it was, the more clearly do we discern the hopelessness of restoring it to its former state. Coarse stones, if they are fractured, may be cemented again; precious stones

Alcohol for Fuel.

A committee of Australian scientists is investigating the possibilities of commercial alcohol in place of gasoline as a fuel for internal combustion engines, notes a correspondent. They find that an engine can easily be run on alcohol and that its thermal efficiency, when so run, is somewhat higher than with gasoline fuel. However, they also find that alcohol must be far cheaper by the pound than gasoline, and somewhat cheaper by the quart, if it is to be as economical a fuel in terms of dollars and cents. Moreover, an engine will not start from a cold condition on alcohol.

ON THE MACEDONIAN FRONT AND OCCUPIED SEVEN TOWNS, WAR OFFICE REPORTS

Exemptions Of Men Between 20 And 23 Years Cancelled

Of the First Class Between Ages of Twenty and Twenty-three—Youths of Nineteen Must Register

ALLIED ALIENS TOO

OTTAWA, April 17.— The urgency of the demand for reinforcements to meet the emergency at the front, and the failure of the cumbersome machinery provided by the Military Service Act to supply these reinforcements quickly, have necessitated the virtual wiping out of the whole machinery of the act and the substitution at once of a direct call to the colours of all unmarried young men physically fit for military service between the ages of twenty and twenty-three. This drastic action, determined upon by the Cabinet Council and embodied in an order in Council to which Parliament's approval will be asked on Thursday, was communicated to the Government caucus this morning, and announced to the press by the Prime Minister last evening.

Of the Military Service Act, with all its cumbersome exemption machinery, practically nothing is left save the title. The principle of the Militia Act is substituted. The Minister of Militia is clothed with full authority to call out men by classes according to age, and with all exemptions heretofore granted under the Military Service Act automatically cancelled as soon as the men are called.

The First to be Called.

It is the intention to call out in the first instance unmarried men and widowers without children between the ages of twenty and twenty-three, both inclusive. It is believed that these young men can be spared with the least disturbance to agriculture and other essential industries. The calling out of men of other ages under the proposed order in Council must necessarily depend upon the exigencies of the war and the need for reinforcements.

Men of Nineteen Must Register.

In the meantime the Military Service Act will continue in operation as to all other men in Class 1, and as regards other classes under the act. Men of nineteen will be required to register without delay. Every effort shall be made to speed up the work of the Tribunals and Appeal Courts in dealing with the baalnce of exemption claims, outside, of course, of the men called out under the new order.

The order in Council not only makes all young men now 19 years of age subject to the provisions of the Military Service Act, but also all other young men as and when they attain the age of 19 years.

An Exemption Removed.

The order removes the exemption now enjoyed by officers and men who have served in the Expeditionary Forces, but who did not proceed farther than Great Britain and have since returned to Canada and been discharged. They will be required to serve if physically fit when their class is called.

Citizens of Allied Nations.

Certain treaties are now under negotiation with foreign Governments under which citizens of such Governments resident in Canada may be made liable to military service. Where any such treaty is concluded the order in Council gives the Government the power to call out the citizens of such country for service

THE BATTLE IN FLANDERS RAGING TO-DAY WITH INCREDIBLE INTENSITY

LONDON, April 17.—The battle in Flanders is raging to-day with incredible intensity, telegraphs the correspondent of Repter's in France. As far as the latest reports enable the correspondent to judge the battle is going in favour of the British.

Notwithstanding the desperate attacks of the Germans they have gained no further ground since Tuesday morning, and apparently they have lost some.

During his three years' experience in the war zone, the correspondent says he never has heard such terrific uninterrupted gunfire as has gone on since Tuesday afternoon.

THE BRITISH POSITIONS BEFORE YPRES HAVE BEEN WITHDRAWN

The Withdrawal Was Carried Out Deliberately and Without Interference by the Enemy—In Some Places the British Line Has Been Completely Restored.

BRITISH HAVE RE-CAPTURED METEREN

Canadian Press:

LONDON, April 17. — The British have recaptured Meteren, on the northern battle front, by a counter attack, it is announced officially.

The British positions before Ypres have been withdrawn to a new line. South of Arras the Germans were driven out of the British trenches, into which they had forced their way. Early this morning Germany artillery became more active south of the Somme.

The statement follows:

Yesterday evening we delivered successful counter attack in the neighbourhood of Wytschaete. At Meteren, also, our counter attack restored the situation, and the village remains in our hands. Throughout the afternoon and evening yesterday, repeated hostile attacks north of Bailleul were repulsed with loss to the enemy. Bodies of German infantry advancing in close formation, were caught under the fire of our troops at short range and suffered heavy casualties. We secured a few prisoners..

The enemy also endeavoured to develop an attack yesterday afternoon east of Robecq, following the bombardment already reported, but his advance was broken up by our artillery fire. In consequence of the progress made by the enemy on the Lys front, our troops holding our forward positions east of Ypres have been withdrawn to a new line. The withdrawal was carried out deliberately without interference by the enemy. On the battle front south of Arras, parties of German infantry who had entered our trenches opposite Boyelles, were driven out yesterday afternoon with the loss of several prisoners. Our line in this locality has been completely restored.

THE GERMANS ADVANCE.

LONDON, April 17.— According to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Paris, the Germans have advanced from Wytschaete as far as St. Eloi, and also have a grip on the southern slopes of Mount Kemmel.

City Teamsters Included In The 10 Per Cent. Wage Increase

Have Been Paid $5.00 a Day and Were Offered $6.25 By the Leonard Construction Company--Weller Street Residents Ask For Surface Drain—Mr. Juby's Garage Approved.

The city's teamsters were included by the Board of Works last night in the ten per cent. wage increase recently granted to the labourers. The teamsters have been receiving five dollars a day, and some of them were offered $6.25 by the Leonard Construction Co.

Mr. H. Evans, Street Commissioner, stated that he had three teamsters, in addition to the city's, working under the Board of Works.

A resolution by Alderman Saunders, seconded by Alderman M. McIntyre, recommended the increase of the teamsters' wages to $5.50 a day, beginning on Thursday, April 11th. The increase to the labourers is also retroactive to that date.

To Remove Trees.

City Engineer Parsons was given power to act on requests from Mrs. M. McMahon, 114 Robinson street, to remove a trees in front of her property, because it shades part of her garden and prevents the growth of vegetables, also from J. W. Edwards, who wishes to cut down a tree in front of his property at 190 Brock street.

A. H. Rishea, 141 George street, asked for a driveway into his lot, the third west of the G.T.R. on the south side of Romaine street. Mr. Parsons will bring in a report.

Want Surface Drain.

A petition from residents on Weller street asked that a surface drain be laid from a catch basin at the conjunction of Mr. Brock's and Mr. Lynch's properties to Homewood avenue, thence to Walton street, emptying into the old Edison drain. It bore the signatures of many citizens, among them W. R. Breyfogle, Alderman Worth, James Lynch, Duncan Walker and others. It was stated that Mr. Lynch would give permission for the laying of the drain through his property, providing it was along the line fence, in a position that would not interfere with a future building. The residents complained that the water remained too long on the street in spring, due to the lack of drainage.

Alderman M. McIntyre moved, seconded by Alderman Taylor, that the City Engineer bring in a report on the proposed drain.

Mayor Duncan expressed the wish that it be laid on some street if possible, thereby avoiding the use of private property.

Rental of Hoist.

City Engineer Parsons reported that Mr. J. E. Hayes had used the city's hoisting engine and cable 75 days which, at a charge of $1.50 a day, amounted to $112.50. It was used in the construction of the C.G.E. office. It was stated that Mr. Hayes regarded the charge as an exorbitant one, but Mr. Parsons explained that the engine had cost $757 and the cable $100. He suggested that the account be not reduced. it will be rendered as totalled. Mr. Hayes was reported to have said that he had not used the hoist every day.

Garage Approved.

Mr. J. Juby of Juby Brothers, grocers at 242 Charlotte street, told the Board that he was unaware that he was breaking the law when he commenced the building of a garage behind the billboard immediately east of his store. It is of corrugated iron and is practically completed. City Engineer Parsons told him that it encroached six feet on the street line. No building less than two storeys could be erected within twenty-five feet from the street. Alderman Edgar and Alderman Jones stated that they had seen the garage. It was fireproof, and entrance was from the rear and not directly off Charlotte street.

On a motion by Alderman Jones, seconded by Alderman M. McIntyre, the building was approved.

Mayor Duncan remarked that his only objection was that this would create a precedent of which other citizens might desire to take advantage.

Wytschaete Recaptured

WAR NEWS FROM ALL FRONTS

PARIS, April 17.—The famous Virgin, leaning from the Church tower, at Albert, has been destroyed. The figure has been overhanging the street since 1914, when the city was shelled by the Germans. There was a widespread superstition that when the statute of the Virgin, holding the figure of the infant Jesus, fell, peace would be declared.

BATTLE PLANE DESTROYED.

PARIS, April 17.—A German battle plane has been brought down between Crevecoeure and Le Grand Breteuil, about fifty miles north-west of Paris, officials announced to-day.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, April 17.—Heavy artillery fighting occurred last night on the principal battle front between the Somme and Oise, the War Office reports. The French carried out several raids, especially south west of Butte Dumesnil, in the region of Tahure and north of Flirey. On the right bank of the Meuse a German attack east of Samogneux was repulsed.

A Tremendous Crowd At The Spring Fair

This is the greatest opportunity you will likely have to obtain work of this kind.

Magistrate Saved Girl From Flames His Hand Burned

Magistrate Dumble was nursing a sore hand this morning. His injuries painful burns about the thumb and fingers, were sustained yesterday in extinguishing the flames which had ignited a little girl's dress. She had apparently been playing near a grass fire in the vicinity of Mr. Dumble's home, and in venturing too near the fire her clothing was ignited. Quick action by the Police Magistrate saved her from what might have been very serious injuries. But in making the rescue, His Worship paid the price by suffering very painful burns.

Re-capture Of Meteren Seriously Disarranges Hindenburg's Plans

Hindenburg's Efforts to Penetrate the Ypres Salient Have Now Become a Measure of Self Defense to Protect Dangerous German Salient.

THE WEAKEST LINK

(Special to Examiner.)
(By J. W. T. Mason, United Press.)

New York, April 17. — The British are recovering the initiative in the struggle for the hills south of Ypres. The recapture of Meteren by Marshal Haig indicates that Von Hindenburg's plans are being seriously disarranged. Instead of proceeding with his operations against Ypres from the south, Von Hindenburg has shifted his attacks to the east, where there are still more death traps for him in the hills.

The slight rearrangement in this area by the Bhitish suggests simply a tactical rearrangement which should present new difficulties for the Germans. Von Hindenburg continues his efforts to penetrate through the Ypres highlands from any direction at so heavy a cost in casualties has now become a measure of self-defence to protect a highly dangerous German salient to the east of the Nieppe forest.

WEAKEST LINK.

This salient is the weakest link in the new German front. Von Hindenburg is compelled to risk holding fast to it because it represents the nearest approach of the German line to the important British railway junction at Hazebrouck. The capture of Hazebrouck is Von Hindenburg's immediate objective as the most necessary preliminary step in his effort to reach the Channel ports.

In his latest effort to reach Hazebrouck, however, Von Hindenburg has come perilously near to overplaying his hand.

The British position here is a continuation of the British salient at Ypres. The two together form huge S turned upside down. The Ypres salient runs eastward into the German line in the upper half of the S and the Nieppe forest salient extends westward into the British line in the lower half of the S.

STRIKE NEAR NEIPPE.

If the British hold fast to Ypres the German front cannot be straightened. Any time that General Foch concludes the situation is critical he can strike near the Neippe salient with his reserves and doubtless bend it back. But to do this now while Von Hindenburg is so fierce and ferocious slaying his own men is probably not General Foch's plan. Von Hindenburg must be given all possible freedom first for self destruction.

WOULD HAVE THE LAW CHANGED

Motion Picture Owners Wait on Government.

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, April 17.—A deputation of moving picture owners waited upon J. T. White, Solicitor to the Treasury, at the Parliament Buildings yesterday afternoon, and asked that the Government should change the law so as to allow children to go to the movies unaccompanied by adults on Saturday afternoons and holidays. It was pointed out to the deputation, however, that for the sake of the children's welfare, there were many considerations which would make it seem the supervision of the children inside the theatre was necessary. Before any decision is reached by the Government it is likely that the views of a number of those who are interested in the work with children will be heard.

Bolo Pasha Was Executed This Morning

Condemned Traitor Lost His Attitude of Indifference When He Faced the Firing Squad

WORE WHITE GLOVES

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, April 17.—Standing before a firing squad in the forest of Vincennes early to-day, Paul Bolo Pasha, the condemned traitor, lost entirely the attitude of indifference he had maintained subsequent to and during his trial. When the order to fire was given, rifles spoke and Bolo crumpled up with several bullets in his head. The condemned man went to his execution in a new suit of clothes, brought to the prison by his brother, and wearing white gloves.

PETERBORO' LOOKS PEACEFUL AFTER WARLIKE OLD N.Y.

Mrs. Hillock daughter of the late Mrs. John Crossley formerly of this city, has returned here after 30 years' absence, for the funeral of her mother, which took place to-day.

Mrs. Hillock is struck by the unmilitary appearance of the city as compared with New York where, she says, all is war and everything done with one end in view—to aid the American and allied armies. Armies of girls are already replacing men on the street cars and every activity possible, and the girls are falling into their fields cleverly and willingly, and losing all awkwardness at first combatted with. The food problem under Hoover's administration is simplified and even sugar so scarce in the winter is procurable in reasonable quantities. Mrs. Hillock said that every man who can is busy storing coal in anticipation of another winter like last.

The Ships.

The harbour has been transformed into a confusing medley of strangely painted ships which remind one more or less of a company of clowns. All German and alien ships taken over have been painted, some to represent waves, others with the picture of two ships passing. The confusion to the onlooker is mystifying.

Cabarets Raided.

Cabarets and restaurants are constantly raided on the look out for Germans, who, posing as Americans, obtain information from soldiers.

ADVANCE CHECKED

Both Enemy Flanks Were Caught by the Full Force of the British Artillery and Machine Guns

HEAVY LOSSES

(United Press Service.)
3 O'Clock Despatch:
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 17.—Von Armin and Von Quast, continuing their drive toward Hazebrouck, are suffering heavy losses. Apparently the only enemy gains in the past 24 hours have been at Wytschaete, which was occupied during a blinding mist at dusk last night. British troops are reported advancing against Wytschaete, which probably will be retaken. South-east of Ypres the attempted enemy advance was shot down at short range. In retreating both enemy flanks were caught by the full force of the British artillery and machine guns.

From an elevation near Bailleul I watched the battle swirl throughout the afternoon. The area to the west was constantly pounded by high velocity and gas shells, while vapours drifted across cultivated fields. North-east of Bailleul, near Branoutre, Von Bernhardt's divisions attacked heavily at three o'clock in the afternoon. British guns tearing great holes in their ranks. By nightfall the British line seemed intact, while the sprouting fields were thick with dead.

Drastic Changes Will Be Made In Military Service Act

Minister of Militia May Call Out Any Men He Requires—Exemptions To Be Cancelled

Ottawa, April 17. — Drastic changes will be made in the Military Service Act. All exemptions to men between 20 and 23 will be cancelled, and they must report for duty. Other important changes are pending. The Minister of Militia may call out any men he requires.

DROP IN PRICE OF GASOLINE AT BANKS'

Mr. C. R. Banks of the Banks Garage, in a large advertisement of this evening's paper, announces a substantial reduction in the price of gasoline of 2 cents a gallon. The new price of 36 cents is for cash. Motorists buying on charge account will still pay 38c a gallon.

Mr. Banks is taking this step in order to try and eliminate the expense of the charge system, with all its attendant extra work and worry. In order to take advantage of this price it is not necessary to buy coupons or books, which one is likely to lose. Bring the money and get the benefit of the reduced price—that's all.

The above must be good news for motor car owners and others. While all other commodities keep soaring, going up, elevator fashion, it will be refreshing to all users to learn that gasoline can take a drop. This is the message Mr. Banks sends out to-night. Make the most of it—push it along.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 17TH, 1918.

THE NEW CALL.

That the cumbersome machinery of the Military Service Act which has failed to produce the expected results is to be practically abandoned and the principle of the Militia Act substituted, briefly describes the action decided upon by the Cabinet and upon which Parliament will be asked to express its approval to-mororw. All men from twenty to twenty-three years of age who are physically fit for service are to be called to the colours and all exemptions granted because of occupation or usefulness at home are to be cancelled. This should provide a large body of reinforcements at once, although food production will suffer unless some provision is made to replace the men called out by other men who are unfit for the firing line.

IN SUPREME COMMAND.

The announcement that General Foch has been appointed commander-in-chief of the allied armies in France, will be received with general satisfaction. Hitherto, although he has since March 25th, had the power to give instructions in regard to the strategy of the situation, the French General's jurisdiction has been limited to that po... alone. Now, however, he is in supreme command, the widest possible powers having been conferred upon him by the French and British Governments. His decisions in regard to the disposition of the allied forces, or to the leaders who shall command the differetn army groups, will be undisputed. The result will be that the British, French and American forces in France, will henceforth act as one united army, under the supreme command of a generalissimo who is considered the greatest strategist in Europe.

The announcment will be enthusiastically acclaimed—except in Germany.

WHY HE RESIGNED.

The publication of the correspondence between Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, and Mr. W. F. O'Connor in regard to the resignation of the latter, as Cost of Living Commissioner, gives no reason for any revision of the general belief that it would have been more to Canada's interests to have had the Minister of Labour resign than to lose the services of an energetic and fearless investigator like Mr. O'Connor. Although Mr. O'Connor points out that "there were other circumstances, ripe and ripening, which, in all likelihood would have rendered it necessary for me to retire sooner or later form the post which I held under you," the immediate cause of his resignation was that Hon. Mr. Crothers had placed in Mr. O'Connor's department a young lady from St. Thomas who boasted of the influence her father had with the Minister of Labour and used that influence to cause trouble in the department, being responsible for the dismissal of her immediate chief and following this by making threats against the latter's successor. The effrontery of this young lady, "unable," as Mr. O'Connor put it, "to conceal her pride of birth and ascribing to it a certain commercial value," is shown by her claim that through her father's influence with the Minister she was free of discipline except at the hands of Hon. Mr. Crothers. The result of her actions, Mr. O'Connor states, was that a previously perfect office mechanism was completely disorganized. Mr. O'Connor's appeal to the Minister to remedy this condition of affairs was futile, and there was nothing left for the Cost of Living Commissioner but to resign.

The circumstances as described by Mr. O'Connor add no new laurels to the career of Hon. T. W. Crothers. The people of Canada will be inclined to think that a shake-up is necessary in the Department of Labour.

CONSCRIPTION FOR IRELAND.

The seriousness of the war situation was strikingly illustrated by Premier Lloyd George yesterday—not only by his graphic portrayal of conditions as they are to-day, but by his announcement that conscription is to be extended to Ireland. This step has been withheld as long as possible, and that it has been decided upon at last shows that the emergency is a grave one, indeed.

That the decision will cause a storm of indignation in Ireland cannot be doubted, but throughout the rest of the British Empire the announcement will be received with satisfaction, and there will be general endorsation of the Premier's statement that "when an emergency had arisen which made it necessary to put men of 50 and boys of 18 into the fight for liberty it was not possible to exclude Ireland from conscription by a parliament in which Ireland was represented, and which had committed the country to war without a dissenting voice."

England, Scotland and Wales cheerfully accepted conscription, and have been drained of their young manhood. Canada and New Zealand have also accepted compulsory service. Ireland represents the only source of man power left comparatively untapped in the Empire, and the extension of conscription to the Emerald Isle will provide large drafts of splendid fighting men. No finer fighting has been done in this war than by the Irish regiments, and the Allies will welcome the introduction of a measure that will bring into the field more of these splendid warriors.

It is to be hoped that the first storm of opposition to the measure will soon blow over and that the Irish people will recognize the necessities of the situation and accept the service that is to be laid upon them.

They should recognize the truth of Lloyd George's statement that the character of the quarrel is as much Irish as it is English.

"SUPPORT AND SUBSTITUTION."

"Support and substitution" is a phrase that is being heard more and more, these days, on this side of the Atlantic. For more than a year its meaning has been realized in both England France and every month finds those nations coming nearer and nearer to a practical realization and cheerful acceptance of the duties involved in that meaning.

At the very basis of this new slogan lies the conviction that our men in the trenches must be supported by a constant and dependable stream of reinforcements. Men must be released from civilian life. Furthermore, our boys must be supported by a practically unlimited supply of ammunition which is up to standard in every particular.

The third item of support is food. This, too, must be of the best and unstinted. There must never be an anxious moment "over there" because of a possible shortage of food. If there is to be a shortage of food it must exist here in Canada, first. An unfailing supply of men, ammunitions and food constitutes the whole matter of support. From the very beginning of the war our men have been pleading for the first two things. They must plead no longer and, under no circumstances must they be forced to call our attention to the matter of food supply.

Support can be given only by substitution of labour. In each case the logical solution lies with the women of each nation. Already English and French women have done nobly. Canadian women are more than willing to do their share in this work which is, by far, the most important of any war work yet undertaken by women. Is it too much to say it is the most important work yet undertaken by either men or women?

Canadian women have already done much in munitions. Last summer found the pioneers in this substitution movement doing work on fruit farms and dairying. Gardening was also carried on successfully. The winter months have been devoted to preparation for a more vigorous substitution on the land. Practical farming has been studied, demonstrations attended, courses taken in poultry-raising, gardening and dairying. Like their English sisters Canadian women are training so that when the first call comes they can present themselves thoroughly equipped as to training.

It is interesting to note that in practically every instance the world over, where women have substituted on the land they have been accepted grudgingly by the farmer and parted with regretfully. In each case he has felt that he had drawn a lucky number in the wartime lottery and made special request to the committee that the same unusually efficient and valued workers be returned for the next season. In almost every instance it was the glowing patriotism of the girls that made their work excellent and praiseworthy.

The verdict of the farmers themselves at the end of their first season with "farmerettes" is that they are far superior to the typical "hired man" who is, too often, content to be simply "the man with the hoe." When told to do a piece of work the girls do it as directed and have no theories to offer. They expect to work and are careful of the materials. College girls apply the discipline gained through study, and the feeling that what they are doing is helping the men in the trenches carries the work to a successful finish.

Not all women can substitute by making munitions or doing land-service. But the talents of every woman can be substituted for the talents of some other woman and a grand interchange of work will result which in the aggregate supports the men overseas. The woman who cannot farm but is a model housekeeper can give her services in that line to the housekeeper who can farm. The one who can cook can contribute her services for those dependent on the cook who can also farm. The one with the training or instincts of the kindergarten can devote herself to the care of the children of the mother who can farm, and so on down the line of occupations and workers. The escape from farm work that may have become monotonous or even distateful to work that is congenial will be, in itself, a real test and recreation.

The city woman is as closely linked up to this system of substitution as the country sister. She can organize committees or whole campaigns, can conduct successful registration bureaus and place workers where they count for most. She can organize whole villages or country sides into co-operative living that will be real welfare work and pave the way for future nation-wide campaigns which must come later if life is to be lived as effectively and honestly as it hsould be.

The city woman who can demonstrate successfully could organize community canning centres and here again the gardener can give of his surplus, the worker of her leisure and a store of winter foodstuffs can be put by for the one who is forced to forsake home for a while and substitute in order to support. The one who is an expert caterer should find a place where her talents count for the utmost in conserving food even though she has never catered for her own family. Not one talent must be unused. Substitution is the great work from this time until the war ends. No one must claim exemption, and, in a very real sense, the one who substitutes must be supported while she in turn supports.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The darkest hour is before the dawn—trust to General Foch and the bravery of the British and French soldiers.

The abandonment of Ypres, although a sentimental loss, would not be a strategic disadvantage. Withdrawal from the salient was strongly urged by many leaders three years ago.

The capture of Messines Ridge by the enemy is one of the most important results so far achieved by their stupendous drive.

It will take a lot of saving through the new restaurant regulations to counter-balance the foodstuffs destroyed at the Harris Abattoir plant.

A Present III.

(London Bystander.)

A trouble-borrowing contemporary wants to know how girls are to find husbands after the war. But that isn't half as pressing a problem as the shortage of matches while the war is going on.

What is Needed.

(Hamilton Herald.)

It is quite right to make changes in the regulations of the Military Service act, such changes as will render it more workable. But there is an impression that the change most needed is the transference of the administration of the act from the department of justice to the department of militia. Under the justice department the act has not been enforced as it should have been, and it is very doubtful if it will ever be enforced satisfactorily by that department, no matter what changes may be made in the regulations.

Found at Home.

(Financial Post.)

With Mayor Martin returned for another term in Montreal we are reminded that Bolshevism is merely a Russian name for something which may be encountered much closer to home.

An Unfinished Mystery.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Mysterious are the workings of the food regulations. As the food allowances in the restaurants are cut down the prices go up.

Not a Record.

(Kingston Whig.)

As the result of one day's bombardment by the big German gun eight chickens were killed in Paris. We know a Kingston auto owner who has beaten this record, and he didn't have to go seventy miles away from home to do it either.

Why Not?

Liberty at Stake.

(New York Herald.)

Surely there is not in all Ireland a man or a woman who does not know that Irish liberty is at stake in this war, just as is the liberty of France, and America, the British Empire.

Air Fighting And Its Thrills

(BY CANADIAN OVERSEAS)

Every week in the war has its thrills and dangers, grave and much alike except in the air, where they begin with the handicap of being off the ground.

Fights in the air are so interesting to watch; the flying so marvellous that often the great danger is forgotten.

Air fighting is one of the phases which people back of the line may witness now and again, and the fights are as brief as they are unexpected.

One bright day right overhead came a curious dull tearing noise, as though the heavens were ripping, stopped suddenly then began again. It was apparent that it was the machine guns of aeroplanes high overhead, and almost immediately a number of these crafts came swiftly into sight out of the heavens. They seemed to drop down from the blue either into visibility, wheeling, dipping rising, circling all the time over each other like a flock of crows fighting on the wing.

A plane darted angrily towards another, spitting out white smoke and whistling bullets as it shot forward, and the other nimbly spun out of the way. Sometimes they fought in pairs, but at that height they looked like a confused mass, darting about so quickly that the eye could hardly follow their movements. The angry whirr of the propellers, the tearing bursts of fire and the faint white smoke amid which bullets sang noisily, aided one in keeping this rapidly moving flight located. While the planes thus went for each other, the anti-aircraft came into the game. Up from the ground sprang the shrieking challenges delivered in feathery puffs and flying spears of shrapnel, but the plane went vigorously on at it, paying not the slightest heed.

Further on along the sky line hung a balloon swaying and tugging at its cables, this evidently was what the Hun was after and our planes were straffing them. All at once the balloon ceased swaying and began to soar, one of the anti-aircraft projectiles had cut the cable. Away it went, sailing off in light-hearted freedom, carrying on its gay journey upwards a couple of unlucky souls to whom the "break away" meant facing one of the hardest ordeals a man can run up against, for they would have to jump clear.

It disappeared into the clouds thousands of feet up. From the point where it vanished first one speck, then another came dropping from the clouds. For some couple of hundred feet they fell like dead weights, then the parachutes opened and the specks revealed as men were steadied in their course, floating rapidly but to the ground. Before leaving the balloon they had destroyed papers and instruments, then clambered over the side of the basket and leaped for life, the great void beneath them, trusting that their parachutes would open when they should.

One can scarcely imagine that desperate spring into the vast grey nothingness beneath; the feelings of the men as they made it, uncertain of what would happen; the terrible sensation of casting oneself blindly from such an appalling height, trusting entirely to a parachute. Then there is always the anxiety as to where one will land. The man has little or nothing to do with it. He may come down in a good spot or he may strike a house, a tree, water or even enemy territory.

In this case a good landing was made, landing on all fours, but no doubt after the experience they would need a short period of rest.

Another interesting aspect of this work is bombing, and bombs are not thrown promiscuously as some believe. The ordinary person has a rough idea of bombing raids, and refer to the throwing of his bombs. But the bombs are not casually thrown. Bombing from the air is most systematic. If an aerodrome, waterway, munition factory or some other small object has to be bombed aerial photographs with special cameras take many photographs of the object. It is frequently necessary to descend very low amid violent gunfire to take them, and hurry out of range of anti-aircraft guns and away from attacking aeroplanes. "Camouflage" is very extensively practised. Sheds, works and stores are skilfully covered with trees and turf or painted with sufficient eccentricity to satisfy futurist ideas, an art which the Hun has copied from the Allies.

Positions on the photographs are marked and the bombers know where and what they have to hit. There is necessarily a fair percentage of "misses," but with considerable experience an airman becomes a remarkably good shot.

When a bomb is released it travels forward at the same speed as that at which the aeroplane is travelling, and its descending path is curved for some distance until it takes a straight path downwards. With a craft moving at a hundred miles an hour great skill and care are necessary to hit an object. Air currents and cross winds have a great effect on the course of a bomb and often spoil what would otherwise be a successful aim. No photographs are necessary for a raid on a big town as they can easily be found. Such a raid is carried out by a number of machines, and our airmen never hesitate to descend with severe gunfire to make sure their effort is not in vain. Very often local fogs and mists hide that which has to be bombed, but the pilots go at them just the same.

After a raid the photographers set to work again and take pictures of the damaged places. Sometimes photographs are taken as the bombs explode. Thus miscalculations can be guaged and some pilots have been known to return to their quarters for more bombs to correct their errors.

The danger of being shot down or crashing from other reasons, is always present and a "crash" is a daily occurrence in the air service. Some have most miraculous escapes, others do not. Some who have come down in a "spinning nose-drive" will tell you of a whirling, dizzy feeling ,then oblivion, no sensation of fall, no shock, their next consciousness of existence beginning with "where am I" in a hospital ward.

Others have different sensations and realize to the end what is happening. They mechanically do all that is possible to right their machine, but see the earth getting nearer and nearer with great rapidity and they realize that they are in for it. But even some of these in some miraculous way get off fairly well.

Sometimes you hear, "Poor old so-and-so," he's lost the best thing he had—his nerve," and there are many such in the flying service. They are to be found on ground duty at flying stations; their nerves for flying have given out. They are by no means all victims of "crashes." They just come, and a pilot will confess having "cold feet, when to outward appearances he is perfectly fit. The whole thing is mental; no twitching of the hands or eye lids. They have lost confidence in themselves and the idea of flying terrifies them, and they want rest—which they get, for otherwise it would mean one pilot and one machine less.

The nerve strain of flying is enormous, but people who are "full out" and really fond of going up are not constantly aware of it, fortunately. So long as a man "does not notice" that he is flying and feels quite at home in the air, his nerves are all right. As soon as he begins to think about it they are wrong.

Very few can fly constantly, year after year, and sooner or later most flyers go "mouldy." There is one man famous as one of the earliest seaplane experts who seldom goes up now, and when he does he is almost afraid to "bank." There is another who was a celebrated star, he has never had a crash, but has "gone stale" and now does with the greatest caution "the stunts" which formerly he performed with the most brilliant dash and daring.

The great difficulty is that nearly always a pilot who is temporarily excused flying does not get back his old form, and though a man who has been off with "cold feet" for a time may go back and still be a useful flier, he is seldom his old self in the air. He thinks too much and that is fatal. They reach the stage of being frightened to get up, and look out of doors in the morning lest it be a fine day and they would have to fly over the lines. This is not cowardice or shirking but merely nerves, and that is the kernel of the whole thing.

"THEY SHALL NOT WANT"

In a moment of inspiration an advertising man recently hit upon the above four words as epitomizing the desire and determination of the people of Canada that the Armies of the Allies and the suffering peoples of the Allied nations of Europe shall be supplied with all that Canada can possibly furnish of the food stuffs necessary for their support in the energetic and successful prosecution of their struggle for the defeat of tyrannical Prussian aspirations.

Compressed in this little sentence is more real throbbing meaning than most full pages of printed matter contain. In sixteen letters it expresses the determination of a people that a great cause must be sustained at no matter what personal sacrifice.

"They shall not want."

How aptly these words also express the attitude of the NORMAL, HEALTHY-MINDED MAN towards, those who under our social system, naturally look to him for support and protection. As he thinks of the wife who has entrusted her future to his care and of the children whom he has brought into the world, his thought and determination is "THEY SHALL NOT WANT."

This is always the attitude of the normal, healthy-minded man who is willing to sacrifice, if need be, to attain this noble end.

A policy in the Sun Life of Canada provides the safest and most economical means of fulfilling this noble desire and determination and incidentally, if fortunately in time this mode of protection is no longer necessary he may himself reap the benefits of his savings and thrift.

Thus virtue has its own reward.

A FEW GOOD WARM SHOWERS WOULD HELP FALL WHEAT AND CLOVER

Farmers Are a Little More Optimistic This Week--What Peterborough County Farmers Have to Say--Report of the Department of Agriculture.

A number of farmers, interviewed this morning regarding the crop situation, were found to be a little more optimistic than they were a week ago. The April crop bulletin issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, has the following to say under the heading of "April Crop Bulletin":

Wintering Crops.

Although most farmers who grow winter wheat had intended to increase their acreages last fall, the late harvest and the scarcity of help kept the area sown to about that of the preceding year. Considerable of the crop had hardly enough top to enter the winter satisfactorily, although otherwise the young plants appeared to be vigorous. After the snow cleared off, the nightes continued very cold, and the crop suffered from the alternate freezing and thawing of the unprotected fields. The present appearance of the young wheat is not encouraging, most of the fields being more or less brown and patchy, and all of them standing in need of good spring rains, as the latter part of March and the early days of April were cold and clear, with practically no rain, while frequent winds helped to make the ground exceedingly dry for the season. A few good warm showers may help the crop to pick up, but the general opinion is that a good deal of drilling in of spring grains will be necessary, and also some ploughing up of portions of the fields; in fact some reseeding has been done already. In those counties in Eastern Ontario where fall wheat is raised it has done better relatively than in the western counties where the crop is more largely grown.

Winter rye has also suffered injury by the trying spring weather, but not to so great an extent as the wheat.

Clover, however, has come through better than either wheat or rye. While some heaving has been reported, and while looking sick in places, the general appearance of the fields is encouraging considering the rather unfavourable spring for young crops wintering over. As correspondents reported the crop was needing rain in order to receive a good spring start.

What Local Farmers Say.

T. D. Young, of North Monaghan, says: "We are at present putting in spring wheat. The land does not seem to be very dry, although rain would be very helpful. Both the fall wheat and clover were very poor and some of it will have to be ploughed up again. We will have about the same acreage this year as last year.

Jas. Seymour, Cavan township, Mr. Seymour says the land was never in better shape for the crops than it was last year. Already he has his spring wheat in and is preparing to put in the oats. His clover was very good and the wheat would have been good, too, if it had not been for the cold spell the week before last. All around the situation is better this year except for the fall wheat. We have a farm of 200 acres and we cannot get help.

Ernest C. Harper, Smith township, says: The ground is very dry and we are in need of rain. All of our grain is in though no garden work will be attempted for a while yet. We have planted more wheat this year than last. Our timothy and clover turned out good, it was better than we expected.

V. A. Fife, Smith township, says: Although we haven't started our spring work yet, we intend to start to plough next week. Our fall wheat and clover turned out very good, and especially our clover. The frost killed very little of the wheat. We cannot sow more grain this year on account of the lack of help, although we would like to.

Daniel Hayes, Otonabee township, says: We have just commenced our spring work this week, and we found the land very dry owing to the lack of rain. The fall wheat is absolutely ruined as is also a great deal of the clover seed. We will not be able to have a large acreage than last year.

City Will Keep A Record Of Sales Of Coal By Local Dealers

Ald. Dobbin is Fuel Commissioner and Will Supervise the Registration of All Coal Deliveries---Ald. McIntyre Regarded It As An Unnecessary Expense.

In a discussion on the advisability of engaging office assistants to keep a record of the coal sales in Peterborough this year, Alderman Langford and Alderman Jones injected sufficient decision into last night's meeting of the Council to strengthen the opinions of a majority of the aldermen in favour of this innovation.

"If we repeat last year's blunders," said Alderman Langford, "we will have no excuse to offer the public. Let us start to do all we can to register the quantity of coal brought into the city and also the sales. We will then know who got it."

"The sooner we make a start in this work the better," added Alderman Jones.

Mayor Duncan had introduced the subject, offering the Council an opportunity to make the appointment the Fire, Water and Light Committee had evaded.

"What good is this information if you had it?" aswed Alderman Malcolm McIntyre. "Isn't there a law that the dealers have to follow?"

Alderman Weir, who also opposed the appointment of office assistance, stated that a dealer who sold a citizen more coal than the new law permitted was liable to a fine of $500 or six months in jail.

"If the citizen lies about the quantity he has bought, he is also liable to a fine," added Alderman Weir, who on this question has exhibited a trust in human nature that is almost divine.

Some one remarked that the people wanted to know where the coal was delivered, and esnecially that no citizen obtained more than he was entitled to, without depending on their honesty.

Mayor Duncan stated that even now dealers were sending out coal without a card system of registration. The R. Hicks Co. was issuing cards to customers, but this was the only company reported by the Council.

"It will be a lot of expense," Alderman M. McIntyre insisted. "Let it go till fall."

Alderman Jones moved, seconded by Alderman Edgar that Alderman Dobbin be authorized to engage whatever help he will require, also to buy a card system and other supplies, for the inauguration of a system of recording sales of coal to citizens.

Alderman M. McIntyre and Alderman Weir proposed an amendment that no action be taken, but they alone voted for it. The motion carried.

Appointed Fuel Commissioner.

Alderman Dobbin was appointed Fuel Commissioner for the city with the passing of by-law 2097.

WANT TO ERECT FENCE.

A letter from the Henry Hope Co. sought permission to erect a wire fence in front of their factory, close to the sidewalk and in line with the city's guard rail, which extends south from the corner of Romaine street.

Ald. Weir objected that this fence would encroach six or eight feet on city property, and would create a troublesome precedent.

City Engineer Parsons was instructed to bring in a report on this request and also on a suggested encroaching fence Mr. Wm. Snowden intends to build on his property at the corner of Dalhousie and Reid streets.

CONTEMPLATES CANAL OPENING.

J. H. Burnham has sent three telegrams to the Council urging the city to advertise the final opening of the Canal, when it is opened, and that the Minister of Railways and Canals be invited here for the opening, as soon as it is announced. These communications were referred to the Manufacturers' and Reception Committee, respectively.

SEWER FOR HENRY HOPE FACTORY.

The Board of Health's recommendation that a sewer be laid on Monaghan road from De Laval street to Romaine street, and on Romaine street to Park Street, was included with other works that are to be advertised for this summer.

MAY TENDER TO SWEEP STREETS.

Replying to the Council's invitation for quotations on cleaning the paved streets this year, Mr. W. H. Hamilton, president of the Dominion Dustless Sweepers, Limited, stated it was impossible to give any definite answer now. Several promising prospects may develop in the near future, but the company may present a tender for the work in two weeks.

SEEDS FROM EATON CO.

Ald. Edgar drew attention to the fact that the Board of Education bought from the T. Eaton Co. the seeds distributed among the school children for the greater production campaign. It was a small matter, he said, but he felt that the citizens' money should be spent among the taxpayers.

BUILDING BY-LAW.

The Special Committee appointed to revise the Building by-law, presented their report to the Council last night, as follows:

"We have gone over the By-law prepared by the City Engineer, and it will be submitted to you for approval as revised by the Committee, as soon as it has been re-written.

"We directed the City Engineer to procure prices on the printing of 100 copies of the By-law and also of 200 copies."

Ald. Edgar, chairman of the Committee, stated that a great deal of time had been spent in discussing the by-law, but its practicability could be tested only by applying, and recommended that it be put into operation at once.

The by-law will be taken up by the Council in the near future, and Ald. Edgar warned the Alderman that it would be no small task.

WILL WRITE FOR DEED.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Weir, that the Clerk write the G.T.R. for a deed of a strip of land on Bonaccord Street.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

McFARLANE NOW LIKE A NEW MAN

Was "All In" When He Started on Tanlac—Can Do As Much Work Now As He Ever Did

I am feeling so fine since taking Tanlac that I am boosting it to all my friends, said Harry T. McFarlane, an employee of the Rudd Paper Box Company, who lives at 182 Mutual street, Toronto, recently.

"Up to about five or six months ago," he continued, "I was in very good condition, then my health began to fail and I soon felt like I was going to pieces. I lost my appetite and the little I forced down disagreed with me and seemed to do me no good. My liver seemed to be sluggish and inactive, I was very billious and felt so tired and listless all day that it was all I could do to get through my work. My nerves were so unstrung that I seldom got any restful sleep at night, I had no life nor energy at all and was jus tabout all in when one of my friends urged me to try Tanlac.

"Well, I have taken two bottles in all and they have sure fixed me up so I feel like a new man. My appetite has returned and I can eat and enjoy all my meals without having any trouble with my digestion. Tanlac has cleared my system of billiousness and that tired, listless feeling is all gone. My nerves are stronger. I sleep fine every night and get up in the morning full of life and energy and ready for my work and I am able to do a good day's work now without getting all tired out and exhausted like I did before. Tanlac was exactly the thing I needed, for I have never taken any medicine that did me so much good."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Denike. In Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd. In Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Sapper V. Leahy Was Hit By Bomb

Chum of Late Sapper Leahy Speaks of Deceased as a "True and Honest Pal"

Miss Elizabeth Leahy has received the following letter from Sapper J. Colhoun, in regard to the death of her brother, Sapper V. Leahy, who died of wounds, in France, Oct. 28:

Purfleet Camp,
Essex, England.
Feb. 24th, 1918

Dear Miss Leahy,—No doubt you have thought me pretty mean for not writing before this, concerning your brother's death, but it was only yesterday I received your address in a letter from Miss Patterson of Toronto, dated Nov. 22. It went to France and then to England and as I had been in several hospitals there it took it some time to get from one place to another.

I am sorry that I cannot give you the desired information regarding poor Vince's death, as I was in England at the time. The last time I saw him was on the 19th of August, as I was admitted to the hospital that day with trench fever. I arrived in England on Sept. 2. Until that time we were always together and often talked about old times in Toronto and lived in hopes of seeing it again.

Some time in October I had a letter from him saying that he wished he was in England with me. I wished it, too. Of course we wanted to be together. I am sorry to state that was the last letter, for shortly afterwards I had a letter from a chum saying that Vince was severely wounded. I waited anxiously for further news, and the following day I received another letter bearing the sad news of Vince's death. Needless to say, I was all in. I felt it more, not being with him at the last.

It was then late in November so I wrote Miss Patterson and sent her the letter I had received telling me how he met his death. I asked her to forward the letter on to you to convey to you all my most sincere sympathy in the loss of our brother.

He was a "true and honest pal," and his cheerful disposition made him a general favourite in the Company. I sadly miss him, especially when I go back to France, and that will be before long.

As far as I know of how he met his death was when the Company were lined up at the cook house after supper, a German 'plane came over and dropped some bombs. Unfortunately, he was one of the boys that was hit.

ALICE JOHNSON—In "You're in Love," at "The Grand" next Tuesday.

Canada Will Get Coal Allotment

16,000,000 TONS ASSURED BY THE UNITED STATES, SAYS SIR GEORGE FOSTER.

TO SOLVE FUEL PROBLEM.

Ottawa, April 16.—"If things go on ordinarily well and the transportation difficulties are not so great as last year, Canada will receive her allotment of 16,000,000 tons of coal from the United States this year," Sir George Foster assured the House of Commons to-day, in closing a discussion precipitated by J. E. Armstrong, the member for East Lambton.

The Minister of Trade and Commerce said that the Fuel Controller, C. A. Magrath, was doing his utmost to bring about an increase in the domestic output of coal, but frankly stated that that official should be given larger powers to deal with that aspect of the fuel situation. At present Mr. Magrath was primarily concerned with the securing of the normal allotment of coal from the United States and its equitable distribution in Canada.

Sir George also informed the House of the arrangement made by the Dominion Government with the Governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan for the establishment of a plant for the briquetting of lignite near Estevan, Sask. An experimental plant would at first be installed and if it proved a success the government would decide whether or not it would continue the manufacture of briquettes for the market or leave the industry to be developed by private capital.

TOPOGRAPHY OF THE COUNTRY IN THE PRESENT BATTLE AREA

Several Peaks Dominate Country Over Which Hindenburg Armies Are Striving to Advance—A Difficult Job.

ENENY DIGGING IN

Special to The Examiner:
Ten O'Clock Despatch—
(By Wm. Philip Simms).
(United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 17.—From the Flemish flatlands south-west of Ypres, rise a group of more or less independent hills like pimples on an otherwise smooth face, through which runs the France-Belgian frontier. These peaks dominate both the Belgian and French Flanders. Toward these Hindenburg is directing his offensive. Von Armin's sixth army was hurled against the British left flank here yesterday, and the fourth army was sent against Mont Kemmel (two and a half miles west of Wytschaete), which is the easternmost height after Wystchaete Ridge.

Mnt Kemmel rises four hundred feet above sea level, and to the north-west rise Mont Scherpenberg (one mile northwest of Mont Kemmel) and to the westward are Mont Rouge and Mont Noir (about two miles west of Mont Kemmel). Westward of these are Mont Kokereele and Mont De Cats (all within eight miles of each other.)

To the northwest, west and south-west the Flemish plains stretch out as flat as a table scarcely above sea level. Storming these crests will be the most difficult job, and it remains to be seen whether Hindenburg will dare to attempt it. Southward from Merville to La Bassee it is apparently quiet and it is believed the Germans are digging in. Prisoners declare the Germans are still eyeing Hazenbrouck.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Hainge, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr.Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days."

GREEK FORCES OCCUPY VILLAGES

BRITISH OCCUPIED IMPORTANT POSITION ACCORDING TO OFFICIAL REPORT.

(Special to Examiner.)

London, April 17.—Greek forces crossed the Struma River, above Lactahinos, this morning, and occupied Bejlikmah, Kakaraska, Salmah, Kispeki, Ada, and villages to the northwest, according to an official report from British headquarters at Saloniki received to-day. The British occupied Kumli-Osmanli.

The Peterborough Y.M.C.A. Has Made Big Contribution

The local Y.M.C.A. has made a big contribution to the Association movement in the number of men who have received their training here, and who have gone out into Association work. A number of these are occupying important positions in Y.M.C.A. military work, and a number of men who have served as executive officers are also now engaged in military work and filling important positions.

The following received their training in the membership of the Y.M.C.A., Peterboro.

Captain E. M. Best, chief of Y.M.C.A. staff in France

J. M. Lang, Financial Secretary, Y.M.C.A. National Council.

Captain A. H Pearson, who was the first to establish Y.M.C.A. work in France and who did such fine pioneer work that the war office was convinced of the service that could be rendered by the Y.M.C.A.

Horace Ayers, who is now Dr. Ayers, connected with the New York Y.M.C.A.

F. Trollope, Physical Director.

W. S. Maguire, Secretary of the Brandon Y.M.C.A.

Captain T. H. Hutchinson, Y.M.C.A.

G. L. Galley, Secretary of Base Hospital, Toronto.

D. Lewis and S. Hall, sergeants, now in France.

H. Dobson, Religious Work Secretary, Exhibition Camp, Toronto.

W. Petley, on staff of the Broadview Y.M.C.A., Toronto.

H. Fair, on the staff of the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A.

H. Copp and A. McLeod, serving on the staff of the local Association.

J. J. Thompson, Military Secretary Exhibition Camp, Toronto.

A. A. Hainsworth, Y.M.C.A., military work in Egypt.

G. A. Carson, Y.M.C.A. work in England.

This is a proud record for any Association and the work accomplished is shown in results such as these.

"YOU'RE IN LOVE"

Another Hammerstein Offering Here Next Tuesday

Arthur Hammerstein, who gave the amusement public such amazingly fine entertainments as "Katinka," "High Jinks" and "Firefly," has justly earned the exalted opinion of theatre-goers, therefore the announcement with reference to "You're in Love," his freshest offering, will undoubtedly receive proper and substantial consideration at the Grand Opera House next Tuesday, April 23, are taken as a perfectly safe guarantee.

"You're in Love," while possessing all the diversified qualities of a musical comedy on a pretentious scale, is reared upon a plot replete with farcical situations and affords opportunities for some very interesting comedy acting, which Mr. Hammerstein has amply provided for, at the same time his thoughts have run to the popular demand for singing and dancing numbers, of which "You're in Love" is said to be overflowing. In the extra large company are Miss Edna Pendleton, Marguerite Strasselle, Alice Johnson, Raymond Crane, W. H. White, Ralph Whitehead, Harry T. Hanlin, Billy Cotton and Maxson and Brown, the celebrated eccentric dance team.

EXEMPTIONS CANCELLED

as members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force in the same manner as British subjects.

Shall Number be Raised?

The number of men the Government is authorized to raise under the Military Service Act remains at 100,000. Whether or not Parliament will be asked to increase this number before the House prorogues depends entirely upon developments at the front and the prospective need for reinforcements.

The Only Exemptions.

The Minister of Militia is given authority to grant exemption in the class called to young men who have relatives at the front. This, outside of physical unfitness, is absolutely the only recognized ground for exemption, it being considered that in view of the exigencies of the military situation there are no men in Canada between the ages of 20 and 23 who are indispensable.

Parliament Will Promptly Consent.

It is certain the Parliament's consent to the new regulations will be promptly given. The consent of the Government majority was obtained this morning. From now on there will be strong-handed action and quick results. The Military Service Act has really produced only about 20,000 in about six months. The hundred thousand men wanted are wanted quickly, and as the order in Council recited, "time does not permit examination by exemption tribunals of the value in civil life or the position of the individuals called up for duty."

Old Process Reversed.

The old order is to be reversed. The men are now to be called up, and exempted afterwards in exceptional cases, instead of calling them only after the exemption process of the selective draft with all its consequent delays has been operated.

Exemptions Wiped Out.

While the existing processes of the Military Service Act will be continued for the present in regard to unmarried men over twenty-four years of age and draftees will still be secured as rapidly as possible from Class 1 over that age, the immediate and practical result of the new regulations will be that all the exemptions now granted, except for physical unfitness, to young men within the ages of twenty and twenty-three in that class will be wiped out and they will be drafted at once, irrespective of their present civil occupations. The only important exceptions will be in the case of those who were exempted because other members of their families have been already killed or disabled on active service.

The Government hopes that the calling of these young men will not jeopardize food production to any material extent, and believes that in any case the exigencies of the situation demand the short cut to securing men immediately. If later on it is found necessary to call up Class 2 it is understood that married men between nineteen and twenty-four will be subject to the first call.

In Hands of Militia Minister.

In effect the new regulations put the whole discretion and responsibility for determining who shall be called, and when they shall be called, upon the Cabinet Council acting through the Minister of Militia, instead of confining the drafting to the limits and methods prescribed by the Military Service Act acting through the Minister of Justice.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

A U. S. Opinion.

Former Health Commissioner Says Nuxated Iron

Should Be Used in Every Hospital and Prescribed by Every Physician—Attributes His Own Great Physical Activity Today at Over 60 years of Age Largely To His Personal Use of Nuxated Iron.

WHAT FORMER HEALTH COMMISSIONER KERR SAYS

"As Health Commissioner of the City of Chicago, I was importuned many times to recommend different medicines, mineral waters, etc. Never yet have I gone on record as favoring any particular remedy, but I feel that in Nuxated Iron an exception should be made to the rule. I have taken Nuxated Iron myself and experienced its health-giving, strength-building effect, and in the interests of the public welfare, I feel it my duty to make known the results of its use. I am well past my three-score years and want to say that I believe that my own great physical activity is due largely today to my personal use of Nuxated Iron, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the wonderful tonic benefits which I have received, I shall feel greatly gratified that I made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending it. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron, I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

Wm. R. Kerr.

Former Health Commissioner, City of Chicago

Former Health Commissioner Kerr has given years of his life fighting for public health in his own and other cities. It was he who introduced Anti-toxin for Diphtheria in Chicago's Health Department. He purified the milk for the Consumers and thereby helped to save the lives of thousands of babies. He introduced the anti-spitting ordinance which has been copied all over the country and also took care of the sewers and garbage in the interest of public health. He is positive that the widespread use of Nuxated Iron would greatly lessen the worries and troubles of Health Commissioners in keeping up a high standard of public health.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by former Health Commissioner Kerr with such surprising results, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by McDermid & Perry and other druggists.

Quick, Harmless Way To Remove Wrinkles

Springtime brings wrinkles to many sensitive skins that are much exposed to winds and changing temperatures. To make an effective wrinkle remover, mix an ounce of powdered saxolite and a half pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in the solution—immediately every wrinkle is affected. It acts wonderfully on sagging facial muscles, also, the lotion possessing remarkable astringent and tonic properties. Use it once a day for a while and see how it will improve your facial contour.

This simple lotion cannot harm the most delicate skin. The treatment itself leaves no trace—no one guesses the secret of your increasing youthful appearance. But be sure to ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite.

YOUNG LADIES AWARDED PRIZES.

The citizens of Lindsay contributed generously to the bazaar, which is being held in Peterborough this week by the Sisters of Mount St. Joseph, and upwards of $200 was Lindsay's share of the contribution. The sale of tickets caused much competition among some of the young ladies of St. Joseph's Academy, who were awarded prizes for the best results.—Lindsay Post.

EARTH'S SOUNDS GO HIGH.

Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, made many balloon ascensions in the pursuit of his science, and in one of his journels gives some interesting illustrations of the heights at which sounds from the earth are heard. The Manchester Guardian quotes him as saying the shout of a man was heard distinctly at the height of 1,600 feet; the sharp note of a mole cricket at 2,500 feet, and the croaking of frogs in a morass at 3,000 feet. At 3,255 feet a man's voice and the rolling of a cart were distinguished; at 4,500 feet the roll of a drum and the music of an orchestra; at 5,000 feet the crowing of a cock, the sound of a church bell, and sometimes the shouting of men and women. Nine hundred feet higher still be heard the report of a musket and the barking of a dog. The noise of a railway train penetrated to a height of 8,200 feet, and the whistle of a locomotive engine to nearly 10,000 feet.

England.

(Chicago Evening Post.)

Trust the battle line of England, the Indomitable! Of all the peoples of history, none more than the English have shown the strength that comes in the fight with back to the wall. The last ditch is where England fights best, and there she will fight best today if forced so it by the most tremendous military pressure the world has ever known. Thank God our boys are fighting at her side, even if it be but a few of them! May they carry to her the assurance of our faith and glory in her. May they sweep aside the ancient prejudices that have made us grudge England her fair meed of trust and honour.

HEART WAS BAD NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then finally comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, some as bad as I was, and to-day they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

In the last game the result was in doubt until the last frame, the Vimys losing out by sixteen pins. JESS WILLARD BEGINS GRIND.

Jess Willard began training in Chicago this week. The champion did some rope-skipping, shadow-boxing and a little bag-punching, then boxed four rounds with Reb Russell. The champion rapidly admitted he is in anything but good condition.

It did not take long to bring out the perspiration on the big fellow, and he puffeffd hard when the boxing was at an end. Russell walloped him several times in the stomach, and Jess admitted the punches stung.

"How easy it is for a fellow to get out of condition," said Willard. "I naturally believed it wouldn't take much to work myself into shape, but I can now see that it will necessitate a lot of hard work to get me into condition. I need a lot of running and boxing."

SIDEWALK ELEVATOR FOR THE PETERBOROUGH CREAMERY

Granted on Same Terms as that for the Turnbull Building.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie sought permission from the Council last night to instal a sidewalk elevator in front of his factory, the Peterborough Creamery, on Aylmer street. It will occupy only six inches of the width of the sidewalk, the rest of the opening falling beyond the sidewalk line. Ald. Langford moved, seconded by Ald. Jones, that Mr. Gillespies' request be granted on the same conditions under which the sidewalk elevator for the Turnbull Company was sanctioned.

THE MOTOR SHOW PARADE WAS A BIG SUCCESS

The Big Show Opened Last Evening With One of the Largest Parades on Record—Large Attendance at the Show—The Fashion Show.

Practically all Peterborough turned out last night for the motor parade and show, and a good percentage wound up at the show to spend the evening. From the opening hundreds thronged through and about the gay booths, where the ladies and gentlemen in charge were kept busy explaining and selling what they had. Great interest centred in the Red Cross exhibit or imitation hospital booth.

One busy spot was the fish pond, where the juvenile additions to any party were dispensed with to enjoy themselves thoroughly. The tea room was also an attraction in itself and here No. 32 was the lucky holder of the right ticket on the fern, 82 for the bag of flour. Eighty-two is still unidentified. At the raffle booth No. 7 won the auto tire.

The "Fashion Show," the most daring enterprise of the young ladies of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E., was most positively the centre of attraction at the Motor Show last night. Twelve of the prettiest girls in the city, dressed in the latest costumes and furs of three of the leading ready-to-wear establishments, made most charming and ideal mannequins.

THE YOUNG LADIES.

Richard Hall & Sons were represented by the Misses Ruth Robertson, Ola Cavanah, Edith Kerr and Mrs. John Birnie.

Barrie's, Ltd., by Misses Gladys Cameron, A. Cuffe, Olga Johnson, and Irene Scott.

Fair's, by Misses Mamie Cottingham, Meta Richardson and Lenore Lyall.

THE COSTUMES.

The costumes featured the tasteful monotones so popular with Dame Fashion this year, and the gay foulards, which up-to-date styles decree must be in every wardrobe. One smart suit noticed was a navy tailored with wide white satin collar featuring the short coat and semi-tight skirt. This suit, which was in the Barrie exhibit, was completed by a smart stock collar and wide black sailor (from Fair's). Barrie's dresses, showing the popular "bustle" effect in foulards, were admired and the fur exhibit was a joy to behold — sealskins, three-quarter length beaver coats and a $1,000 caperene were amongst the collection.

Hall's showed some of the smartest sport suits imaginable. Dainty and most delightful all around was one costume of white silk jersey cloth with a blue sleeveless sweater. This costume was completed by a wide black transparent hat trimmed by a single rose and black velvet streamers. The suits in Hall's collection were smart beyond description and the dresses, featuring the two tone effect, alluring.

Fair's selection included a dress which no feminine heart could resist. It was blue, billowy and beautiful. Worn by a particularly charming mannequin, who paraded with the grace of a professional, it made a big hit with all who saw. Lovely Persian embroidery in gold and dull red shades completed this dream of blue Georgette crepe.

Miss Margaret Neal played during the evening for the models, while Mrs. Perrin contributed a heartily encored solo.

THE PARADE.

The big parade proved to be an interesting feature for the thousands of spectators who lined the route.

The two big five ton trucks of the Quaker Oats Company carried the band of the Salvation Army, which supplied the music. The parade was headed by the motor driven chemical engine of the Fire Department, and the runabout of Fire Chief Grange which looked like a pocket edition of the larger truck. Hundreds of cars of all makes and shapes took part in the parade; many of them were beautifully decorated.

The automobiles were mobilized under the supervision of the Police Department, and the programme went through without a hitch.

At the conclusion of the parade the bulk of the crowd visited the Armouries and took in the Motor Show.

During the course of the parade a little diversion was lent by one of the Leonard Construction Co's trucks becoming overheated, and catching fire. The chemical car, which was in the lead, dropped out, and with a chemical extinguished blaze, which otherwise would have destroyed the car.

THE MUSIC.

The music at the Armouries last night provided an attraction of unusually high degree. Solos by Miss Florence Scott, Miss Helen MacLaren, Mr. Douglas Carlisle and Mr. Frank Halley (bassoon) were enthusiastically received. These members were accompanied by Miss Cora White and Miss McKee.

A CHORUS.

A feature which lent a novel effect was a chorus of the young ladies of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E., who paraded in overalls, singing a parody on "Where do we go From Here?" which invited the crowd to go upstairs to the Fashion Show.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

Holder of ticket No. 7 is the winner of a Dominion tire. His name is not known to the committee.

Mr. H. A. Cranfield, ticket No. 56, won a pair of tire chains.

Holder of ticket No. 98 wins a pair of Werner lenses.

Holder of tea room ticket No. 32 wins a fern pot, and holder of ticket No. 81 in the same competition wins 25 pounds of Quaker flour.

The British Are Regaining Ground

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 17.—According to Reuter's despatch, the British are continuing to regain the ground lost recently in the Wytschaete sector, south of Ypres. The fighting is terrific at all points and the Germans are paying dearly in killed and wounded for every inch of ground taken by them.

Vocational Training Offices In The City

Effort Being Made in Interest of Returned Soldiers.

Lieut. D. C. Spear, Assistant Vocational Training Officer for Military District No. 3, was in the city this morning to look into the cases of such men who, returning from the front and unable to re-enter their old field of action or employment, had slipped, in the checking system, at Kingston through the notice of the authorities, and were thus not placed in congenial occupations.

Lieut. Spear spent the morning at the Armouries and Mr. Dobbin's office, where he looked into a number of cases and arranged to place men in positions that will suit their especial education, ability and physical strength. Two were placed this morning, Mongour, of Campbellford, with the motor tractors, and J. A. Maguire, of Omemee, to study civil engineering. W. A. Robertson, of this city, will be placed as soon as arrangements can be made.

By this system of sorting out the overlooked men, none will be left uncared for. Lieut. Spear will return in the course of three or four weeks, the exact date to be announced later, to look more fully into the matter.

Captain Randall, re Pensions.

Captain Randall, of Kingston, was also in the city to investigate any claim or unjust pensioning, and listened to a number of complaints, which he will have readjusted shortly.

Lieut. Spears has spent three years with the army, eighteen months of which he was with the 1st Field Company Engineers, when seriously wounded, he returned home.

REPLIES TO ALD. EDGAR'S CRITICISM RE SEEDS

Commenting on Ald. Edgar's criticism of the Board of Education's purchase from the T. Eaton Company of garden seeds for the school children's greater production activities, Mr. Vincent Eastwood stated to-day that these packages were especially prepared for the particular purpose of supplying the needs of children's garden plans, that the price was attractive, and the supply was immediately available. There was no intent to pass over local dealers, and Mr. Eastwood pointed out that a dealer in seeds was a member of the Board and had approved with the other members the purchase from the Eaton Co.

SCHOOL CHILDREN SAW THE "WATER POWERS OF CANADA"

The Engineers' Club which presented the moving pictures of the government on the 11th inst., loaned these films to the Mothers' Club of Queen Mary school, for presentation before the school children of the city. Two exhibitions were necessary to accommodate all the schools, so pictures were shown on Monday, and Tuesday afternoons, the 15th and 16th inst., at the Empire Theatre. They were shown at 5 o'clock so as not to interfere with the school hours.

A keen appreciation of the pictures was shown by both the Public and Separate schools. The children appeared to enjoy the remarkable government pictures of Canada's wonderful mountain and river scenery depicted.

The hearty and joyous rendering of "O, Canada," by the children during one of the finest mountain pictures, was like a hymn from the mountain top itself.

There is much in these pictures to instruct the young along the lines of natural geography and the country's resources, and it is to be noted that many of the teachers themselves took an interest in attending the exhibition in order that they might be able to bring home to the children afterwards some of the lessons taught.

Mrs. Medd of the Queen Mary's School Mothers' Club arranged for the presentation to the schools and the expenses were shared by the Mothers' Club and the Engineers.

Thanks are due to Mr. Robinson in permitting the use of his theatre for this purpose and his public spirit is appreciated. Admission was free.

Gravel Monaghan Road At Once For Street Car Line

City Engineer Parsons was authorized last night to proceed at once with the grading of Monaghan Road for the proposed extension of the Street Railway. To avoid the heavy cost of drawing the gravel by teams, it was suggested that some arrangement might be made with the railway company whereby they might haul the gravel, or as an alternative, that the Leonard Construction Company's trucks might be rented. The extension from Patterson street will provide a line that will run north to Hunter street giving an unbroken service uptown for the business men of that section of the west end.

Another 8th C.M.R. Man Is Dead In France

Word has been received of the death in France of another former member of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles in the person of Pte. B. Hicks, who is officially reported died of wounds. Pte. Hicks enlisted here with B squadron of the 8th C.M.R. early in 1915 and after going overseas was transferred to the 5th C.M.R., and afterwards to the Strathcona Horse. His home is in Hastings. He is a brother of Mr. Henry Hicks of the letter carriers staff of the local post office.

Pte. C. F. Montgomery, of Buckhorn, who enlisted here in the autumn of 1915 with the 93rd Battalion, and after going overseas with the Peterborough County unit, is officially reported wounded.

DEFENDED LONDON.

Flight Lieut. Morrison Was in Air Fleet That Guarded the Metropolis.

Flight Lieutenant Bert Morrison, son of the late Alex. Morrison of Bridgenorth, whose death occurred recently, and a brother of Mr. Robert Morrison of this city, has been home on leave a short time after three years of adventure, evidently of the most thrilling kind. He was attached to a squadron which was engaged in the aerial defence of London, and has fought against Zeppelins and airships in the German raids. The greatest danger to the defending airmen is the possibility of colliding with their own airplanes. They travel at great speed without lights, London below them in the darkness, and casualties have been caused by collisions.

Let the member of the household who wishes to gain weight remember that the kind of food is more important than the quantity.

London Council Objects To Demand For Rural Roads

Called upon by Middlesex County Council to contribute $7,500 for the maintenance and building of rural good roads, the London City Council is appealing to the cities in Ontario to appeal against the legislation under which this demand is possible. On account of its debenture debt piling up, London has discontinued local improvements indefinitely, but they are linked with the good roads system in Middlesex County and must pay their share of the expense. Peterborough Council decided last night that because Peterborough County has not adopted the good roads policy the city had little or no voice in the objection that might be raised. London wants an amendment to the provincial law providing that the Government shall pay to the cities the share of the suburban roads upkeep the cities have assumed under the Good Roads Act.

"TAGGERS" TO VISIT SCHOOLS

Children of the local schools are asked to note that although representatives of the Veterans will not be permitted to enter the schools to sell tags on account of the interruption of school work, that the ladies who are assisting the War Veterans in their big campaign will visit each school on Friday afternoon and will be on hand to sell tags to the children as they come out. So that if the youngsters wish to help the good work along they will have an opportunity on Friday.

The proprietor of the Dominion Cafe was also convicted on a similar charge and fined $100.

Conservation Of Wheat Is Most Vital Thing Before Us To-day Says Food Controller

MONTREAL, April 17.—"The conservation of wheat is the most vital thing before us to-day," was the decisive statement made by H. B. Thompson, Food Controller, in Montreal. "I should like to see the people of Canada so interested in the all-important question of food conservation that they will look in the daily papers this summer fo rthe crop and weather news before they think of the favourite sporting page. The progress of the wheat crop is of far greater importance to us to-day than the fluctuations of the stock market."

There Is No Limit.

"Everything depends on this summer's crop. We can handle every bushel of wheat we can get and more. There is no limit to what Canada can produce compared with the requirements of the Allies. The United States now have 32 million acres more under cultivation than they have had at any time during the past five years."

Turning to the discussion of his new regulations as the most interesting topic to-day in food conservation circles, Mr. Thompson explained that his main object was to have as much food as possible, and as the heaviest meal of the day was undoubtedly the midday meal, he had focused his attention on it.

It was suggested that many hotels and restaurants were serving less and charging the same since the regulations went into force.

"Public opinions will soon take care of that," said Mr. Thompson, "but restaurant keepers are probably having their own troubles. I suggest that kickers open restaurants for themselves and run them the way they want to, and that municipal and co-operative eating houses be opened. Many people are looking for drastic regulations to govern the homes as a natural sequence of restaurant." The Food Controller explained his opinion with regard to a thorough system of rationing in Canada by emphasizing the fact that in order to distribute food fairly it must be owned by the Government, but he pointed out various reasons why this could not be satisfactorily worked out in Canada with its scattered population. The Controller urged people to enter into the spirit of co-operation in observing the rules and not to split hairs.

The more general use of wheat substitutes and eggs was urged in order to conserve the supply for the Allies.

THE SPRING FAIR

Last night saw one of the largest crowds at the Spring Fair the Market Hall has ever held, and the visitors heartily enjoyed every feature, from the decorations to the receiving of mysterious telegrams and letters which are constantly pouring out of the English and Canadian post offices. One feature which caused considerable fun was the sale of dolls, toys, and prize packages by two Arabian women, Mrs. Peter Simons, as Arabella, and Mrs. Claude Brady, her daughter Rose. Their advent into the crowd by way of its very novelty was well received, and when they lisped their inability to speak English, they brought down all before them. Their costumes, combined with the two gypsies who are doing a big business selling peanuts, lent a pretty effect to the whole affair.

Booths Re-stocked.

The booths are being constantly re-stocked by pretty things, the Sisters especially pouring in countless dainty embroidered articles of every kind. Mrs. Milane, who is at the embroidery booth with Mrs. Tooley, is kept busy selling her goods and unpacking the new contributions. The chicks which Miss Welsh has for sale are a centre of attraction.

The Music.

Heintzman & Co., keeping a constant flow of the best music with their player-piano and piano, played by Mr. Wm. Moher, added to which last night solos by Mr. Barclay and recitations by Mr. George Lynch, made the eveping a big success.

The Dining-Room.

The ladies of the Sacred Heart have charge of the dining-room today and to-morrow, and as no change for the better was possible they are maintaining the standard set by St. Peter's.

The Post Office.

Among the many attractions at the Fair is the telegraph office, operated by Misses Olive Tangney and Mary Doris. This office is being well patronized, and will prove a great success financially.

Alexander & Miller

WHO WOULD THINK of using wood, coal, gas or coal oil when electricity is cheaper? In some places the rate for electricity makes the prices one-half the cost of gas.

ELECTRICITY AT THREE CENTS per k.w. is equal to coal at $7.75 per ton. At two cents it is equal to gas at 90 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, not taking into consideration the advantages of electrical cooking, the shrinkage of meat, the labour caused with dust in handling coal and ashes and the poisonous fumes of gas.

GRAIN MARKET

The local grain market is comparatively dull. There are practically no farmers' deliveries at outside points just at present, farmers being too busy on the land. The demand for cash oats, barley, buckwheat, and rye has eased off considerably, and with the exception of wheat there is very little of anything else moving for the time being. Corn is quiet with plenty offering locally. Beneficial showers in some sections tended to give an easier tone to the options market.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.23½; No. 2, $2.20½; No. 3, $2.17½; No. 4, $2.10½, including 2 1-2c tax, in store, Fort William.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 94 cars, with 1,354 cattle, 2,072 hogs and 24 sheep and lambs.

There was an easier tone to the market at the opening, particularly for medium and common butchers. Later on the market strengthened a little for the choice butcher and heavy steers, when it was found that all the large packing houses were in the market for cattle, including the partially burned out Harris Abattoir Company. The result was that the few loads of extra quality cattle offering again reached up to top figures for this week, one load of special quality selling at $14.25. At the close the general tone of the market was good for anything of quality.

Hogs were steady to firm at $20, fed and watered, a few lots selling at $20.25.

Practical Soul.

"So you have been to the mysterious Orient," said the impressionable young woman, "that vast region athrob with a strange life, gray with the dust of centuries, and brooded over by the spirit of the past!" "Why—er—yes," replied the practical man, who went abroad strictly on business. "Do tell me what you found there!" "The worst hotels on the face of the earth."

Touching on Courtship.

Touching courtship in other days, several Romeos contribute to column levity of the hour. One asks: "Remember the time you had her out buggy riding and she asked you if you liked buckwheat or corn cakes best, and you asked her why she wanted to know, and she stuttered, 'B-e-e-a-n-s,' and you both tittered, eh?"

Evergreen Dress for Statuettes.

Chinese gardeners sometimes plant statuettes of tiny men firmly in pots, just like real plants, and then train live evergreens to grow up over these statuettes. The vines thus form a kind of robe for the statuette men, their white faces and hands protruding from the green leaves.

Life's Inspirations.

All Can Do a Little.

We all live in a world which is full of ignorance and misery, and the plain duty of each and all of us is to try to make the little corner he can influence somewhat less ignorant, somewhat less miserable than it was before he entered it.

A Never Failing Way To Banish Ugly Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

No woman is immune to superfluous growths, and because these are likely to appear at any time, it is advisable to always have some delatone powder handy to use when the occasion arises. A paste is made with some of the powder and water and spread upon the hairy surface; in about 2 minutes this is carefully removed and the skin washed. You will then find that your skin is entirely free from hair or fuzz. Be sure, however, to get real delatone.

The Grand Trunk Railway Employees Threaten Strike

"We Will Have No More Camouflage" is the Statement of the Head of the Brotherhood—Fifty Thousand Men Affected

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, April 18. — "We will have no more camouflage from the Company, the time has come for a showdown; we will not be put off any longer," is the statement of the heads of the new Brotherhood of Railway Stationmen, who charge the Grand Trunk Railway has broken faith with them in the matter of a demand by the men for a straight 50 per cent. increase in wages.

Matters are reported to have reached a crisis and unless the Brotherhood received immediate and complete recognition by the Company and the raise demanded is paid the employees will proceed to enforce their demands by constitutional means at their disposal which, in event of a continued refusal, means a general strike of some 50,000 employees all over the Dominion. In Montreal today a deputation from different parts of the System is placing the case squarely before the Vice President, with the demand that unless there is an immediate settlement a Board of Conciliation and Adjustment under the Industrial Disputes Act will be asked for.

The employees affected by the movement include all clerks in the freight passenger, and baggage departments, as well as all employees at stations, who are not protected at the present time by one or other of the powerful railway organized orders.

Hastings News

Hastings, April 17. — Farmers generally are engaged in seeding operations but say that rain is much needed.

The fall wheat in most sections does not present a very promising appearance and it is feared that a large acreage will require re-seeding.

Monday morning found most of the citizens around one hour earlier on account of the change of time.

Most of the housekeepers are now busily engaged in house cleaning and disorder reigns supreme.

APRIL MEETING.

At the April meeting of the W. M. S. of the Methodist church, which was held on Thursday afternoon, the following staff of officers was elected:

Mr. Humphreys (who is a student for ministerial work) preached in the Methodist church on Sunday morning, and proved himself to be a young man of no mean ability.

At the evening he assisted materially in the musical part, rendering a very fine solo and taking part with his cousin, Miss Ona Doxsee, in a duet, "Whispering Hope," which was very much enjoyed by all present.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tucker of Toronto are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Carter. We are sorry to learn that Mr. Tucker is seriously ill and his friends are anxiously watching at his bedside.

Mrs. Nerens of Keene spent Friday in Hastings.

Drs. Watson and Gibson of Campbellford were in town on Friday in their dental capacity.

The sad news reached here on Saturday morning that Pte. Ben Hicks had died of wounds. Deceased received injuries while on active service at the front. At once the town flag was lowered to half mast out of respect for one who had given up all he possessed to the cause of freedom and humanity.

The local L.O.L. is arranging for a memorial service to be held on Sunday evening in the Presbyterian Church.

Miss Mable Carter, of Toronto, spent a few days last week with friends in town.

Miss Beryl Hill returned on Friday from a lengthy visit with friends in Peterborough.

Pte. Steve Hawkins, accompanied by his bride from overseas, are guests of his parents in town.

Mr. Julian Carter, of Havelock, visited his mother, Mrs. J. Carter, during the week.

The Epworth League held their annual old rubber social on Monday evening, when a good programme was rendered by local talent, after which a short time was spent in other amusements and serving of refreshments. Those present report a good time.

We Wonder.

"Here's a question I'd like to propound," remarked the Observer of Events and Things: "Does a bowlegged soldier become knock-kneed when he faces the enemy for the first time?"

Paint From Hands.

Paint and varnish can easily be removed from one's hands by first rubbing any kind of grease or lard well into hands, then washing them with warm water and soap.

AGRICULTURAL CONDITIONS IN THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

Severe Winter Injured Many of the Fruit Trees—Horses Are Plentiful—Cattle Wintered Well.

THE HOG CAMPAIGN

The following information regarding agricultural conditions in this Province is contained in a bulletin prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, based upon the information furnished by a large staff of correspondents under date of April 12th:

Orchards.

Unusually low temperature during the winter injured some of the buds on tender varieties of peach trees, and froze back a portion of the young wood on some grape vines, but the total amount of damage is not serious. There are complaints of girdling of young fruit trees by field mice and rabbits. The general condition of fruit trees, however, is not favourable.

Live Stock.

Horses are plentiful, and drivers and undersized general purpose animals are selling cheaply, but heavy working horses are more in demand, and are commanding good prices.

Cattle are in good general condition, although not so many beef animals are being fed owing to the high price of grain and mill feeds. Many dairy cows are falling off in milk from the same cause and owners are eager for early grass.

The swine industry is at high mark. More brood sows are kept than ever before. What is known as "The Hog Campaign" has been pushed widely and vigorously for several months past, and farmers generally are raising all the young pigs they can feed, considering the discouragingly high prices of all classes of feed and the comparative failure of the corn crop. A Wellington County correspondent states: "I have raised already 250 sucking pigs, and could sell 400 more if I had them at $7 each." There will likely be a steady increase in the number of hogs from now on, although animals ready for the bacon market are at present relatively scarce.

Sheep are increasing in popularity in various sections of the Province. There has been a good lamb drop already; and the prospects for developing this long neglected class of farm animals are brightening.

Fodder Supplies.

There has been more than a sufficiency of hay, but there is a danger of too much of it being sold. There has also been an abundance of straw, much of which is now being fed. The corn crop, on the other hand, was the pjoorest for years both for husking and silage. Much of what went into the silo was frosted, making inferior feed, and owing to the early cold weather considerable standing corn was caught in the field and had to remain out all winter. The cereals are so dear that grain is being sparingly fed. However, there is a good supply of field roots on hand. The bulk of the reports indicate that most farmers have the necessary supplies on hand to make fairly well balanced rations, but that careful feeding must be the order of the day until pastures are ready.

Increased Production.

A Brant correspondent describes the general farm attitude when he says: "Most farmers would like to increase their acreage for field production if they could depend upon securing sufficient labour." However, despite the probable lack of help, an endeavour is being made by many farmers to extend the area of spring crips. A considerable number are about to try spring wheat for the first time, or increase their former acreage. More barley will also be sown. With the unusually dry weather so far prevailing farmers have been able to get upon the land early, and already a considerable area of spring grains has been put in the south-western counties. Complaints are being made as to scarcity of good, well tested corn.

Labour and Wages.

The dearth of experienced farm workers continues, and much of the help this season will have to be more or less untrained. A number of organizations, official and voluntary, are now at work to help to supply the need as fully as possible. Correspondents declare that farmers will have to exchange work more than ever and use more horses and larger implements. Wages for married men run from $400 to $500 a year, with free house, garden and cow pasture. By the month good men get from $35 to $50, with board, and in York county as high as $60 is being paid for high class men.

LIVER TROUBLE and HEARTBURN CURED BY
MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, bad taste in the morning, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretions, clear away all effete and waste matter from the system, and give tone and vitality to the whole intestinal track, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases or disorders of the liver.

Mrs. A. Cummings, Manchester, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills some time, and can faithfully recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried a great many other remedies but they only relieved me for a time. I believe Laxa-Liver Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from liver troubles."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

MRS. SEXTON ADVISES

CHAPTER XLIV.

The next day Mrs. Sexton seemed particularly gracious, although she was still suffering. I could not resist the temptation to tell her of Mrs. Loring's call, and her unjust insinuations. I had told her, the night before, that I expected Merton Gray.

"She was perfectly horrid! And the worst of it was, I didn't know what to say or do!" I declared emphatically.

"You see, you need some of the poise your husband is so anxious you shall possess," she returned "Poise is the only quality in a woman that makes her able to master such a situation, instead of the situation mastering her. You had done, were doing, nothing wrong; but because of your actions, she almost had the right to conclude that it was a deliberate plan for you and Merton Gray to spend an evening alone. Iam sorry it happened—that Madge Loring was the one to call. I shall have to straighten it out for you, or she will say some mischievous thing to your husband."

"She is very — friendly with George. She always calls him by his given name," (her kindly response had made me want to unbosom myself further).

"She has known your husband for years," she returned, and the keen look that accompanied the words did not escape me.

No, Not Jealousy.

"Yes, I know—"

"I hope you are not allowing yourself to feel jealous of his old friends."

"No— not jealous. That isn't it. Not in the snse a woman is usually jealous. But there seems a side to him that I don't understand— that I don't even know—that these women, Mrs. Loring and Mrs. Collins, seem perfectly acquainted with. It is annoying, and often very embarrassing —and it may cause me to be jealous, when I understand," I added. Often I had wondered if there was anything between George and other women, especially since he had acted so impatient, the only time I had dared question him.

"I should advise you not to even think of such a thing. No woman ever accomplished anything by jealousy. Men, as a rule dislike a woman who gives way to it intensely. I should imagine your husband would be that sort of man."

"But he does lots of things he wouldn't want me to do."

"That is childish. You are young, but you will have to learn—and the sooner the better — that the world has one code for a woman another for a man. The world of society I mean. Because Mr. Howard does something, Mrs. Howard is given no license to do the same thing. Men, my dear Mrs. Howard, are privileged creatures — in many ways. They take care of the women they love, or honour, or desire; and, in return, they demand absolute liberty of action. Believe me you will hold your husband far more surely by making him proud of you—by letting him see your superiority — than by being jealous and fault-finding, or aping the vulgar and declaring that "what is sauce for the goose, is sauce for the gander," and, consequently, losing his respect. That doesn't mean you are to sit at home and mope, or that you are never to accept any little attentions from others. But be sure you keep your skirts clean. Don't look so shocked. It isn't easy—always."

An Awakening.

I knew, by this time, that marriage was not all happiness—all joy. My husband often seemed out of sympathy with me and I had not always been an angel, not by any means. Yet, sometimes the thought of his wooing would come with a bitter rush—the memory of his love words, now so seldom heard. It was hard and bewildering, to have George so changed.

I wondered just how and why it was so. My thoughts would go back to our honeymoon; and I had aching memory that even before that was over, I had sensed a change.

Slowly, the feeling of something missing had taken possession of me. George was so proud; he wanted me to be so perfect. I felt as if he would like to have me put into some sort of a machine and kept there until I was turned out exactly in the shape he desired. It was a horrid feeling—that you were all wrong to the man who once made you feel you were all that was right.

With a sense of weight, almost unbearable, in my heart, I had set myself the task of making myself over —making of myself the woman George Howard wanted his wife to become; and to banish forever the girl he had married, and claimed — then—to—think perfect.

To-morrow—The Dinner Menu.

THE SUGAR FAMINE.

There Will Not Be Too Much Sweetness This Year.

That Canadians have revelled in a wealth of granulated sugar while in many places in the United States the people, imbued with a commendable war spirit, have gladly gone weeks without sugar in their tea and resorted to corn syrup to sweeten the food of babies, is a rumor circulating across the line which is damaging to Canada's spirit of patriotism in the eyes of many Americans. The rumor had its inception in an advertisement which appeared in a Canadian newspaper less than a month ago, and which offered 100 pounds of pure cane sugar for $8.95. This advertisement was commented upon in the United States press and placed Canadians under a false light. Throughout Canada, and in Toronto in particular, men engaged in the sugar trade regard the offer contained in the advertisement as one impossible to fulfil under present conditions. Not one of the Toronto wholesale houses had on hand at that moment one-twentieth of the supply necessary to meet immediate domestic demands, and there was not any prospect of the supply increasing as freely as might be expected. One sugar distributor has within recent weeks packed his sugar in five-pound bags instead of 100-pound bags, to meet the wishes of the wholesale trade, and paper packages containing one pound of sugar may yet have to be sent out.

The average shipment of sugar into Canada during the past three years has been 300,000 tons. Last year it was 314,000 tons, but this year the International Committee has allotted Canada 320,000 tons. Every pound of sugar which reaches Canada these days is immediately snapped up, and wholesale houses cannot serve the needs of the retail merchants, whose customers have complained for months of a shortage of sugar. The trouble at present is due to the fact that the supply is not coming forward as freely as was expected, and the wholesalers have not the least idea when the supply will improve.

Canada has been living from hand to mouth so far as sugar is concerned for many months past one large retail merchant declared. He did not in the least blame the wholesaler for the cause of the clamor of his disappointed customers, but attributed it to the war conditions. This merchant's experience has been the experience of retail merchants large and small. In many districts in Ontario people have had to travel miles in search of a pound of sugar and frequently have been disappointed in their quest. Grocers have doled out their meagre supplies to regular customers, breaking open 5-pound bags, and in cases 2-pound sealed cartons, in order that their stock might go further round. It has not been an uncommon experience either for retail merchants to be without sugar for days on end. Even the large stores, which for a considerable period limited customers to one pound of sugar with grocery orders, have on occasions run out of sugar. While the situation is improving the day when the 100-pound bag of sugar will grace the cupboard of the average home is in the opinion of the dealers yet some distance off.

Rattlesnake Skin.

The rattle of the rattlesnake is developed from the single conical scale or epidermal spine, which in most snakes forms the internal tegument of the tail. The bone on which the root of the rattle rests consists of the last caudal vertebra and is covered with a skin, which is the beginning of the rattle in young rattlesnakes.

A Kingston Complaint.

(Kingston Whig.)

As announced exclusively in the Whig on Thursday, Dr. Edwards, the member for Frontenac, told the Commons that there were two veterinary colonels drawing pay in this military district and that last winter they treated, it is alleged, but one sick horse. Why did the learned doctor not go farther and tell the Commons that there were colonels in other units who could not qualify as captains? Or that there were military officers here who have possessed exceptional qualifications but were not allowed to go overseas? There are a lot of interesting questions which the member could ask. Is he too much a Conservative and too little a Unionist to take the plunge?

Let the children pick up wood if you happen to live near a forest where broken branches may be had.

Time will tell, but the woman with a secret gets there first.

The Alberta Mines.

According to the figures for 1917, as compiled by J. T. Sterling, of the Mines Branch of the Department of Public Works, the total output of Alberta mines for the year was 4,863,414 tons, with 283 mines in operation. One copper mine was opened up on the main line of the C.P.R. west of Banff, and two shale mines are in operation at Rode Cliff, near Medicine Hat. The total output of lignite coal for the year was 2,637,829 tons; of bituminous, 2,206,868 tons; anthracite, 118,718 tons; and briquettes, 93,818 tons. There were also 31,630 tons of coke burned. The total output for 1916 was: Lignite, 2,172,801 tons; bituminous, 2,335,250 tons; anthracite, 140,544 tons; briquettes, 107,959 tons; coke, 41,950 tons. This is the first time that the output of lignite has not been greater than the bituminous. It shows a considerable increase in lignite and bituminous and a falling off in anthracite, briquettes and coke. The total number of men employed in Alberta in the lignite field during the year 1917 was 5,779, as compared with 5,060 in 1916; in bituminous, 3,746, as compared with 3,234 in 1916; and in the anthracite, 287 for 1917 and 305 in 1916. The total number of men employed for the year was 9,812 in 1917 and 8,599 in 1916.

Indians Publish Magazine.

Lo, the poor Indian has finally entered the realm of literature, and has found a dignified vehicle in the American Indian Magazine, published quarterly at Cooperstown, N.Y., and devoted to race progress. It is managed by the publishing committee of the Society of American Indians. Heretofore the remnant of American Indians has had no substantial and continuous journal which was devoted exclusively to the interests of the original inhabitants of this country.

Is This Justice?

A Boston bull-terrier enters the premises of a woman poultrykeeper, attacks and destroys three fowl. The owner of the fowl attacks the Boston terrier, lands on its neck with a hoe, killing it. The sentence of the court is that the woman who defended her own property against a trespasser must pay for the dog.

No, kind reader, this is not Bolshevik law, it is Canadian "justice," dispensed recently by a Toronto judge.

Delivery Horses.

The life of a delivery horse in Toronto is said to be ten years, compared with only six in Montreal, the difference being caused by Toronto's flatness and superior roads. Department stores and other owners of many delivery horses have reason to remember this when the cost of such horses is from $200 to $300.

NERVES ARE EXHAUSTED.

When you have frequent headaches, feel discouraged and down-hearted, cannot rest and sleep well, and find appetite fickle and digestion bad, you may know that the nerves are in bad condition. Don't wait for these symptoms to become chronic but start in early with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and head off disaster.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Beauty Match

By JAMES BRAINARD

My chum, Tom Nicholson, at twenty was as likely a young feller as you ever see. He had a head of black hair thick as a mop. His well-kept white teeth under his black mustache formed a fine contrast, and he had a clear complexion. Sallie Morgan was as purty for a gal as Tom was for a man. She too had a beautiful head of hair reachin' down when she stood up to within a foot of the floor.

Well, they soon got engaged and everybody said they'd make the handsomest couple that had ever been married in Jonesbourgh. But them beauty marriages with nothin' else to back 'em up are unsartin'. Tom had nothin' with which to suppórt a wife, and Sallie wasn't a robust gal at all, so the weddin' couldn't come off in a hurry. Tom was offered a position away out West, and he and Sallie concluded that he'd better accept it, and when he found he was doen well he could come for her and take her back with him.

I reckon there was a sorrowful parten, only they was bouyed up by the hope that after a year or two they'd git together again. Tom left a photograph of himself and took one of Sallie. Tom's was just like him, but Sallie's not showing her red lips and a tinge of color in her cheeks wasn't quite so pretty as the original. Sallie set Tom's picture up on her bureau and every time she combed her beautiful hair she divided her glances between the hair and the photograph.

Tom hadn't been away from Sallie ten minutes before he began to write to her. He started in while the train was rolling out of the station. By the time he reached the place he was going to he had a letter of thirty pages written, and had mailed her postals at all important stations. Sallie began writen as soon as her eyes were dry enough after cryen, to see the paper she was writen on. The first few days after Tom's departure she only stopped writen for meals.

Them letters kept going from one to the other for years. Just when they began to grow less—just when they stopped, only Tom and Sallie knew. Tom was unfortunate in everything he undertook. He got sick a year after he parted with Sallie, and was in the hospital six months. When he came out he had to begin all over again. He never wrote Sallie that they'd better give each other up; nor did Sallie write that to him. Both hoped that some day Tom would have a stroke of luck and their dream of happiness would come true.

Well, I reckon it was about twenty-five years after these models of constancy separated—neither married anyone else—that one day an old party bald as a coot, and what few hairs was left on his head white as snow, stopped me on the street, and said:

"Aren't you Norman Dale?"

"That's my name," I answered, lookin en at him trying to remember him. "Who may you be?"

"Why, Norman!" he said reachen for my hand, "don't you know me? I'm your old chum Tom Nicholson,"

"You don't mean it?"

"Lord, how you've changed. I wouldn't 'a' knowed you, if you hadn't been pointed out to me. Have I changed much?"

This made me mad and I remarked sarcastically:

"Not a bit. You're the same handsome feller you was when you left here twenty-five years ago."

"I want to know," he said, looking me in the eye to find out whether or no I was flattering him.

"On the whole," I added, "I think you've improved."

This satisfied him and he went on asking me about different persons he had left in the town, most of whom were dead. Finally he asked about Sallie Morgan. He had swallowed what I had said about his own appearance, so I wondered if he would gulp down what I'd say about Sallie. I said that she was more mature, but I didn't think she had lost any of her beauty. He told me that luck had come to him at last and he had come home to find Sallie, and take her back West with him as his wife.

We talked a long while about old times and then I told Tom there was to be a lecture that evening; we was all going, and he'd better go along. He said he was going to see his old sweetheart. I told him she would be at the lecture, and he consented to go with me.

Tom came to my house for supper, and a little later we all went to the lecture. Sallie Morgan sat three seats in front of us. Tom looked about for her and not seeing the girl he left behind him asked me if she was in the house. I pointed her out to him. She had grown very fleshy, weighing two hundred pounds and her hair was half white; besides being very thin, for she had lost most of it after having a fever. I saw Tom shudder. When the lecture was over and we were leaving the hall, I saw my wife say something to Sallie who at once glanced at Tom. I saw Sallie shake her head and she got out of the hall as quick as she could. Tom had already made his escape. The next morning he returned to the West.

Tom was more changed than Sallie. He belonged to a family who grew old in appearance while still comparatively young.

Use Boys and Cripples.

"There's no one over there but a boy with a flare and his old dad with a wooden leg." When the pale Veery rockets are soaring skyward, bathing No Man's Land in their ghastly radiance, when night raids take place and death lurks in the shadows, 'tis then that the men of Toronto's 75th Battalion, peering from their fire-steps, give utterance to this odd saying. It has become a sort of proverb in Tommy Church's favorite regiment.

"You hear our men using it constantly," declared a young Toronto captain of that corps. "The phrase originated from the fact that the Huns have young boys in their regiments. His apparently sole job is to shoot up flares at night. The enemy has always been much keener on these rockets for the illumination of No Man's Land than have we. These boys are often sent out into shell holes to let off a light at intervals from their Veery pistols. Not only boys are used at this job, but soldiers incapacitated for anything active on account of wounds. These cripples and the boys are often sent forward to spots in advance of the German position at night, and by having them throw up flares the enemy seek to deceive us into thinking that they actually hold these places. I remember when we advanced one night and occupied some ruined houses. Flares had been shooting from them, but sure enough when we got there, a couple of Hun boys whom we captured were the only occupants."

The Important Button.

The item of buttons in connection with Canadian army clothing reaches an imposing aggregate. Each shirt is fitted with five zinc buttons. In the course of eighteen months the shirts made for the army required one hundred and twenty million buttons of one size and type. To bring this total up to date it may be safely quadrupled and then fall short of actual requirements. The consumption of this apparently trivial article assumes even more staggering proportions in connection with the supply of Tommy's nether garments. There are eighteen buttons to each pair of trousers, so that to complete the thirteen million three hundred thousand garments of this description ordered during the first two years of war British mills had to furnish two hundred and forty million buttons.—Family Herald.

Title For Woman.

Lady Margaret Davidson and Food Controller Patrick McGrath are honored with knighthood in the first list of appointments for Newfoundland in the recently-created Order of the British Empire. The list was officially announced by Governor Harris. Lady Margaret is the wife of former Governor Davidson of Newfoundland, now Governor of New South Wales. Besides being Food Controller, Mr. McGrath is chairman of the Pensions Board, a newspaper publisher, and contributor to various periodicals in the United States and Canada.

"Royal" Newfoundlanders.

The highest possible recognition of the Newfoundland regiment has been accorded by King George. Official announcement was received recently that the King had conferred the prefix "Royal" upon the body of troops representing this colony because of its bravery on the battlefields of Gallipoli, France and Flanders.

If Not A Family Garden
Why Not A Community Garden?

Those who grew vegetables in their gardens, or who went in for Community vegetable gardening last year, and had good results, will do the same this year.

But to those who attempted vegetable gardening without success we say: Try again. As a matter of sheer necessity it is worth your while.

Don't rush into it. Figure out what you aim to do before you start. Then get the advice of a friendly neighbor whose vegetable garden was a success.

First of all fill out the coupon below and mail it and get a free copy of the Department of Agriculture's booklet entitled "A Vegetable Garden For Every Home." It is full of helpful practical suggestions, including plans for various sized gardens. If, after reading it, and getting the advice of your neighbor, you find that the soil in your own garden is not suited to vegetable gardening, get some neighbors or friends to join you and rent, or secure the donation of, a piece of suitable land nearby. Then pool your efforts in labour and money for the cultivation of substantial vegetable crops.

For example: Last year thirty-five men in an Ontario city, all of whom were novices at gardening, formed a pool of ten dollars each, and rented four acres of ground on the outskirts of the city. They then secured the services of a man who knew something about farming. They paid him to plow and harrow the land, purchase seed, and get the job properly started. Then each man agreed, and lived up to his agreement, to do so much hoeing. Incidentally they paid the farmer for his supervision and direction through the season.

In November of last year they had $42.00 still left in the treasury, and to each of thirty-five families there had been delivered (charges prepaid) vegetables to the market value of about $31.00.

Everybody was perfectly satisfied; and the result is, those same thirty-five men are going to double their efforts this year.

* *

The point we want to make is this. If those thirty-five men had been left to their own devices, in their own back gardens, some of them might have taken off $30 worth of vegetables for their efforts, but most of them would not. Whereas by tackling the job on the Community plan they shared each others good fortune, joked over their disappointments, and produced more than $1,000.00 worth of vegetables at market prices, and so relieved the demand for food that much.

Why not try to do likewise?

One other point that may help you to decide is this.

The farmers of Ontario have been urged to grow more wheat, and to produce more abundantly of the farm products that can best be sent overseas. The people in villages, towns and cities, therefore, are asked to grow food to feed themselves as far as possible so that the overseas supplies may not be drawn on unless absolutely necessary.

It is quite possible that vegetables may be higher in price next fall and winter than they have been this last year, consequently every pound of food you grow will make you that much less dependent upon them.

Write now for a free copy of the booklet entitled "A Vegetable Garden for Every Home," prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. It is full of helpful practical suggestions, including plans for various sized gardens. You can get a copy by filling out and mailing the coupon below.

CAUSES OF FAILURE.

Here are the principal causes of failure in poultry raising, as set out by a poultry food concern for the benefit of the big poultry man. They are just as applicable to the man with the back yard flock.

Starting on too large a scale when one knows little about poultry.

Buying too expensive equipment and assuming overhead expenses that cannot be borne during the first year or two.

Breeding too late in the season or from poor stock.

Keeping birds over two years old (except for breeding), mongrels, mixed breeds, and "barnyard runts."

Preventable epidemics and disease brought on by filth, dampness, contagion and malnutrition.

Poor arrangement of houses, yards, hoppers, fountains etc., entailing unnecessary labor.

Letting sexes and birds of all ages run together.

Injudicious feeding.

Figures are like hens — they never lie.

LEGALIZED TREASON.

(Toronto Star)

War seems to bring out what is worst as well as what is best in human nature; the unselfish man or woman makes sacrifices, and the greedy man finds his opportunity in the necessities of his country, and coins money out of blood. It is treason of the blackest kind, and ought to be so punished.

Slight Stroke Of Paralysis

Down Left Side—Stomach and Heart Affected—Case Baffled Doctors For Three Years

TRENTON, Ont., March 11.—A very interesting report has been received from Mrs. Pringle in regard to her recovery from partial paralysis. This was a most extreme case, for doctors had been trying for three years to find something which would restore the depleted nerve force.

One can scarcely imagine stronger evidence of the restorative influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. C. Pringle, Queen street, Trenton, Ont., writes:

"About five years ago I was troubled with my stomach, there was a sort of paralyzed feeling across it and up my left side, and my heart seemed almost to stop beating. I called in the Doctor, and he thought it was symptoms of a stroke. My stomach kept getting worse. At times the pounding would be intense, almost unbearable, and I thought I would go wild. Sleep was out of the question. I tried different Doctors, giving each one a fair trial, and doctoring nearly three years. My case seemed to baffle them. It was a nervous breakdown caused by overwork and worry. During all this time I could not do any work and my friends thought it was a matter of time, how long I would live. Some one advised me to try something to build up my system, and I tried different medicines. Finally I thought I would try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and see if they would do me any good. A famous Doctor sanctioned my using these pills, and told me they would be good for me. They seemed to be just what I required, as I soon saw an improvement. I took about fifteen boxes, and the results have been very gratifying. I am now enjoying splendid health, and able to do all my work, eating anything I wish, and can go to bed and get a good night's rest. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends who have also secured good results from this treatment."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson Bates & Co. Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

WHAT SAMMIES EAT

Meat Twice Daily, White Bread, Vegetables, Chief Foods.

Coffee Served at Breakfast and Buttermilk, Tea, Cocoa or Water at Other Meals.

The old idea that army diet should consist largely of beans, hardtack and coffee, is no longer approved, writes Belle Case Harrington in Leslie's. In the present training camps meat, preferably beef, is served twice a day, with white bread baked in the general camp bakery and kept 24 hours before serving. Where green vegetables can be obtained they are used, otherwise canned goods are substituted. Coffee is served at breakfast, and buttermilk, lemonade, tea, cocoa or water at other meals. Meals, which in the vernacular are "mess" or "chow," are served cafeteria style.

Every soldier is furnished with an outfit which consists of a meat-pan, knife, fork and spoon, and a long-handled cup. The cover of the meat-pan serves as a plate, and the outfit is so arranged that each man may do his own cooking in case of an emergency. Each man takes his meat-pan and passes before a table where he is served with the various dishes prepared. He then goes to a table, or if there is none, drops down on the ground, and eats in absolute contentment. Don't feel too sorry for the boys, even if they do write longingly home wishing for mother's cookies or Jane's fried chicken. Men in outdoor training have good appetites, and they are far better off physically than if fed on the salads and ices and sodas they probably would have at home. What they miss most is sweets. If you are sending things from home put in cookies, candies and jams or jellies. Milk chocolate is one of the things a soldier seems to crave, and a jar of malted milk will come handy if he is not feeling well. Be sure not to send food that is too rich as the boys are on plain diet.

One of the comforting thoughts to the friends at home is the fact that Uncle Sam is bound to maintain good health among his soldiers. Even if there were no humane considerations, his would be necessary from a purely economic standpoint. Sick soldiers are a menace, and a regiment not up to par in the matter of health is an awful handicap. All men are vaccinated for smallpox, and inoculated against typhoid as soon as they enter service. Minor disorders, such as blisters, bowel trouble, or sore throat are carefully watched by the officers in charge, and there is a hospital with trained nurses in every camp. No faking can pass. The officers have sharp eyes to discriminate between real and simulated illness. As the boys say, "There are only two times a day when a fellow can get sick"—at sick call, which occurs at 7 a. m., and again at 5:30 p. m. Between times "he just has to stand it."

Regular habits, outdoor life, plain food, and strenuous military drill, are in themselves strong factors toward good health, and many a man who enters the service a comparative weakling will come out fine of physique and strong of limb.

As for drinking, it "isn't done!" Saloons and even soft drink establishments are not allowed to sell anything to a soldier in uniform, and many young men who have heretofore been occasional drinkers now proudly proclaim themselves teetotalers.

Club Was Fined.

The secretary of the Cardiff Conservative Club was fined £100 recently, and the committee was censured, for failing to keep a correct record of meals supplied.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

How Europe Was Made Safe for Royalty

By OSCAR COX

There was once a principality somewhere in Europe—the censor has taken the principal points out of this story—whose territory consists of only a few square miles. The prince being of the blood royal and an associate on equal terms with the other sovereigns of Europe, was required to keep up their style though he did it on an infinitely small scale. He had one general, one judge, one executioner. His army consisted of a hundred men divided into ten companies consisting of ten men to a company. Everything else was on a proportionate scale. But the general, except when on duty, was a butcher; the judge the only policeman in the principality, and the soldiers were laborers. The executioner was the parson officiating over the little church 20 by 30 feet in area, one-third of which is taken up by the royal pew. The parson was a meek little man incompetent to decapitate a chicken.

All worked well in the principality for many years. There were no criminals to try, or to punish, the prince spent his time visiting his royal relatives, so that his living was provided for, and the people, who were taxed only to provide for the royal pocket money, were happy.

Then suddenly came trouble. The general of the army was caught in the act of treason. A neighboring king whose territory consisted of many millions of square miles, wanted the principality for a pasture for his cows, and bribed the general of the prince for a consideration, to let down the bars of the fence inclosing the princely territory, and admit the king's army without resistance on the part of the prince's forces. The plot being discovered in time, the other European sovereigns frowned upon it and stopped it. Had it been carried through they would have held a conference and in order that the peace of Europe might not be disturbed would have winked at it. As it was, the only action required was to try the general for high treason and cut off his head.

But the judge, who, it has been said, was only a policeman, knew nothing about law and was incapable of conducting a trial. The prince got over the difficulty by ordering a trial behind closed doors; and when they were opened a warrant was produced by which the general was condemned to death. It was taken to the prince, who signed it, and the pen with which he affixed his royal signature was sent to the sovereign of the most powerful empire as a token that imperialism was absolute in the principality.

It remained now only to carry out the sentence by beheading the general. A meeting of the privy council was held, at which it was unanimously agreed that the executioner could not be relied upon to carry out the sentence and the members deliberated what was to be done in the premises. One suggested that the general, being a butcher, was far better fitted to cut off his own head than the executioner, who was a parson. Whereupon another member suggested that the two be surreptitiously made to change places and the butcher be made to cut off the head of the parson. This would satisfy the powers.

But the prince, who was a just sovereign would not hear of such a nefarious deed, and dismissed the council, saying that he would lay a plan for carrying out the sentence himself. Until such time as he could find an executioner he would take the general's parole and release him from confinement. The general willingly gave his word not to leave the principality and the next morning was to be seen peacefully swinging his cleaver in his butcher shop.

Now the king of that country who desired the principality for his cow pasture—remember that this story has been censored and all names have been deleted—hearing that the general was engaged at his usual business, sent a deputation to the prince to protest against such a flagrant omission of a royal duty to punish treason, representing that if such leniency were practiced by the crowned heads of Europe the world would at last be cursed with all the horrors of democracy.

To this the prince replied that rather than see this he would consent to the massacre of every one of his subjects. The leader of the deputation replied to this that if the prince so desired his royal master would send his own executioner to decapitate the general.

A few days later the king's executioner arrived. His guard of honor numbered five hundred men armed with the most deadly implements of modern warfare. They took the general from his shop and the king's executioner dispatched him. Then the prince was shot down, and when the executioners were finished there was not a human being left in the principality.

The executioner, attended by his guard, went back to the king, who asked him if he had acceded to the request of his royal cousin, and the executioner assured him that he had done his work so well that the principality was now ready for his majesty's cow pasture.

This is an instance of how the blessings of royalty have been saved to the world by one royal cousin assisting another in repressing treason. The principality is now a cow pasture. Who knows but that it might have been a vast plant for the manufacture of comforts for the people?

PROTECTING SOLDIERS.

Counter Attractions to the Temptations of England.

That "the existing organizations provide every conceivable counter-attraction to the lure of the streets, and the only man who gets into trouble in London to-day is the man who will find his way to trouble anywhere" is the assertion made in an official report just received by the Militia Department on organizations for the care of Canadian soldiers in the Empire's capital.

"There are temptations in every city," the report goes on to say, "and London in war time cannot pretend to be a Utopia. Though the sale of alcoholic drinks has been enormously restricted by law, though 'treating' is forbidden and drunkenness has decreased almost to the vanishing point, and though the efforts of what is probably the most efficient police system in the world have worked wonders in the repression of temptations to vice, it would be folly to suggest that the man who goes out looking for trouble cannot find it in London.

"But thanks to the splendid self-sacrificing work of a host of social workers of the Empire, supported without stint by the spontaneous good-will of generous-hearted Englishmen and English women, all that is humanly possible is being done to counteract such dangers as may beset young men far away from home in a strange city. The result of this mass of effort to-day is that there is no overseas soldier, who, except through his own folly, need ever find himself placed in temptation's way.

Accommodation is constantly being extended, it is explained, to meet the demands made upon the Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A. and the other organizations all work in co-operation with and have the cordial support of the home and Canadian militia authorities. In many cases the houses occupied are loaned rent-free by English owners, who devote much time to serving on the managing committees.

This important work for the soldiers is largely under the direction of the information bureau of the Canadian Red Cross Society in London, organized by Lady Drummond, of Montreal, and run by a host of volunteer lady helpers. While information is dispensed on every conceivable subject of interest to Canadian soldiers, the department exists for infinitely more than that. Every hospital that receives Canadian soldiers is visited at regular intervals, who report to the "information bureau." A careful system of checking prevents soldiers being missed. His wants are supplied and his progress periodically reported upon to relatives in Canada if desired. From the moment his name is on the card index he is never lost sight of until he rejoins his unit.

Much attention is also given by the bureau to invalided officers. Hundreds of invitations to officers to spend their leave as guests at country houses, after being discharged from hospital, are received and accepted. "There is," says the report, "no formality or routine about these visits. The officer arrives as a guest, he generally departs as a friend of the family, with a cordial invitation to return."

The Halifax Losses.

T. H. Rogers, K.C., chairman of the Halifax Relief Commission, has made public a statement as to the Government's action on the commission's preliminary report, recently submitted to the Government. The statement shows the total material loss from the disaster, excluding Government and shipping property, to be estimated at $15,000,000.

The provision of a capital sum to provide for the dependents of those killed and take care of the injured may reach five million dollars. The relief funds, including the million pounds sterling appropriated by the Imperial Government, five million dollars by the Canadian Government and three millions by general subscription, reach the sum of about thirteen million dollars.

It is estimated that four million dollars are required for emergency relief, temporary housing, hospital and medical attendance, living allowances, etc., extending over the current year.

The Unicorn.

The unicorn which assists the lion in upholding the British Royal coat of arms bears the reputation of being entirely mythical. But in truth it has an actual prototype in the chiru, an antelope of western Thibet and Hindustan. By right the chiru has two horns, but it is of so pugnacious a disposition that it often loses one of them.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

Well Known Lady Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair By a Simple Home Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home-made remedy made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentlman can darken their gray or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not colour the scalp; is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look 10 to 20 years younger."

The Marston Murder

By ELINOR MARSH

Miss Morrison sat in a parlor car reading a novel. There was an air of comfort in her surroundings that was very pleasant. Her cushioned chair, the genial warmth—for the car was warmed for winter—the panorama of fields and hills without, all conspired to give her a feeling of restfulness, despite the fact that she was moving at the rate of forty miles an hour. She would read a few pages in her novel, then enjoy the scenery for a while; then drop her eyes again to her book.

Occasionally she would swing her chair around to face the aisle for two men were sitting opposite who were chatting earnestly and she desired to hear what they were saying. One of them was an intellectual-looking man with a high forehead and dreamy eyes; the other was red-headed and his features were to Miss Morrison very disagreeable. Sometimes their voices fell to a pitch that prevented her hearing what they said. Sometimes the opening of one of the car doors had a like effect. Miss Morrison got only snatches of their conversation.

"What would you advise me to do with Marston?" asked the intellectual man.

The response Miss Morrison did not hear.

"I couldn't possibly do that."

"Why?"

Again the reply was inaudible.

"Then," said the other lowering his voice, "there is but one thing for you to do with him. You must kill him."

Miss Morrison shuddered. Was she listening to a murder plot? She resumed her novel but after she had read one page over several times and had not absorbed a word of it, she yielded to the temptation to listen again.

"He has treated Amelia villainously, ruined her life; been the cause of her death."

The rejoinder was not audible. It was accompanied by something like a groan or an expression of repugnance.

"I tell you he is in a position from which with all your skill you can never extricate him," said the temptor.

"To make a man of him after all his crimes would be a stroke of genius."

"I tell you, Berryman, the only thing you can do with him is to kill him." The last words were spoken in a low voice.

Miss Morrison's blood froze in her veins; she cast a glance at the man who was urged to commit murder. His face wore a gloomy look. He was a young man, not more than twenty-five years old, and very handsome. She longed to put her arms about him and beseech him not to commit this crime.

The conversation was interrupted by the train stopping at a station, and the man addressed as Berryman leaving the car.

The balance of Miss Morrison's journey was not so restful. Indeed she was tortured by a feeling that she should do something to prevent a murder. Should she notify the police? She would have done so but she had no idea where the murder would be committed.

Time passed during which Miss Morrison scanned her morning paper to see if the murder of a man named Marston had been committed. She saw no mention of it, but she knew that from a journal she would not learn all of the crimes committed in the country, and she was still troubled. Those dreamy eyes of the man who had been so sorely tempted by that horrible creature with a red head still haunted her and she wondered if he had the crime on his conscience. Perhaps he had been arrested and was confined in a nasty cell.

When the midwinter holidays came on Miss Morrison was invited to a house party at the country home of a friend. On the evening of her arrival the guests were assembled in the drawing room before dinner when who should enter but the man who had been tempted to commit murder. He did not look like a murderer but Miss Morrison caught her breath and remembered that many a gentleman had committed crime. The hostess introduced him to her guests including Miss Morrison.

"Your face is familiar to me," he said; "where have I met you?"

"In a parlor car. I sat opposite you when you were traveling and talking with a horrid man—"

Miss Morrison paused.

"I remember," said Mr. Berryman. "I was in company with Everhart."

"What was the meaning of the conversation between you and him?"

"I don't remember what we were talking about."

"Why—why—he was telling you that you must kill some one by the name of Marston."

An effort of memory crossed Mr. Berryman's face. Then with a twinkle in his eye he said: "After dinner I will explain the matter to you."

When the party retired for the evening Mr. Berryman handed Miss Morrison a novel. She took it to her room and read on the title page, "'Saved From the Burning,' by Albert J. Berryman. Everhart & Co. Publishers."

Miss Morrison read the book through before going to sleep. Marston, the principal character, was not "killed"; he reformed and the reader who in the earlier pages hated him, in the end loved him. His saving was indeed a stroke of genius.

Foolish Victims of Custom.

A summer hotel in Vermont once tried the experiment of placing hornpout on the menu, only to provoke indignant protests from the guests against such unheard-of and uncivilized food. A few days later the despised fish were again presented under the disguise of "mountain trout," when they met with such enthusiastic favor that several men had to be employed for the rest of the season to catch enough of the fish to satisfy the demands of the discriminating guests. These victims of custom would eat trout, but not catfish.

His Ancestors.

A party of tourists were discussing the Darwinian theory, and one of them, turning to the guide, said: "And what, my friend, do you think of the matter?" "Well, sir," said the guide, "you gentlemen may all have come from apes. It's not for me to contradict you. But, as for me, I can say that my folks came from Wales."

Cameo-cutting, one of the most ancient of occupations, has recently been introduced into the United States.

Had Bronchitis FOR THREE YEARS COULD GET NO RELIEF

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather. It begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty in breathing, and a wheezing sound comes from the lungs. There is also a raising of phlegm from the lungs, especially in the morning. This is at first white, but later becomes of a greenish or yellowish color, and is occasionally streaked with blood.

On the first sign of bronchitis you should check it immediately by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and thereby prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning into some more serious lung trouble.

Mr. Theodore P. Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with bronchitis for three years, and could get no relief. I was always worse when I got wet. I tried lots of different medicines, but none did me any good until a friend told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles and before I had them half used I was better.

"My mother is now using it for asthma. It is a great medicine and we never want to be without it."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Thunder Eagle.

The "Thunder Eagle," sacred among the Ojibway Indians as personifying the spirit of the Mineto, supposed to have its nest on the Sleeping Giant, 1,400 feet above Thunder Bay, was seen depicted in fire in the brilliant display of aurora borealis several weeks ago. The Ojibways say the Thunder Eagle has not been seen for many years, and that its appearance portends wonderful happenings in the world. The figure of the eagle travelled swiftly southward over the bay.

Our Foreign Trade.

Canada's foreign trade, particularly the exports, will be about $2,500,000,000 in the year ending this month. Our war market is measured principally by what we can make and get shipped, but when the war stops we shall have to fight hard for all our overseas markets, except, perhaps, in some foodstuffs and raw materials.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction

MISS' OR SMALL WOMAN'S DRESS.

The back closing is a feature which is much used on misses' dresses, and probably the best reason for its popularity is that it gives an unbroken front which adapts itself well to trimming, such as beading, braiding or embroidery. The dress shown in No. 8741 has a very new and smart collar which also buttons at the back and rolls up rather high about the neck line. It is cut in a very unusual shape, with tassels weighting each corner. The front of the waist extends down over the belt and is trimmed with buttons. The two gored skirt is gathered to the slightly raised waistline.

The miss' or small woman's dress pattern No. 8741 is cut in three sizes—16, 18 and 20 years. Width at lower edge of skirt is 1¾ yards. As on the figure, the 16-year size requires 3¾ yards 36 inch, 3¼ yards 44 inch, or 2¾ yards 54 inch contrasting material.

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUES ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Canadian Guns Sweep Enemy Positions With Harassing Fire

For One Week Artillery Activity Has Been the Main Feature on the Canadian Front—Many Gas Attacks Reported.

SUCCESSFUL RAIDS

(By W. A. Willison, Canadian Press Correspondent.)

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, April 18.—All night long the Canadian guns, both heavy and light, have been active against the enemy positions, shelling hostile batteries, routes, railways and dumps, while time after time hostile infantry positions, assembly areas and communications have been swept with an harassing fire. Indeed, since my last cable, the artillery activity has been the main feature on the Canadian front. There have been constant duels between our own and enemy batteries. A considerable amount of gas has been used.

Raiding Parties.

Early this morning we carried out a small projector gas bombardment against enemy positions to which the Huns replied with gas shelling, but neither operations approached the magnitude of our heavy gas shell bombardment reported in my cable of April 8 in which over 9,000 shells were fired on hostile artillery positions. That gas bombardment was as successful as it was extensive, twenty out of thirty-two batteries engaged having been out of action ever since. While our guns have been active our infantry have had a comparatively quiet time save for constant clashes between patrols. In one vigorous encounter with a hostile raiding party, twenty strong, one of our patrols drove the raiders back in disorder killing six, capturing two and wounding ten at least. We suffered only three slight casualties.

THE WEATHER

After some weeks of very fine and dry spring weather, a change has come over the scene. Last night's rain was the first for over a month—since March 14th—and instead of a temperature in the neighbourhood of 70 degrees, as has been usual of late, the thermometer at noon to-day was at 23 degrees, with snow falling. Unsettled and colder conditions prevail all over the continent at the present time, and there is not likely to be any immediate change. This spring has been a particularly early one with a temperature considerably above the usual figure.—W.P.

FIFTEEN BRITISH SHIPS WERE SUNK DURING THE PAST WEEK

LONDON, April 18.—The losses to British shipping by mine or submarine in the past week totalled fifteen, according to the Admiralty report to-day. Eleven of the merchantmen sunk were 1,600 tons or over, and four under that tonnage. One fishing vessel also was sunk.

Twelve vessels were unsuccessfully attacked. The arrivals numbered 2,211, sailings 2,456.

In the previous week only six British merchantmen were sunk by mine or submarine, four of them of more than 1,600 tons.

FRENCH LOSSES WERE VERY LIGHT.

PARIS, April 18.—No French ships over 1,600 tons, and only one under that tonnage, were sunk by the Germans last week. One Italian ship of over 1,500 tons and two sailing vessels were sunk.

Enemy Positions Under Bombardment

Every Inch of a 55 Mile German Front is Being Pounded by the Greatest Artillery Concentration Yet Attained by the Allies

WAITING POLICY

(By Henry Wood, United Press.)

With the French Armies in the Field, April 18.—Every inch of the German lines from the South of the Somme to the Oise—a front of ninety kilometres (55.80 miles)—is being pounded by the vastest artillery concentration yet attained by the Allies. Even the country for miles in the rear of the enemy positions is under bombardment.

Prisoners say the cannonading, in addition to preventing the digging in of a single trench, is inflicting the heaviest losses. The offensive has reached a stage where allied military officers declare unanimously that the present battle is absolutely and irrevocably decisive for Germany. With the Allies' present certainty of checking the German offensive, coupled with the known German losses, the German's, at the battle's end, will be exhausted and incapable of seriously attempting another offensive. Instead they will have to remain on the defensive, constantly threatened by internal upheavals, while American arrivals will swing the Allies' superiority.

The French military officials declare the French army is capable of waiting eighteen months to attain a crushing superiority. But with the Americans maintaining or increasing their present rate of arrivals, the final military victory is possible much sooner.

Huns Attempt To Widen The Wedge

Germans Have Turned Their Attention to the Southwesterly Sector of the Battle field

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, April 18.—The Associated Press war summary says to-day:

"Checked for the time at least, in front of the strong British positions dominated by Kemmel Hill on the northern portion of this front, the Germans are turning their attention to the southwesterly sector of the battlefield.

"A heavy bombardment of British positions here between Locon and Robecq was reported in progress this morning.

"The enemy is finding himself cramped in a southerly side of the wedge he has pushed into the British lines and seems on the eve of an effort to widen it out here."

ENEMY ARTILLERY IS VERY ACTIVE ON LYS BATTLEFRONT

Several Local Attacks Were Repulsed by British Troops —British Line Was Restored at One Point by a Successful Counter Attack.

SEVERAL ENEMY ATTACKS REPULSED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, April 18.— Southeast of Kemmel Hill on the northern battlefront, the Germans pressed back the British line slightly, but the situation was restored by a counter attack, the War Office announces. During the night there was no change in the British front. In the Bailleul sector the Germans made three attacks before Noyon yesterday and in each case suffered repulse.

The Germans opened a heavy bombardment of the British positions on the southwestern part of the Lys battle front between Locon and Robecq during the night. The bombardment was still in progress at dawn to-day.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT READS:

There has been no change on the British front during the night. The hostile artillery has shown great activity on the southern portion of the Lys battle front from Givenchy to east of Robecq. A heavy bombardment of our positions between Locon and Robecq was still continuing at dawn. Local attacks were repulsed by our troops yesterday evening in the Merris sector. More detailed accounts of the fighting of yesterday on the forest of Nieppe-Wytschaete front establish the severity of the enemy's losses. South-east of Kemmel Hill, German infantry attacked in three waves and at one point pressed back our line slightly. In this locality the situation was restored by counter attack and shortly after mid-day the attack had been repulsed at all points. In the Bailleul sector the enemy attacked three times before mid-day and in each case suffered complete repulse. Our line of yesterday morning was reported intact on the whole front.

Serious Rioting In Belfast

REVOLVERS AND BATONS WERE FREELY USED BY POLICE

(Canadian News.)

London, April 18.—Irish despatches indicate that serious rioting attended the breaking up of an anti-conscription meeting in Belfast yesterday.

Revolvers and batons were freely used by the police; fifteen thousand persons participated in the troubles, and virtually every plate glass window in the neighbourhood was broken. There were several casualties and a number of arrests.

OFFICIAL FIGURES

The Dominion's Contribution of Man-Power—Casualties Were Eight Per Cent.

7,500,000 MEN

(Canadian News.)

New York, April 18.—The British Empire at the beginning of April, had 7,500,000 men in the service of the army and navy, according to official figures received here to-day.

Of this number 4,530,000, or 60.4 per cent. are from England. The Dominions and Colonies have furnished 980,000, or 12 per cent. of the whole, while little Scotland has 620,000 men in service, or one man for every seven and a half of the population.

In proportion to the population, England has one in 7.5 in service; Wales one in 10.2; the Dominions one in 15; and Ireland, one in 26.3.

Ireland has furnished only 170,000 men, or 3.08 per cent. of her population.

ONE MILLION MEN.

India, Africa and other dependencies, have contributed one million natives, laborers and "specials" to the allied armies, the despatch says.

Statistics complete until the beginning of the present drive, show that the troops from England and Wales, which constitute 70 per cent. of the men on the fighting lines, suffered 76 per cent. of the casualties. Scotland with eight per cent. of the active fighters, bore 11 per cent.; while the Dominions and the Colonies, with sixteen per cent. of the fighting force, bore eight per cent. of the casualties. Irish troops (six per cent. of the fighting force) suffered six per cent. of casualties.

The Spring Fair

"Have you been to the Spring Fair?" is no longer necessary to ask, for with the attendance last night, which was bigger than ever, it is doubtless if any one has not yet been. The mystery is where all the pretty things come from, for although the booths are always busy there is always a new and if possible prettier stock than the day before.

THE DINING ROOM.

The ladies of the Sacred Heart Church spared no effort yesterday and to-day in serving the daintiest meals imaginable, and with the splendid contributions there is no stint, rather a lavish supply of good things. To-day's roll call accounted for about 150 pies of every order.

The Immaculate Conception church will have charge of the dining room to-morrow.

THE MUSIC.

Mr. Moher still keeps the hall lively with his selections on the Heintzman exhibit, and last night Mr Barclay contributed, accompanied by Miss Hurley, a solo "Annie Laurie," which was well received.

THE POST OFFICE.

The Post Office keeps the boys busy and entertained and at Canada letters for the following still awai their owners:

Mr. Fred Malane, Capt. Morrison, Mr. H. A. Owen, Mr. Tom Rutherford, Mr. Victor Sullivan, Mr. Frank Pope, Mr. Harry Theobald, Mr. Arthur Costello, Mr. Eunice Reynolds, Mr. Vince O'Toole.

RED CROSS TEA WAS A SUCCESS

Miss Melton and Mrs. L. Mitchell were the hostesses last night, and yesterday afternoon of a Red Cross tea at Mrs. Melton's home, 567 Patterson street, and a considerable sum of money was realized from the large number who came in. The dining room, in which Miss Melton and Mrs. Mitchell poured tea, was most artistic with its appropriate decorations of Red Crosses.

During the afternoon and evening Miss Melton played some delightful selections on the piano and sang some much appreciated solos. The receipts from the tea will be devoted to buying wool for socks to be sent by the Red Cross of All Saints.

THE FRENCH OFFICIAL

Germans Made Several Raids in the Champagne Region—All Enemy Efforts Repulsed

PRISONERS TAKEN

(Canadian News.)

Paris, April 18.—After a preliminary bombardment a strong German detachment attempted to advance last night near Corbeny, on the Aisne front. To-day's official statement says the attack was broken up by the French fire. The statement follows:

In the region of Corbeny, the French caught under their fire and dispersed a strong German detachment which attempted to approach the first lines after artillery preparations.

The Germans undertook several raids in Champagne and on the right bank of the Meuse, especially to the east of the Caurieres wood and near Damloup. All the enemy's efforts were repulsed, and the positions remained in our hands.

North west of Reise, in Lorraine, we succeeded in several excursions into the German lines and took a certain number of prisoners.

"20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" Well Worth Seeing.

The wonderful picture "20,000 Leagues under the Sea," based on Jules Verne's famous novel of the same name, shown at the Grand last night, proved a novelty in the film world, inasmuch as many of the scenes depicted were taken under the water. The possibilities of submarine photography were illustrated by the pictures, some of the scenes being most wonderfully clear. The feature event of the film story, a battle between a black pearl diver and a great octupus was a thriller. As in the original story a submarine plays a big part in the action of the picture. Some sections of the films show the denizens of the deep swimming around in their native element and well worth the price of admission. The picture will be repeated to-night and should attract a big crowd to the Grand.

What appears a saving in price, is actually an extravagance when you buy ordinary, poor tea. Salada yields twice as many cups to the pound, hence its economy.

BANDSMEN, ATTENTION

It has been decided to increase the present strength of the 57th Regt. Band from 30 men to 50, and with this object in view all bandsmen in the City are cordially invited to become members. Further particulars on application at the Conservatory of Music. m.th.s.-tf.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, APRIL 18TH, 1918.

A DIRECT HIT.

The wit of Dr. Michael Clarke and the well known propensity of Mr. J. H. Burnham to talk on almost every subject that comes before Parliament, combined to add a little gayety to the proceedings of the House the other day. Dr. Clarke was discussing the tariff, a favourite subject of his, and Mr. Burnham had been giving him the benefit of a rapid fire of questions, when the man from Red Deer bowled him over with a direct hit that gave both sides of the House an opportunity to laugh. "Do you believe in control?" Mr. Burnham asked.

"I believe in control of speech, when you have nothing to say," was the prompt reply, and the member for West Peterboro subsided, amid the delighted laughter of the House.

SHORTER HOURS.

The action of the management of Richard Hall and Son, the Turnbull Company, and Cressman's, in arranging shorter hours for their employees during the summer months, as announced today, possesses some most commendable features. Beginning on May 1st, and continuing until the end of August, the three stores will open at 8.15 o'clock daily, and will close at 5 o'clock on the first five business days of the week, and at 9 o'clock on Saturday. The hours now in force are from 8 o'clock to 6, except on Saturdays, when the stores do not close until 9.30 or 10. The new schedule makes the employees's day an hour and fifteen minutes shorter and the extra time will allow them to take a bigger part in the Greater Production campaign. Needless to say, they are delighted at the arrangement, and the good treatment given by the employers will be rewarded by a keener attention to business, and more faithful service as a result. To the house wife, the change in the hour of closing will be a blessing. Under present conditions, with most of the factories closing at five o'clock, many women have had to prepare an early supper for the merchanic member of the household, followed by another after 6 o'clock, fr the store worker. Now, that the time of closing has been made the same the difficulty will be eliminated in many houses.

The shortening of work hours, which has become very general, should not lead to any curtailment of business in the mercantile or business world, and the same thing applies to the manufacturing interests as well. Rather it might be looked for hat more will be accomplished. It will mean that more systematic, speedier and economical ways of doing business will require to be in operation in all the stores and factories, and the employees have, no doubt recognized the part they will play in the new order of things by giving their best services to the institution with which they are identified.

A WORTHY CAUSE.

The fierce fighting near Ypres, upon the result of which the fate of the Channel ports may depend, will recall to Canadians those gray days in April three years ago, when the practically untried Canadian first division, left with its flank in the air as a result of the breaking of the French Algerian troops, and meeting for the first time the terrible German gas, barred the way to Calais, and won imperishable fame by their magnificent fighting against terrible odds.

The third anniversary of that great battle is to be observed in Peterboro on Saturday by the Great War Veterans' Tag Day, the money to be devoted to the Veterans' relief fund. The Veterans have chosen a most appropriate manner of commemorating the event, as the work of taking care of those upon whom the full force of the war has fallen, is one that should receive every encouragement. Men who held the gaps at Ypres, as a measure of gratitude to part in the campaign, and it is hoped that the citizens of Peterboro will be generous in their contributions.

In honour of the men who were spared to come back, in memory of those who fell gloriously fighting, at Ypers, as a measure of gratitude to the gallant lads from this city who are now holding the heights of Vimy, let Peterboro's contribution on Saturday to the relief fund be a notable and adequate one.

PASSCHENDAELE ABANDONED.

The announcement that the British lines east of Ypres have fallen back to new positions on account of the German gains further south—involving a retirement from the Passchendaele Ridge — will be regretted throughout the Empire, but will be especially keenly felt in Canada, because the capture of Passchendaele by the Canadians last October, represented one of the most glorious feats of arms yet performed by General Currie's corps.

It will be remembered that the Canadians, who were holding the Lens sector, were brought north in October for the purpose of taking the coveted ridge which dominated the country for many miles to the east. The task was brilliantly carried out by the Maple Leaf troops in the face of a most determined redstance and amid weather conditions that baffled description. For weeks it had been raining, turning the country into a vast morass. Shell holes became ponds, and the attacking troops waded through mud to their waists towards their objectives, wresting pill-box after pill-box from the Germans until finally the ridge was in possession of the Canadians, who, after accomplishing this magnificent success, were sent back to their old positions at Lens, where they now are ready for the expected onslaught of the enemy.

Passchendaele represented a very heavy toll of Canadian lives and it is a matter of deep regret that the fortunes of war made it necessary for the British command to order the position to be abandoned. The new line of defence very closely, it is believed, approximates that held by the first Canadian division three years ago this month, when the Canadians made such a gallant defence against great odds. The great German drive in the north is over ground that is thoroughly familiar to the Canadians, in fact there is hardly a yard of the Ypres salient that has not been dyed red with Canadian blood.

CRITICISM.

According to the Review's definition, any criticism, however lioness it may be, of the Government, is "senseless political twaddle." The people at large, although they returned the Union Government to power, will hardly agree with the opinion of our local contemporary. During the past few weeks there has been a great deal of criticism directed at the administration of the Military Service Act, at the circumstances surrounding the resignation of Mr. W. F. O'Connor, and at the tolerance with which Bourassa has been treated. Much of this criticism came from papers which have been, and are, warmly supporting the Government, but which have not allowed the fact that they had endorsed Union Government during the recent campaign to prevent them from expressing their opinion on matters in which they felt the administration needed a reprimand.

The vigorous articles of such newspapers as the Ottawa Journal-Press and Journal, and the Toronto Globe on the necessity of a more rigid application of the Military Service Act, have had much to do with the decision of the Government as announced yesterday. Papers of that characters are not satisfied to be mere claquers on behalf of the Government—a position which the Review is apparently content to occupy.

There will be general agreement with our contemporary's assertion that "the time has come for united action on the part of all classes, all sorts and conditions of Canadians," but, at the same time, the administratin of Canada's war efforts will be helped rather than hindered by criticism that is constructive in its nature.

Finding fault with a measure, the inefficiency of which has been demonstrated by the drastic changes that are being made, does not surely justify the description "foolish and puerile attempts to stir up dissatisfaction."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Through one of those mysterious accidents that the inner workings of a newspaper are subject to, an article on "Conscription in Ireland," intended for publication the day after Lloyd George's anouncement, found its way only yesterday into these columns, where its belated appearance may have been the subject of some comment.

The City Council is to be commended on its decision to keep a record of coal deliveries. Not to have done so would have been to put too much confidence in human nature.

With the Motor Show, the Spring Fair, the Y.M.C.A. campaign and the Veterans Tag Day, all in one week, the public has a chance to go the limit in living.

CLEMENCEAU'S BIG GUN.

(New York Sun)

Premier Clemenceau's gun carries further and does deadlier execution than the vaunted masterpiece of the Krupp atelier. M. Clemenceau has fired the longest shot of the war and he has brought down a Hapsburg emperor.

EATING THEIR BIT.

(Smith Mountain correspondent of the Wallowa, Ore., Sun.)

There are some here who are getting awfully tired of the corn bread diet. They say that they've eaten it until we're beginning to get silky around the ears, but if it will help lick the kaiser, why, bring on your Johnny-cake; we'll eat it till we tassel out on top.

DELIBERATE WASTE.

(Hamilton Herald)

In view of the facts that several thousand chickens in cold storage at Winnipeg and a hundred thousand pounds of fruit and vegetables in cold storage at Toronto were recently destroyed because they had been allowed to go rotten, doesn't it seem rather trivial to talk of the 'criminal waste' in the garbage cans? Here is wholesale, deliberate waste, probably for purposes of profit.

IN SAME CLASS.

(Ottawa Journal Press)

Emperor Charles of Austria, like most public men, has to find out by bitter experience that it is dangerous to express important opinions in writing, especially when you have a wicked partner.

After this we put "war experts'" opinions and race track tips in the same class.

CHINESE WISDOM.

New York Herald)

Canadians who oppose the granting of hereditary titles are real democrats. China long ago realized the uselessness of a hereditary nobility, and provided that all titles should "wear themselves out" in succeeding generations. There is much merit in the Oriental philosophy which sees in success an honour to ancestry, not to posterity. Posterity has the better chance when it is made to hustle for itself.

Turks Burn Great Library.

Authentic news has been received from Bagdad that the famous Oriental library, collected there by the Carmelite Fathers, was burned by the Turks. The Carmelite Fathers, if may be explained, went to Bagdad in the seventeenth century. The library consisted of more than 20,000 volumes on subjects connected with Mesopotamia, consisting in the main of French and English, but also some Italian and German works and including many rare books. The most important part of the collection was the 2,753 Arabic manuscrips, most of them unique, which were bought in the course of last century at a cost of thousands of pounds. There were the works of Arabic scholars written between the seventh and eleventh centuries; most of them had not been printed and no other copy of them exists.

It is not entirely clear how the library was destroyed, but the following are the known facts: During the night of March 6-7 two Turkish soldiers who were billeted in the library in order, as was alleged, to take care of its contents, took books and manuscripts and used them as fuel for their fire. From this, it is believed, arose a conflagration which consumed the contents of the library. But there is some evidence that the destruction was intentional. On Feb. 28 Falk Bey had been appointed by Khalil Pacha, the Turkish commander, to be his aide-de-camp. Immediately on assuming this office he wrote a letter to Father Anastase Marie (a Carmelite monk and a native of Bagdad), who had some days earlier returned from internment, ordering him, to return all the books which he had borrowed from the Carmelite library, and threating to send him, in case of refusal, "to the remotest spot of the Sublime Empire." Eight days after the borrowed books were returned no book was to be seen out of a library of more than 20,000 volumes—all were gone."

Best Musical Play Of Season Is "You're In Love" Coming To Grand On Tuesday

"Delightful, Tuneful, Crisp and Melodious Offering" is London, Ont. View of Big Musical Comedy---Happy Compound of Melody, Nonsense and Pretty Girls

The London Free Press has the following to say of the musical play, "You're in Love," which comes to The Grand next Tuesday:

The best musical play of the season was the verdict of a large audience of "You're in Love," the delightful, tuneful, crisp and melodious offering at the Grand Theatre. There is a fund of catchy, haunting melodies, that have a dash and swing that start the feet moving in time, and a barrel of wholesome fun that keeps every one in the best of humour. There is solace for the tired in the happy compound of melody, nonsense and pretty girls, while the background of handsome gowns, scenery and effects is a delight to the eye.

Otto Harbach wrote the book and lyrics, and Rudolf Friml the music. Both of the creators have done perfect work, and it would be difficult to draw a line fine enough to differentiate as to who created the most winning part of the entertainment.

The music is the danceful, rhythmetic kind. It overflows with youth and happiness, while retaining a daintiness and charm that is all its own. The comedy sparkles and is in the hands of a most competent coterie of artists.

Enough Plot.

There is sufficient plot to build a comedy around without any music and as it slowly entwines the situations become more complicated and humorous.

The love of Lacey Hart and Dorothy and Hobby Douglass and Georgiana forms the basic part of the story. Lacey and Dorothy are married through the process of elopment, but Hobby and Georgiana are frustrated in their efforts to wed by a non-believer in love in the person of a hard-hearted aunt. Finally, the aunt gives consent to a contract in which live is relegated to the atmosphere. The trouble which ensues as a result is fraught with many hearty laughs.

The first act takes place in the lobby of a California hotel. The stellar number of the evening, "You're in Love," is introduced during this period by Ralph Whitehead and Edna Pendleton. Both are the possessors of finely-trained voices. Mr. Whitehead enunciates perfectly in his song, and his acting is natural and easy. Miss Pendleton is dainty and chic and became a warm favourite with her first number.

Charming Artist.

Peggy Pates as Dorothy is a charming singer and a clever dancer. In the last act, assisted by Harold Williams, she does a bewitching number. Mr. Williams also sings "Drift Along" in a most artistic and finished manner. He possesses a remarkably sweet voice and was repeatedly encored.

Alice Johnston, as the hard-hearted aunt, is most humorous. Her interpretation of the man-hater stands in a class by itself. Billy Cotton as Hobby, gave an excellent a unt of a light comedy part and introduced some clever dancing. Raymond Crane, in an eccentric part, scored the hit of the evening among the comedians. He can sing, dance and, in fact, do everything to create a legitimate laugh and do it well.

Harry Hamlin sang "Loveland" and delighted the audience. The chorus was the best that has been seen here this season from a singing, dancing, and attractive point of view. A male sextette was most effective.

The best of the songs were "Married Life," "You're in Love," "Things You Must Not Do," "A Year's a Long Time," "Boola Boo," "Loveland," and "I'm Only Dreaming."

WEATHER FORECASTS FOR THE FARMER.

Appreciating the dependence of the farmers upon weather conditions, the Ontario Railway Board has had provision made for the phoning of the weather forecasts every days to all Bell exchanges in the province.

These daily weather bulletins are furnished by the Meteorological Bureau to a majority of the exchanges of the Bell Telephone Co., in Ontario, which in turn have connecting arrangements with approximately 500 rural telephone systems within the jurisdiction of the Board.

This means that every farmer coming under the provision will be able to receive from his local central the official forecast of the weather, as soon as it is sent out in the morning absolutely free of charge. The importance of this will be realized as time goes on and the people learn to take advantage of it.

Deceased, who was a comparatively young man of 45, was in his usual health when he got up in the morning. Shortly after breakfast he complained of illness. His brother-in-law, Dr. George E. WHO WOULD THINK of using wood, coal, gas or coal oil when electricity is cheaper? In some places the rate for electricity makes the prices one-half the cost of gas.

ELECTRICITY AT THREE CENTS per k.w. is equal to coal at $7.75 per ton. At two cents it is equal to gas at 90 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, not taking into consideration the advantages of electrical cooking, the shrinkage of meat, the labour caused with dust in handling coal and ashes and the poisonous fumes of gas.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

The Most Spectacular Fighting Of The War Is Now In Progress

The Rattle of Machine Guns and the Bass Thunder of Heavy Artillery is a Worthy Orchestra to the Greatest Drama of All Times

A VIVID DESCRIPTION

(United Press).
(By William Philip Simms).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES NEAR BAILLEUL, April 18. — The fighting now progressing is the most spectacular of the war. From a hill top near Bailleul it can be observed in pantomime as though from a balcony seat. Miles upon miles from around the Passchendaele salient — from which the British were voluntarily withdrawn—to far southwards of Bailleul, is visible to the naked eye. With field glasses the infantry can plainly be seen on the move.

The Battles of Cambrai, Verdun, and Messines, were all in a hill country, affording the scantiest glimpses but from elevations about Bailleul the war's most dramatic panorama stretches out with scarcely a tree clump obscuring the view.

ABANDONED COWS.

Across fertile miles of farms, men are visible going into action. Shells burst in pasture lands. Abandoned cows cease grazing and stare in mild astonishment at the strangers. The sky is filled with black and white cloud puffs and with low flying airplanes, in contact with infrantry, dropping signal rockets to point out targets to the artillery.

The rattle of machine guns and the bass thunder of heavy artillery, combined with the ear splitting volleying "bangs" of field guns, is a worthy orchestra to the greatest drama of all time.

Flashes from guns and howitizers cleverly concealed or frankly out in the open, leap out dazzingly— sometimes startlingly near—while the horizon flickers like thousands of pocket mirrors flashing in the sunlight.

A GERMAN SHELL.

In the foreground a German shell crumples far into a farm house. The former occupants probably are tramping along the roads, regretting they ever left their home. The house gives off a white smoke for a few minutes, then the flag of flames mounts towards the sky.

Gas shells flop in indylic fields in full cultivation. Strangling vapours are trailing heavily across the sprouting crops and apparently a fearless crow is due for the surprise of his life. The whole business looks unreal from this hill top. It gives the impression of a monster open air spectacle in commemoration of an important centennial. This is enhanced when I see a gunner duck from a blazing battery, bucket in hand and chase an ownerless red cow —foraging for the supper milk, like an awkward stage hand engaged in some ridiculous thing in the midst of an Irvingesque tragedy.

DEATH AND WAR.

All the while you are standing in front of a tiny whitewashed and thatched cottage, feeling alone in a world where everything is soldiers, death and war. You turn to go and halt—startled, peering through a little square panel window you see outlined against the darkened interior the white face of an aged woman. Behind her is that of a bent old man, staring fixedly toward the planes. They have lived in that cottage too long to leave it.

A little way down the sloop German shells burst above a cottage, bits of tiled roof fly in every direction. Even now the enemy's artilery is registering on the hill.

2ND LIEUT. J. V. DALLIN
Formerly of the 93rd Band and now in training with the Royal Flying Corps at Montrose, N.B., Scotland.

A TABBY CAT.

A tabby cat licking a discarded "bully beef" can scampers off through a hole in the hedge. Even he is deserting the old place, but inside the cottage the old man lays his head on the woman's shoulder. Together they watch the fields below. You move away, but something makes you walk on tip toes. For these folks and what they symbolize, the end of the world seems to have come.

DROP IN PRICE OF GASOLINE AT BANKS'

Mr. C. R. Banks of the Banks Garage, in a large advertisement in yesterday's paper, announced a substantial reduction in the price of gasoline of 2 cents a gallon. The new price of 36 cents is for cash. Motorists buying on charge account will still pay 38c a gallon.

Mr. Banks is taking this step in order to try and eliminate the expense of the charge system, with all its attendant extra work and worry. In order to take advantage of this price it is not necessary to buy coupons or books, which one is likely to lose. Bring the money and get the benefit of the reduced price—that's all.

The above must be good news for motor car owners and others. While all other commodities keep soaring, going up, elevator fashion, it will be refreshing to all users to learn that gasoline can take a drop. This is the message Mr. Banks sends out tonight. Make the most of it—push it along. 2d-1w

COUCH-SPENCE CASE HAS BEEN WITHDRAWN

Both Parties Agreed Evidence Might Injure Church—Hope to Find the Guilty One—History of Case

Ottawa, April 17.—Through the efforts of Hartley Dewart, K.C., of Toronto, special counsel for the plaintiff, the $10,000 libel action brought by the Rev. Isaac Couch, a Methodist minister, formerly of Ottawa, against J. C. Spence, principal of the Fifth Avenue Public School, was completely withdrawn by mutual consent of both parties concerned yesterday afternoon. At six o'clock, George F. Henderson, K.C., counsel for the defendant, appeared before Mr. Justice Rose in the Supreme Court of Ontario, and moved the withdrawal of the action, each party to pay his own costs.

Negotiations between counsel were underway for about two weeks before the plaintiff and the defendant were brought together.

The first conference between the parties to the action was held at noon, but they were unable to agree at that time. Other meetings were held during the afternoon, and the final agreement was drawn up at about five o'clock.

HOPE TO FIND GUILTY ONE.

In a statement to the press regarding the conditions of the withdrawal Mr. Honeywell said

"As the defendant, J. C. Spence, on his examination under oath for discovery, stated that all that he intended to rely upon at the trial was the anonymous letters, this agreement is a complete settlement of the differences which caused the action and shows a disposition on the part of all parties to the action to clear the matter up, and as far as possible to remove any differences or hard feelings, which no doubt originated in misunderstandings.

"It is to be hoped, however, that the author of these anonymous letters may be discovered and punished."

The statement authorizing the withdrawal reads as follows:

TO PRESERVE HARMONY.

"In the opinion of counsel, the trial of this action will not result in better Christian feeling or more harmonious conditions in the Methodist churches concerned in Ottawa. With the concurrence and consent of both parties, it is therefore agreed that the present action shall be withdrawn, each party to pay his own costs.

"Mr. Spence disclaims any intention of asserting that Rev. Mr. Couch was the writer or the author of the anonymous letters in question, but rather intended to suggest that the inconclusiveness of the investigations should be definitely removed.

"Mr. Spence accepts Mr. Couch's absolute assurance that he did not write the letters in question, and Mr. Couch accepts Mr. Spence's assurance that he wrote to the recording steward at Owen Sound from a sense of duty, and desiring to produce a finality of the investigation.

"Counsel are authorized by Rev. Basil W. Thompson to state that he has advised Mr. Spence to agree to this disposition of the action. So far as the parties to this action are concerned, this is to terminate all civil and church proceedings.

"Ottawa, April 16th, 1918.

"(Signed) "H. H. Dewart, Counsel for plaintiff.

"G. F. Henderson, Counsel for defendant."

HISTORY OF CASE.

The action originated out of a letter written by Mr. Spence to the recording steward of a Methodist church in Owen Sound, stating that an un-Christian condition had developed in McLeod street Methodist Church in Ottawa during the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Couch, and advising the Owen Sound church not to install Rev. Mr. Couch as their minister. As a result of the letter, according to Rev. Mr. Couch, the latter was deprived of the pastorate of the Owen Sound church.

In the statement of defence and particulars made by the defendant a number of counter claims were filed, but all of these, with one exception, were withdrawn. The defence as stated in the above agreement, was to be made solely on a charge that Rev. Mr. Couch had been the writer or the author of a series of anonymous letters, but on Mr. Couch giving him his word that he had not written the letters, Mr. Spence agreed to withdraw entirely.

It is understood that the plaintiff was prepared to submit the evidence of several handwriting experts to prove that he had not written the letters.

TWO NOTED RIVERS

Tagliamento and Livenza Become Important in Italy.

One Stream of No Value Commercially, While the Other Is Known for Many Tributaries.

The National Geographic society at Washington has issued the following war geography bulletins on the Tagliamento and Livenza rivers, mentioned in the cable dispatches concerning the German drive into Italy:

"The Tagliamento river, whose flooded banks served as a rampart for the retreating Italians for only a few days, and which was crossed by the Austro-German forces, is a stream of no value commercially. It is one of many small rivers rising in the Carnic Alps and flowing through the Venetian plain into the Adriatic. Its headwaters are near Mount Clapsavon, about sixty-five miles northwest of its entrance into the Adriatic, but the course of the stream is meandering, flowing first to the east and then south through a marshy valley, thus traversing a distance of 100 miles.

"Just 120 years ago the Tagliamento figured prominently in another great military campaign in northern Italy. It was during Napoleon's campaign of 1797 that re-enforcements were greatly needed by the French. Bernadotte, who afterward was placed by Napoleon on the throne of Sweden as Charles XIV, led his army with signal dispatch from the banks of the Rhine to his commander in chief, and at the passage of the Tagliamento won enduring distinction.

"The Tagliamento passes no important cities of Venetia. The most important of the small towns that squat upon its marshy banks are Venzone, 20 miles by rail from the Austro-Italian frontier; Spilimbergo and Latisana. The last-named is equidistant from Venice and Trieste on the 100-mile railway which connects these two important cities. The Tagliamento flows 15 miles to the west of Udine, the first Italian city of importance to fall before the onrushing Teutonic forces in the present offensive.

"In ancient times the Tagliamento was known as Tilaventus.

"The Livenza, like the Tagliamento, is one of many streams which rise in the Carnic Alps and flow through the delta region of Venetia. Its course is not more than seventy-five miles in length, but it has numerous tributaries, chief among those on the east being the Meduna, the Fiume and the Sile, while the Monticano and the Meschia are affluents of the west bank. The point at which the Livenza mingles its waters with the Adriatic is only 228 miles northeast of Italy's priceless jewel city, Venice.

"The plain lying between the parallel courses of the Tagliamento and the Livenza is dotted with Italian towns of great historic and art interest. Chief among these are Pordenone, probably the Pontus Naonis of the ancients, but now many miles from the sea; Portogruaro, San Vito, Azzano and the ruins of Concordia Saggittaria, the ancient Roman military station."

Work and Play.

Variation of types of work properly adjusted will often substitute for what is generally known as play, says the New York Times. For instance, one's brain center may become weary at a monotonous occupation, and a decided change of occupation, notwithstanding it be what we usually call work, will permit the first brain center involved to rest while another works. But we come back to the fact that what most people regard as play is an occupation that they are not required to perform, and, it would seem from a psychological standpoint to give greater rest if it be an occupation that is particularly useless from the standpoint of producing economic results. Therefore there should be time set aside in the work of the day, no matter whether it be varied or not, when the environment may be changed and play should be taken up.

Did Hard "Bit" for Flag.

After going without tobacco several weeks, so the money could be used to purchase a large American flag, the old inmates of the Hempstead (L. I.) poor farm recently had the pleasure of seeing the colors break from the flagpole in front of the only home they know.

Some of the men are eighty-five years old and the loss of their tobacco was a great hardship. The old fellows talked of the deeds they had seen done for the colors in the Civil war and heard of in the Revolutionary war, as they planned the pleasure that was to be theirs. The overseers of the poor, Daniel J. Morrison had Frank Hammill, after the flag raising, gave the patriotic old men fine cigars and they started to make up for the lost smokes.

The Blue Cross.

The Blue Cross fund was organized in 1912 in Constantinople by Lady Lowther, the wife of the British ambassador in Turkey at that time. At the beginning the fund was used for the Balkan wars and at the beginning of this war was turned over to the British and French governments to work in co-operation with their army veterinary corps and was immediately accepted. The president of the organization is Lady Smith Dorrien, but she has authorized Mrs. Elphinstone Maitland to come to this country to form the American branch of this fund and raise funds.

Baby's Own Tablets Prized By Mothers

Mrs. Henry Vanreader, Rodney, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past five years and prize them very much. They have proved of such value to me that I always keep them in the house." Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets she would use nothing else. They are thorough but mild in action and never fail to make the sickly baby well. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Ladies Will Continue Work

NO FOUNDATION FOR RUMOUR THAT CANADIAN FIELD COMFORTS COMMISSION IS TO BE WITHDRAWN.

The Minister of Militia in London, England, has sent word to the Canadian press that there is no foundation for the rumours spread in Canada that the Canadian Field Comforts Commission presided over by Miss Plummer and Miss Arnoldi, were shortly to be withdrawn from England. The Ministry states these ladies will continue the splendid work which has been such great benefit in increasing the Canadian soldiers' comforts.

On the 20th March, 1918, the Peterboro Progressive Club sent to the Canadian Field Comforts Commission 153 pairs socks, 15 stretcher caps, 16 day shirts; also towels (20), and a large consignment of absorbent cotton and batting.

On the 10th of April two bales were sent to Moore Baracks Hospital, containing a large quantity of cotton batting, 283 sponges, 156 compresses, 72 handkerchiefs, 16 many-tailed bandages, 14 surgical bandages, 200 mouth wipes.

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintzman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street.—B. H. Britton, Manager. 'Phone 258.

DOMINIOM POLICE SWOOP DOWN ON KITCHENER AND WATERLOO

Several Evaders of the Military Service Act Were Garnered in To-day—Pool Rooms Searched

POLICE STATION FULL

(Special to The Examiner.)

KITCHENER, April 18.—The Dominion Police are quietly gathering together their forces for a swoop into the pool rooms, rural districts and industrial centres of Kitchener and Waterloo. At noon to-day before the citizens of Kitchener realized that any extension of the work of arresting suspected evaders of the Military Service Act was under way, the Dominion Police had gathered in over half a dozen, and the police station received more guests in half a day than in any other day since the Act came into force.

To-day Inspector E. Taylor from Toronto arrived with additional police from Military District No. 1. This morning Oscar Wettlaufer, a young man of Kitchener, was taken under escort to London, and his uncle and sister accompanied him. He was discovered last night. It turns out that he really is a deserter, having served two weeks with a unit in London. He was hiding in a barn.

So far as the city police are concerned the activities of the Dominion men were only known this morning. Last night, no news of the action by the Dominion Police had been received, and only two members of the force who have been engaged in the work for some time were known to be in the city.

WANT DRINKING WATER INVESTIGATED

LABOUR COUNCIL HOLD REGULAR SESSION LAST NIGHT.

At the regular meeting of the Trades and Labour Council held last evening it was decided to ask Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, to investigate the condition of the drinking water in the local factories. The investigation is to apply to the conditions under which the water is supplied rather than the water itself.

CLOSE ICE CREAM PARLORS.

A deputation will wait upon the City Council to advocate the closing of ice cream parlors on Sunday.

ELECTRICAL HEATING.

Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager of the Utilities Commission, will be asked to address the City Council at the next regular meeting on the question of electrical heating.

PRETENDED DETECTIVE IS FINED AT MONTREAL

MONTREAL, April 18.—Edwin B. Kinney of New York, who claimed that he was a medical student at Fordham College before the war, broke out, was convicted in the Police Court here on a charge of having obtained board and lodging to the value of $55.35 at the Windsor Hotel, under the pretence that he was a secret service officer employed by Col. Burns, and was condemned to pay a fine of $100 and costs or spend there months in jail.

SINKING OF LUSITANIA IN MOTION IN COURT

NEW YORK, April 18.—The Admiralty Branch of the Federal Court held a hearing here on the motion of the Cunard Steamship Company to be relieved of all liability in damage suits for $6,000,000 resulting from the sinking of the steamship Lusitania by a German submarine, or at least to have its liability limited. The company contends that the sinking of the vessel was not due to negligence. The hearing will be resumed to-morrow.

STANDARD HAS BEEN LOWERED

In the urgent need for more aviators it has been decided to accept men otherwise fit who have not the matriculation standing. They may become cadets in the Royal Air Service and when qualified will be flight sergeants.

ORIGIN OF OLD TERMS.

Gerrymandering Derived from Name of Massachusetts Governor.

"Bolsism" as a term of reproach promises to break into the English language along with many other words never thought of before the war. Therefore the activties of the Kaiser's agent will probably be immortalized in future dictionaries, as were the acts of Judas and Simon Magus. Scattered through the English language are many words derived from proper names, some resulting from derogatory acts and some from just the opposite.

"Lexow," comparatively of recent coinage, is familiar to almost all New Yorkers as the name of the author of the state law which started one of the largest and most sensational political investigations ever held in the Empire State.

"Gerrymander," from the name of a Massachusetts governor, has been used for more than 100 years in the United States to mean the division of election districts in an unnatural and unfair way for political purposes. It has been proved, however, that Governor Gerry was not entitled to the dubious honor of having the word named after him. John Fiske gives the origin of gerrymander in this way:

"In 1812, when Gerry was governor of Massachusetts, the Republican (corresponding to the Democratic in modern nomenclature) Legislature redistributed the districts in such wise that the shapes of the towns forming a single district in Essex county gave to the district a somewhat dragonlike contour. This was indicated on a map of Massachusetts which Benjamin Russell, an ardent Federalist and editor of the Sentinel, hung up over the desk in his office. The celebrated painter Gilbert Stuart observing the uncouth figure, added with his pencil a head, wings and claws, and exclaimed: 'That will do for a salamander.' 'Better say a Gerrymander,' growled the editor and the outlandish name, thus duly coined, soon came into general currency."

"Lynch" is said to be derived from a Virginian named Lynch who took the law into his own hands.

A New Egg Pack.

The safe delivery of eggs to be sent through the post will be ensured and their period of freshness prolonged at the same time by the use of a new system which has recently been patented and is now being called to the attention of egg dealers and shippers, says the Scientific American. The machine wraps the eggs in a long strip of paper, the egg being entirely covered by the paper which is twisted about them, making them resemble a length of sausages more than anything else. The paper in which they have been encased has been dampened, and in this condition the eggs are draped round a collapsible wire frame. As the paper dries it becomes taut, and the eggs are securely held between the arms of the frame. When they are placed in a box for shipment they are supported so that they cannot come in contact with each other or the box, and they are thus enabled to withstand a rough experience which would be disastrous under ordinary conditions. The frames are made in one dozen and crate sizes.

Black Opal Not Unlucky.

Now that black opals have so suddenly come into vogue, it is well to understand that there is no superstition in the wearing of them. It is assumed that the basic color, black, removes any ill omen that is commonly associated with the white stone.

Black is so fashionable in women's wardrobes that black opals make a pleasing accessory to one's dress.

Someone has said that these stones reflect the glory of all the other jewels. They have been called the "spirits of the night, with souls of the day." It is not generally known that black opals come only from Australia, and that they are not as common as those of lighter hue, in more general use.—Daily Eastern Argus.

SUPPORT AND SUBSTITUTION.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have read with much interest your leading article to-day on this subject. No doubt the proposal to relegate the Lady of the house to the farm and permit another lady to take her place would be popular enough with some of the married men, but I am not quite so sure that mater familias would approve.

I saw some time ago that Germany is proposing a system of "Secondary" wives, your proposal certainly has the merit of keeping the "wives" apart. Still it all shows that everybody is wondering how the "unclaimed treasures" will get on when all the marriageable men are killed off unless some scheme is thought of to enable the unmarried girls to do their duty to their country.

I also have a scheme, and as a single young woman would like to tell it. It is this—the world will not be worth living in whether we win the war or not if thousands of girls are condemned to "waste their sweetness on the desert air" on account of all the young men being killed. I for one would far rather go and fight—I would just as willingly be killed myself as have my brother or some one dearer, killed—there are worse things than being killed, I could do as well as many of the puny boys I have seen conscripted lately, and there are many women quite as able as the men to fight, and quite as courageous and self-sacrificing. I cannot see why we are not as able to serve a gun or point a rifle as any man, and I think you men are far too egotistic in thinking you are so much superior to us.

I am willing to report for service overseas any time a Battalion of Amazons is organized, but I am not prepared to take a chance running the household of some married lady that chances to be a farmeress, even if her husband is good looking and nice, because although I am ready to fight the Huns I am not prepared for civil war.

Yours truly,
JESSIE SMITH.

TO CUT OFF PAY.

Of Men in Civil Service Now Serving Overseas.

As the result of an Order-in-Council passed at Ottawa, men holding positions in the civil service and who are serving overseas will not after June 30th receive their salary, or even a portion of it, in addition to their military pay.

This will effect a number of men in Peterborough who, prior to enlisting, were members of the civil service, including post office employees.

DON'T CAMOUFLAGE LICENSE PLATE BY SPARE TIRE.

Motorists should be careful that the spare tire on the rear of the automobile does not hide a part or all of the number on the license plate, advises the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company.

Owners of automobiles should also see that the plate is properly lighted at night. The police in many sections are rigidly enforcing the law and motorists will find that paying a fine is an expensive way to learn of such mistakes.

WON'T CALL MARRIED MEN YET.

There is at present no official grounds for the report that the next batch to be summarily called out, without regard for exemption will be married men of the second class between the ages of 20 and 23. It is said to be contrary to the policy of Major-General Mewburn to call upon married men until physically fit unmarried men have been exhausted, especially in the first class.

However, it is in his power to make his selection where he sees fit.

SUCCESS ATTENDS THE SECOND DAY OF THE BIG MOTOR SHOW

Large Crowds Were Present Both Morning and Evening —Music Was Appreciated.

DANCE TO-NIGHT

The second night at the Motor Show saw an even bigger crowd than the previous evening, and all night long one seething procession wandered through and about the booths which did splendid business.

The Orchestra.

One particularly bright spot was the music which, free of charge, has been given by the Conservatory of Music orchestra. Thirty members have spared no pains in perfecting a wide selection of the catchiest, airs and this has gone in no small measure to make the show the brilliant success it is.

Musical Programme.

Added to the splendid music last night a charming little programme was given by Mr. Douglas Carlisle, Miss Helen MacLaren and Mr. Ed. Hanrahan. A speaking tribute to these talented artists was the fact that whichever side of the midway they faced the crowd immediately followed to best hear the solos. Miss McKee and Miss White accompanied the soloists.

The Fashion Show.

Again last night the fashion show was crowded by delighted audiences At the opening of the show the gentlemen showed a decided tendency to hesitate. However, happily curiosity got the better of these and the audiences were made up of about half the sterner sex.

THE CHORUS.

The overall girls made a second big hit last night and brought the crowd just where they wanted them with the catchy music and clever words of Miss Cavanah's parody on "Johnny Get Your Gun."

Girlies get your hoe, get your hoe, get your hoe,
Let us plant the seeds in a row, in a row;
Hear the Food Controller plead
Every vacant lot to seed.
Plant the fields with spuds and with beans and with corn,
We can do this work in the early morn,
Tell our soldiers we're in line
To produce the food this time.

Heed the call; heed the call:
One and all, one and all, heed the call,
For we all are needed—you bet we're needed
To work our gardens big and small.
We can hoe, and we'll show
All the food, all the food we can grow,
For we're ready—oh yes we're ready.
And we won't give in till there's plenty over there.

Girlies get your rake, get your rake get your rake,
Show old Kaiser Bill we're awake we're awake,
Show the men in our home town
They can't keep the women down
Watch us do the work—you will see we won't shirk.
Like our soldier boys, we will be on the alert,
We will show what we can do
For the old Red, White and Blue.

Over here, over here. See the girls See the girls over here.
For they sure are working—you bet they're working
We hope without a single jeer
We can spade, and not afraid
Like a lot of the men who have delayed.
We'll be growing, yes we'll be growing
Lots of food for our soldiers over there.

The Raffles and Prizes.

The raffles and prizes, most of which have not yet been claimed, resulted as follows:

173 won the tyre (unknown); 301 won the lap rug, P. P. Hawn; 397 won the set of chairs (unknown); 58 won a year's subscription to the Examiner (unknown); 119 won the ice cream freezer donated by the De Laval (unknown); 45 won the flag (unknown.)

The holders will greatly simplify matters by calling as soon as possible and getting their prizes.

Dance To-night.

One feature of the show to-night which is bound to draw a big crowd is the cabaret dance in the recreation room. Mr. W. Moher of the Heintzman Co., has very kindly given his services as pianist gratuitiously, and this alone should be enough for those familiar with Mr. Moher's music who will no doubt wish to take advantage of it. Each dance will cost 10 cents.

A Bigger Programme.

A bigger programme than ever has been provided for this evening. The soloists will include Miss Florence Scott, Miss McLaren, Mr. E. Hanrahan, and Mr. D. Carlisle. The musical programme will be much larger and more varied. It will be a whole concert in itself. Mr. Gliddon has secured orchestration parts for all the songs and a musical treat is in store for those who attend to-night.

REVIEW OF EXHIBITS

THE MANNING GARAGE EXHIBIT.

The Motor Show should prove an excellent place to select a car, provided you are already familiar with the important points to consider before making your investment. Many women, especially, who intend to become motor car owners, visited the Motor Show to help to decide what make and model of car they would prefer. They learned that the most important points to be considered in buying a car, are price, appearance, standard manufacture, accessibility, power and flexibility. They were able by deciding in advance upon the approximate price they were prepared to pay, to eliminate a certain number of models from their consideration, and to concentrate on just a certain number. Then by arriving at some preliminary conclusions as to the type of car and motor desired, the number of models to be inspected was still further reduced.

Much attention was paid to the Manning Garage exhibit of the Chevrolet and Dodge Brothers Cars. These two cars seemed to enjoy general favorable criticism, because they had the appearance of being in a "smarter" class of models in which the modern automobile is characterized by highly developed efficiency.

The Chevrolet valve-in-head eight cylinder charms the eye by its light racy appearance, and yet powerful, with extreme flexibility and ease of control. The design of the new Chevrolet eight cylinder is graceful as a novel. The radiator and hood is high; body sides high, with graceful double cowl. The windshield has a mahogany frame, trimmed with nickel. The upper edge of the body is trimmed with mahogany; light in tonneau; genuine leather trim; English khaki top; painted in lustrous Chevrolet green. The parts are extremely accessible from above, and all accessories are conveniently located.

The Dodge Car shows lines that interest as you study them. Up-to-the-minute in design; low in upkeep; high in comfort; speed, durability and resilience. Unusual gasoline and tire mileage, and marked freedom from the repair shop are general characteristics of the Dodge. It is said that $90,000,000 worth of Dodge Brothers' cars have been built and sold in a little more than two years. That looks like "going some."

McLAUGHLIN MOTOR CARS.

Notwithstanding the talk about a shortage of cars and the increase in prices, there does not appear to be any shortage in the number of sales, judging by what Mr. A. Brown, of the A. Brown & Co. garage, says regarding the sales of the McLaughlin car in his territory. Most people who know "Andy" Brown, know him to be a "live wire" in whatever he goes into. This applies with extra force in his automobile performances. To keep a stock of cars on the floor in his garage on Water street for any length of time is simply not worth trying—for, just as soon as a half dozen new cars come in from the factory, room for another half dozen is ready. Time and time again, orders are booked which cannot be filled quickly; and the fatcory keeps pushing up production as fast as labour and material for the McLaughlin can be secured. Rumours fly thick and fast—that the use of passenger cars is to be prohibited by government regulations; that the sale of gasoline is to be restricted; and that the strongest automobile concerns were seeing stormy times ahead.

But the McLaughlin Motor Car Co pay no attention to these rumours, and go right on filling the local and other dealers' garages with the splendid valve-in-the-head passenger and touring cars, which claims to "conserve and use a larger percentage of the power contained in gasoline than any other motor."

The display of the A. Brown & Co. garage was a mark for many admirers. There is a fundamental difference between the McLaughlin and other cars, and that difference is due to the McLaughlin Valve-in-Head motor. The motor differs from the other types of motors in both appearance and action. It is different in appearance because the valves through which gas enters and leaves the cylinders are in the tops, or heads, of the cylinders, whereas in other types of motors these valves are placed in pockets at the side of the cylinder.

Because of this different method of placing the valves in the McLaughlin cylinder, the McLaughlin motor, in action, has two great advantages over all other types of motors. These advantages, Mr. Brown explained to all who sought for information.

Belgian Women Forced to Labor for Conquerors.

The correspondent of the London Times at Amsterdam writes:

"At Blankenberghe, the German forced a great number of servants to leave their situations and tried to compel them to take up the work of unloading, docking, and transportation for the army. The young girls refused and were shut up in the Hotel Belvedere, which serves as a prison. Most of them persisted in their refusal and were liberated; they were requisitioned again and sent to different places, even to the wall of the port of Zeebrugge in order to work there for the Germans. Daughters of farmers and the bourgeoisie from the surrounding country have also been requisitioned.

"The military authorities do not spare even the disabled and ill. The Telegaaf correspondent on the frontier reports that a disabled man who happened to remark that he had only one leg was told that there was work that he could do with his hands. A one-armed man was told: 'We will give you a one-armed comrade and the two of you can do one man's work.'

"The communal school at Dudzeele has been transformed into a penal colony. The building is surrounded with barbed wire, like a prisoner's camp. The chateau near Bruges is also employed as a penal colony."

The Rheinische Westfalische Zeitung recently contained a communication emanating from the Labor Exchange of Cologne, which said in part:

"Industry meets with more and more difficulty in procuring artisans, difficulties that can be remedied only in so far as the supply of labor permits. The central intelligence office for manual labor asked at once that foreign artisans should be called on for aid. These artisans will not be able to replace entirely the German workmen, to say nothing of their demands in respect to wages, which are very often in inverse ratio to their capacities. Experience, moreover, has still to teach us whether the occupied territories will be of advantage for the munition industries. The demand for women workers in the metallurgic industry, as well as in chemical and explosive industries, is very great, and the supply, according to the figures, is still diminished."

No Honest Work Wasted.

No honest work is wasted. Force is never lost. You may see the results you expect, but there are always results when there is effort. Never let yourself think that anything you have done has been in vain. Effort and achievement are inseparable.

Classifying the Jury.

Counsel (addressing jury)—The principal fault of the prisoner has been his unfortunate characteristic of putting faith in thieves and scoundrels of the basest description. I have done. The unhappy man in the dock puts implicit faith in you, gentlemen of the jury.

The Usual Difficulty.

"I wish I had a lot of money!" he said, rather unoriginally, we thought.

"What a selfish wish!" we murmured, echoing bromide with bromide.

"It is not selfish," he asserted. "Indeed, I was thinking how much good I could do if I had money."

"You can do a lot of good as it is," we counseled sagely. "It is not necessary to be rich to do good. There are many, many things you can do to ameliorate suffering and distress. Personal service, and all that sort of thing."

"Yes, yes," he said impatiently. "But nobody will ever hear of it."

Ay, there's the rub!—Exchange.

Another of Belmont's oldest and best known residents passed away on Tuesday morning, in the person of James B. Peoples, aged 71 years. The deceased has been ailing for the past year but the illness resulting in his demise was but of short duration. The funeral took place this afternoon to the Maple Grove cemetery, services being held at the house at 1 o'clock by the Rev. Chas. Adams of Havelock.

W. A. HUNTER.

Word has been received by his brothers of the death of William Anthony Hunter, son of the late Anthony Hunter of North Monaghan, who passed away at his residence, 1121 Vermont street, San Francisco, on April 2nd, after an illness of some months' duration. The late Mr. Hunter was born in North Monaghan, 46 years ago, and left in 1893 to reside in San Francisco. He leaves his wife and three small children, four brothers—Thomas, Albert and George of North Monaghan and Joseph of Portland, Oregon.

The remains were laid at rest in San Francisco on Friday, April 5th.

Lies a loving son and brother,
In his cold and silent grave.

Deserters Rope Ladder

Suspecting that a deserter from the Grenadier Guards was being harbored in a Nottingham house, the police made a search without result. Noticing that the tenant, Sam Peach, showed anxiety to get upstairs, they continued the investigation, and found the deserter, Carter by name, in a room which had a trap door in the ceiling.

A rope ladder dangling down revealed Carter's place of concealment under the roof of the house. In the event of a surprise visit, he was able to go into hiding and draw the ladder after him, and had in this way evaded arrest since last December.

Yesterday Peach and his wife were sent to prison for a month.

Is Safe Investment.

(London Daily Mail.)

It is the duty of the people of the country to deny themselves, save every penny they can, and lend their savings to the State. In that way workers can lay up reserves against the lean days which may come with the end of the war. There could be no safer investment. "When owls shall hoot and foxes litter in St. Paul's"; when Westminster Abbey with all its glorious memories is a crumbled ruin; when Nelson's shadow no longer falls across Trafalgar square; when England forgets him and the mighty host of those whose selfless heroism saved England—then and then only, will the money entrusted to the British State in this hour of need be lost.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy, Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache, and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach causing the formation of gas and indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full oppressive burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excessive development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralise the acid and, make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

Great Britain Is Saving Her Man-Power

Deliberately Holding the Lines With Minimum of Men – Trained and Ready When the Germans Started Their Offensive

HAVE 2,700,000 RESERVES

LONDON, April 19.—P. W. Wilson writes in the London Daily News:

A dozen times a day I am asked to explain the mystery of man-power on the western front. Where are the British and French reserves? Where is the Army of Manoeuvre?

In the British Empire 7,000,000 able-bodied men, most of them young men, have been enrolled for military service. That number is more than the entire population of New York.

These 7,000,000 men have suffered over 2,000,000 casualties. One-third, or 700,000 at least, of these casualties are dead or missing, and this means that Britain has buried more men than, at present, America has transported to Europe, though the comparison is rapidly becoming obsolete. France has buried more men than Britain, while Russia has buried more men than France, Britain and Italy put together.

Subtracting 700,000 dead and missing from the 2,000,000 British casualties, we are left with 1,300,000 wounded. I will assume that 800,000 of these have been discharged from hospitals and that 75 per cent. of them remain in the army. This means that 200,000 are back in civil life. The balance of 500,000 wounded are still under treatment, which means that the loss of effectives through wounds would be 700,000 in all. Add this to the 700,000 dead and missing, and you have a loss through casualties of 1,400,000 up to date.

British in France 3,700,000.

It is probable that 200,000 men have been returned to essential industries. Adding this figure to the above 1,400,000 we arrive at 1,600,000 to be subtracted from 7,000,000. This leaves 5,400,000 men to be accounted for.

We will allow 5 per cent. for sickness, or 270,000, at any given time, which brings us to 5,130,000. Of these I shall reckon that the forces in Mesopotamia, Palestine, Africa, Salonika and Italy, with reserves, absorb 1,130,000 men, bringing down the army of the Wesern front to 4,000,000 men.

Early in 1916 our War Office aimed at a recruiting of 30,000 a week, or 1,500,000 a year. I will assume that we have not enlisted more than 300,000 men in the last six months. These men are still in training or ought to be, and it is only pressure of events that rushes four-month recruits into the trenches. Let us allow 300,000 men for training, reducing the active forces from 4,000,000 to 3,700,000.

Britain holds more than 100 miles of Western front. Two years ago an average of 5,000 men per mile might have been sufficient for the purpose; in Russia the allowance was 3,000 men. To-day Germany concentrates her entire available force against the British line. An average defensive provision of 10,000 men per mile must be secured, or 1,000,000 men, to hold the trenches. Take 1,000,000 from 3,700,000 and 2,700,00 men remain. It is a large number.

Many of these men are well over forty years old and must be classed as non-combatants. Moreover, this battle is not over in a day. Since March 21, it has lasted fully three weeks. The fighting season for 1918 will include at least 200 days. Nobody outside official circles knows what this fighting is costing us each day. Obviously, the published return of 8,000 British casualties for a week is camouflage, and I do not myself doubt that American gallantry will prove more expensive than appears at the time to be the case. Your men have played a larger part in stemming the German tide than is yet recognized. And, however that may be, for many days recently it is clear that the British toll has been well over 10,000 British casualties. Whatever the numeral actually is, you have only to multiply it by 200 to find out how serious is the wastage involved in such bitter fighting. In the first two years of war, French sacrifices were greater than the British. It was so in 1917 and it is even less the case to-day. For Britain, this battle is what President Wilson calls the acid test. You cannot estimate that we shall lose this year fewer than one to one and a half million men or more of our available reserves of 2,700,000.

WOULD LET FARMERS STAY.

Roderick Mackenzie Thinks Men Between 20 and 23 Should Still Be Exempt.

WINNIPEG, April 19.— The farm labour situation will be affected and production will be interfered with by the new military service regulation, according to Roderick Mackeznie, secretary of the Canadian Council of Agriculture. He stated, however, that he would not go so far as to say that the new measure would be opposed. He believed it was in the interests of the country that those farmers between the ages of 20 and 23 who had been previously granted exemption should be permitted to remain on the land.

THE DEATH OF MRS. G. W. MANN

The death occurred suddenly yesterday afternoon of Mrs. G. W. Mann, at her home, lot 14, concession 8, Smith township. The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

ROBERTSON'S RETURN DEMANDED IN BRITAIN

Country Placarded by John Bull With Appeal "Bring Back Robertson"—Britain Begins to Look Round For Someone to Blame

CRITICISM IS GROWING

LONDON, April 19.— The past five days have been the most anxious the British people have known since the beginning of the war. The first phase of the German attack was directed against both the British and French fronts, and British troops have had to bear the whole force of the second attack.

There is no lack of confidence that the British soldiers will do all any men can do. There is the greatest pride in their gallantry and their stubborn defence with backs to the wall against great odds, but as the Germans have continued day after day, nibbling away sectors of the Flanders front, regaining towns small and unimportant themselves, but historic in scenes of bloody and successful battles waged and gained in the past two years by British, Canadians, Australians and South Africans with tremendous costs, the question has forced itself on the public whether it is fair to expect them to continue fighting in this way indefinitely against such superior masses. Another question is whether blame does not rest in high quarters; the soldiers are placed in the position of being outnumbered constantly.

Looking For a Blucher.

There is great anxiety for news of the French reinforcements which Field Marshal Haig told his army were coming to its support. Gen. Maurice, director of military operations at the War Office, yesterday likened the battle to a Waterloo, where all depended on the arrival of a Blucher. If a Blucher should fail to arrive is a contingency which we can hardly contemplate.

But last night's announcement that the French are co-operating with the British in the north gives hope as far as it goes.

In the meantime, the newspapers are discussing the situation with the greatest freedom. The War Cabinet is being criticized sharply by some military experts and editors. Col. Repington, in the Morning Post, says the British forces are greatly inferior in numbers to the Germans, and says this inferiority is due to the refusal of the War Cabinet to act on the advice of the general staff and the French staff for an increase in man-power given months ago.

Want Robertson Back.

Several papers are calling for the return of Sir William Robertson former Chief of the Imperial General Staff. The retirement of Gen. Robertson was followed during the past week by that of Major-Gen. Trenchard, Chief of the Air Staff.

Gen. Trenchard was appointed only three months ago and was welcomed generaly as the one man for the work. He now goes because of differences with Lord Rothmere, the civilian head of the air establishment, as Gen. Robertson was supposed to have gone after difficulties with the Premier.

"Bring back Robertson," is the appeal with which the weekly paper, John Bull, having a great circulation among the masses, has placarded the country to-day. It would be no surprise if that becomes a general demand.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 38 cars, with 374 cattle, 72 calves, 1224 hogs and 10 sheep and lambs.

It was but a small market yesterday with a very light run of cattle offering, but what the market lacked in quantity it made up for in quality and high prices. New high records were in fact recorded for both cattle and lambs but in both cases the prices were exceptional and for exceptional quality, not at all representing the general average of offerings. These exceptions were a bunch of four extra choice heavyweight steers, averaging 1620 pounds brought in by S. F. Gardiner of Elmvale, and bred and fed by Duncan Barr of Murdock. These magnificent steers fetched the high record price of this season of the year of $15, sold by Dunn and Levack to the Harris Abattoir Co. Apart from these high priced ones the general tone of the market was steady to strong, with Wednesday's market for anything of fair to choice quality. Prices were steady for fat cows and bulls.

A small bunch of lambs made a new high record for this week at $21.75.

Calves were steady.

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughnes of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

A service flag with eight stars flew from the flagpole in right field at the Chicabo American League baseball park Wednesday.

Prior to the opening American League game at Chicago the members of the home team purchased $25,000 worth of Liberty Bonds.

"Zack" Wheat, the Brooklyn outfielder, is still a holdout. There is a difference of $500.

Henry C. Fownes, of Pittsburg, and Walter M. Crooks, of Brooklyn, tied for the medal in the qualifying round of the mid-April golf tournament at Pinehurst, N.C.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

THE DINNER MENU

CHAPTER XLV.

The heart burnings I had, the tears I shed, over the menu for my dinner, make me smile now. It seems so childish. But then it was very real. I was so anxious this first dinner of mine should be a success, that it nearly made me ill. But as I look back, I realize it was not for the sake of the guests, but to please George.

Finally, we had the menu all made out. It was simple, in the end, in spite of all my worry Mrs. Sexton said it was better so, and advised against any elaborate dishes.

"You want to please Mr. Howard. Do not ape older people's affairs. Your guests are all young people. Simplicity is your key note."

So we had hors d'oeuvres, a delicate consomme, salmon wonderfully prepared by Mary (who took an intense interest in the success of my dinner), quail with jelly, a rack of lamb with French peas, a Palm Beach salad—I choose it because of the name—then a coupe Tosca, fancy cakes and coffee. Of course we had all the usual things, like celery, salted almonds, etc.

Neither Mary nor James knew that Mrs. Sexton had anything to do with the menu, although they may have suspected. She was darling about it, always referring them to me, if they asked her any questions. She could be so nice, I wondered why she was usually so disagreeable.

A THOUGHT OF GEORGE.

"George will be so proud of me," I thought, loyally, in my triumph over the assured success of my dinner. I felt as though, in serving his vanity, I were performing the whole duty of a wife. He had made me feel that way.

Merton Gray had called with a couple of the finished place cards. They were exquisite. The delicate coloring, the dainty dresses, and the lovely faces of the women were wonderful.

"You are a very fortunate little woman," Mrs. Sexton remarked, after she had unstintedly admired and praised them. It is a great compliment that Mr. Gray has paid you."

"I am delighted to assist Mrs. Howard, and I am the one who is complimented to be allowed the privilege," Merton answered, rather stiltedly.

I called him Merton, always, in my thoughts. He had been so nice to me, had taken such interest in me—or so it seemed—that, next to Evelyn and Kurts, I felt I knew him better than any one in Moreland.

Once I had spoken of him as "Merton" to Mrs. Sexton. She had corrected me immediately, making me feel very small. I hated her for it, even though I knew she was right.

"If you speak of him, or any other man, by his given name, or if you allow yourself to think of them by that name, you will be apt to so address him when not thinking, or to use his name at some time when you will be embarrassed because of your carelessness."

I have learned that she was absolutely right. One is inclined to speak to, and of, people by their thoughts. But, then, it seemed to me a silly thing to regard so seriously.

THE APPEARANCE OF FAMILIARITY.

Remember, a married woman should studiously avoid not the appearance of evil, so much as the appearance of familiarity. Nothing will set Mrs. Grundy's tongue wagging like a familiar manner toward a man not your husband."

Then, to emphasize her point, she told me a story. She told it in such a manner I couldn't help but wonder if it were her own:

"I know a man and woman who for certain reasons, never have married. Yet who, for many years, have been the closest friends. For fear that a wrong construction would be put upon their friendship, they never have addressed each other, save in the most formal way. Even their letters have not gone beyond the usual "My dear Miss" or "My dear Mr." of the casual acquaintance. I do not imagine they ever think of each other, save by the same name which invariably they use. For, in the entire twenty years of their close friendship no one has ever heard them address each other, save in such a way as gave no possible appearance of familiarity."

"Oh, dear" I grumbled, "At home everyone called each other by their first names. Even old married people."

"That is one of the things you did at home that you cannot do in Moreland, at least now in the society in which you move."

"Oh, very well! It seems to me I do nothing right!" I snapped crossly, and left the room without asking pardon for my unladylike speech.

To-morrow—George returns.

Should Keep Piano Dry.

The most frequent cause of keys sticking in pianos is damp. Keep the instrument in a dry room, out of any draught, and in as even a temperature as possible. Take off the keyboard cover, and rub the damp key underneath and down the sides with fine emery paper; this will probably remove the damp, thoroughly dry the key bed, that is underneath where the key fits, and replace the key.

Won a Wife by Billiards.

"Three years ago," writes W. N., "a friend and myself were equally infatuated by a certain young lady, and seemed to have about equal chances of winning her. In order to 'play fair,' we decided to play 100 up at billiards the winner to have the first chance of proposing. After a neck-and-neck struggle I just won by a fluke. All I need add is that—I wish I hadn't!"

Honest Confession.

No man can ever lack this mortification of his vanity, that what he knows is but a very little in comparison with what he is ignorant of. Consider this, and instead of boasting thy knowledge of a few things, confess and be out of countenance for the many more which thou dost not understand.

Overcoming Camouflage.

An American physicist believes that the advantages of camouflage—or at least certain kinds of camouflage—can be overcome by an opposing army by providing colored glasses or screens of contrasting colors to use with field glasses. When the colors of these screens are properly selected, uniforms and other objects may be made to appear in contrast, instead of in harmony with their surroundings, he claims. Camouflage as practiced in many cases is accomplished largely by the use of paint, objects being given shades that blend with the landscape. In spite of certain difficulties that would arise, it is believed that such efforts at concealment could be rendered quite ineffectual by the means stated.

One of the Meanest Men.

A lady who went to join her husband in his new western home was surprised to find that among the young ladies of the place he had the reputation of being "the meanest man ever was." Wishing to know the reason, she asked a bevy of damsels one day, when one of them spitefully replied: "Because he came out here looking spruce and young, and went on till all the girls got interested in him, and then he up and sent for you. And that was the first we knew that he was married! Mean? I guess so!"

Porcelain, Feather, Fur Money.

Porcelain money is used in Burma and Siam; and feather money, manufactured from the short red feathers from beneath the wings of a species of parrot, is the ordinary currency of the Santa Cruz islanders. The Loyalty islands, which lie in the Pacific to the east of Australia, are famous for their fur money. The fur, which is taken from behind the ears of the so-called "flying fox," in reality a large fruit-eating bat, is woven into cords of various lengths, and these constitute the ordinary currency of the islanders.

Teach Feet to Point Straight.

The human foot is wonderful in its formation; the 26 bones and intricate arrangement of muscles make it susceptible of a high degree of training, as one observes in fancy skating and ballet dancing. But it is sadly hampered in its practical activity by being encased in leather and having to support the weight of as well as to propel the body forward. To overcome this as far as possible we should learn to walk with the feet pointing practically straight.

Shakespeare and the Bible.

Whatever his faults and limitations, Shakespeare will live forever. Dr. George W. Carey has said: "Shakespeare probed the deeps of human possibilities, analyzed the stuff from which thoughts are made, turned the searchlight of incomparable genius on the records of the soul, painted its deeds on the canvas of life, and left it naked and ashamed." Shakespeare and the Bible will survive, after all our current literature is forgotten.

There are a great many pointed necks in the new fashions.

Small furs for spring promise to have a considerable vogue.

Capes and cape-like coats will be the proper wraps for spring.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Khaki Dates Back to 1846.

Khaki is said first to have been adopted in British India in 1848 by Sir Henry Burnett Lumsden, who had been asked to equip a corps of guides to collect intelligence and to conduct a British force on the northwestern frontier of India.

The cloth was a light cotton drill as suited the climate of Hindustan, and took its name from a native term "Khaki," which means in the Urdu language "dusty," being derived from "khak" or dust. Thus the term applied to the color of the cloth rather than to the material.

According to the dictionary, it is pronounced kaykee by the natives, but the English pronounced it kharkee, and this is correct.

But [illegible] warm enough for all climates, uniforms of the same kind were made of serge, and the term khaki thus included woollen.

Because it was well fitted for the climate of Cuba and the Philippines, the United States chose khaki for the soldiers' uniforms during the Spanish-American War.

FORTUNATE PRISONERS

GERMANS IN FRANCE ARE KINDLY TREATED.

They Fare Better Than the Tentonic Civilians at Home, and Would Be Happier Still If Their Government Had Not Ill-treated the Allies In Their Prison Camps.

A SEARCHING investigation of conditions among the German prisoners in France is manifestly impossible for one who hopes to do anything else during the period of the war. The 200,000 or more Germans and Austrians held prisoners by the French are scattered all over the country, from the lines to the Midi. Also, they are arranged, to a great extent, in small groups, sometimes of only five or ten men. For civilians transportation is difficult, and especially in winter. As a matter of fact, a search-investigation would take a man furnished with an automobile with unlimited petrol, and with all special passes, from six months to a year. Such conditions are fulfilled for the investigators of the Swiss Embassy, who look after the prisoners on behalf of Germany; and the work keeps two or three men continually busy.

Unable, for lack of time, to make an investigation of this kind, I have chosen the next best course. Provided with a blanket order from the French Ministry of War—an order virtually permitting me to visit any camp at any time—I have looked into five of the larger camps in three main districts and into several of the smaller ones. In every case but one I made these visits without previous warning of my coming, in order to see the prisons, not when they were arranged for visitors, but in their ordinary routine.

The number of trades found among 200,000 prisoners, most of them conscripted from civilian life at the beginning of the war, is of course almost infinite. The mechanics among them are in great demand. Both as a military measure and to maintain business, the railroads of France must be kept running. Owing to the demand for skilled labor in munition works, the railroad shops are constantly short of expert mechanics to make repairs. The men among the German prisoners who followed mechanical trades in peace time have for the greater part been turned over to the railroads, where they work in the shops beside native workmen and under French foremen. Next greatest, perhaps, is the demand for carpenters; they put up those temporary camps, for all kinds of war uses, which dot the face of France just now. Shoemakers and tailors, turned up in the general combing out of the prisoners, are set to repairing clothes and boots, both for their fellow prisoners and for the French soldiers. Bakers are let out to the military and civilian bakeries; butchers go to the abattoirs — and so on through a great number of useful trades.

So far as possible, prisoners are given the same hours of labor as civilian workmen. Since the war the labor unions have patriotically relaxed their rules in response to the common emergency, and the hours of labor run from nine to ten—nine and one-half is probably about the average. And that is exactly the average for some five or six thousand prisoners, whom I have seen working at unloading vessels and trains, in the railroad shops or in factories. Usually they start to work at 7 o'clock and return at 6, with an hour and a half for luncheon. In the dead of winter, when darkness sets in early, they usually knocked off work at 5 o'clock, making their hours for that period about eight and one-half.

Now we come to the more important primitive needs—shelter, clothing and food. Let us take them in order.

The five large camps which I visited house each between 700 and 1,500 prisoners. In construction all are monotonously alike. A double barbed wire entanglement, electrically charged, surrounds a stockade—a hollow square of one-story buildings, wooden but substantial. They were all erected, in the early days of the war, by the first batches of German prisoners. These houses are water tight and well lighted—by day with windows and by night with electricity. They afford, in fact, about the same accommodations as the bunk houses put up for our American soldiers during their training period. Indeed, the German prisoner has rather the better of this arrangement, for while our boys were stationed in one of the coldest parts of France most of the Germans live further south, where the climate is milder. In only one item is the comparison unfavorable to the prison camps.

When the German is taken prisoner he has, of course, a uniform. This, after it has been fumigated and cleaned, serves for fatigue clothing, worn on Sundays and days off, during his term of imprisonment.

While the custom varies according to the situation in the various districts, as a rule the prisoners wear, for working clothes, the wornout uniforms of French soldiers. These, after proper fumigation and cleaning, are repaired by prison tailors and dyed apple green to make them conspicuous as the garments of prisoners. The tunics and overcoats are stencilled on the breast with the letters "P.G." (standing for prisonnier deguerre). It follows, therefore, that in the matter of comfort the Germans are clothed, so far as outer garments go, in exactly the same fashion as the French soldier.

Finally, comes the vital, all important question of food.

In the beginning the French adopted the rule of giving prisoners exactly the same ration as their own troops not on active service. The French are an economical people. Though they insist on good cooking, they eat less, in bulk, than the British, the Germans or the Americans. So this ration is slightly smaller than the liberal allowance of the American or British soldier. Still, it is enough. Later in the game it was established that French prisoners in Germany were not getting the same treatment; that, in fact, they received far less food than the German reservists or idle troops. The French maintain that their only way of protecting comrades in German hands is to take reprisals, and to threaten more reprisals, against the prisoners which they hold. The Germans cut down the meat ration for French prisoners to 86 grams a day. The French at the time were giving their German captives 250 grams a day. When, after representations through neutral channels, the French failed to get any adjustment of this matter they adopted the reprisal policy and cut down the ration for German prisoners to 86 grams.

As things have finally worked out, the French have adopted, in this item of meat, three regimens. The first is known as "favored." It is for Alsatians forcibly mobilized in the German army, for the Czechs among the Austrian prisoners, and in general for the members of subject races fighting for the Central Powers against their will. They receive 300 grams a day. The "ordinary" regimen is the one followed at the beginning of the war, before the action of the Germans made reprisals necessary. Under it live the Austrian prisoners: since Austria is still giving prisoners the same rations as their own inactive troops. It allows 250 grams of meat a day. Finally, as mentioned before, there is the "special" regime, made necessary by the conditions of the times for the Germans.

To summarize the discussion of the food situation: On his exact ration the German prisoner fares better at present than the free German workingman at home. He receives 600 grams of bread a day; his brother in Germany receives just half of that allowance, and the quality is probably inferior. Last August and September the German allowance of fats—an essential to life—was 50 or 60 grams a week. In that scientifically compounded if monotonous stew the German prisoner in France gets 20 grams of fat a day, or 140 a week. Even the scanty allowance of meat is far greater than the one accorded the working class of Germany. And above all that there are mitigations like the right of purchase in the canteen and the additional meals given by peasants or other employers. When this fact is taken into consideration they must fare nearly as well—if not quite as well—as the laboring class of France in these tight times.—Will Irwin in the New York Times.

What Physicians Prescribe For Nerves

THE USE OF ORGANIC PHOSPHORUS.

Something over sixty years ago Pelouz, a French scientist, discovered a form of organic phosphorus which when taken into the human system, was quickly converted into nerve tissue.

To-day it is an admitted fact that in the treatment of those ailments, directly or indirectly due to depleted nervous vitality, such as neurasthenia, nervous weakness, premature old age, insomnia, lack of energy, fatigue, nervous debility, thinness, etc., it is unequalled.

Physicians and hospitals everywhere now recognize its merits by its use in ever increasing quantities, and it is therefore a matter of more than ordinary interest to all such sufferers to learn that this organic nerve building phosphorus is now obtainable from McDermid & Jury and good druggists everywhere in the form of 5-grain tablets of pure nitro-phosphate, at a cost so low as to be within the reach of everyone. There are a great variety of so-called phosphates, but the genuine standard nitro-phosphate is composed wholly of the original nerve building substance as discovered by Pelouz.

One of these tablets should be taken with each meal, and the results in many instances are little short of marvellous. Dull eyes become bright, sleep is restored to the sleepless, the nerves regain their strength, thin people put on flesh and the whole system becomes charged with that strength, vitality and energy which makes life so truly worth while.

ECONOMY applied with a Paint Brush

THE great national duty to-day is to "conserve." It's a duty you owe yourself as well as your country. A duty just as applicable to a house, or building, as it is to the things you eat and wear. Buildings, in fact, show so tremendous an increase in cost, that the importance of keeping them protected is apparent to all who know how steel, wood, brick and cement have jumped in price. And the cheapest protection you can give a building is the kind you apply with a brush—PAINT. For true protection, scorn the ineffectual, cheap paints. Use only -

B-H "ENGLISH" PAINT 70% Pure White Lead (Brandram's Genuine B.B.) 30% Pure White Zinc 100% Pure Paint

The kind we guarantee to possess as its important base, the above correct formula.

This formula, printed on every can, and guaranteed over our President's signature, commits us to this standard. High in cost as white lead has become, we must use it in the same proportion as heretofore. To use less of it, would necessitate the removal of the guarantee from our cans—and to do that would injure the reputation that these paints have acquired by reason of their superior ingredients. It is by using pure white lead and pure white zinc in such liberal quantities that we have been able to produce a paint that truly excels in covering capacity—and that stands the severe "climate test" of Canada in a way that spells true economy for all who use it.

Forty-one per cent. of the automobiles registered in Minnesota are owned in communities having a population of less than 1,000, and less than 30 per cent. in cities of 10,000 or more population. Of the 39,086 cars sold in the State during 1917, farmers and residents of villages having no more than 2,000 population bought 19,301, or very nearly one-half, while 14,940 were purchased in communities of fewer than 1,000 persons.

Telephone Economy

Scarcity of Material

MATERIALS of many different kinds enter into the make-up of the modern telephone plant.

¶ Iron, steel, tin, copper, nickle, aluminum, lead, platinum, brass, asbestos, mica, carbon, rubber, silk, cotton, woods of many kinds, dyestuffs, chemicals—these are but a few of the basic elements in a telephone system, gathered from nearly every country on the globe.

¶ The demands of the war have caused an acute shortage in telephone material. Not only is it abnormally expensive; some of it connot be had at any price.

¶ We ask your help in conserving the supply of telephone material. We suggest care in the handling of the instrument and apparatus on your premises, so as to avoid costly repairs.

¶ All orders for the installation of telephone equipment not absolutely necessary should be postponed until present conditions are past.

¶ In this way you will be putting into practice an effective war-time economy and helping us to meet the more urgent needs of the Country's business.

BERLIN IN WAR TIME

NEUTRAL WOMAN WRITES OF HER EXPERIENCES THERE.

The City That Was Once Bathed In a Lake of Light Is Now Quiet and Gloomy, and the Citizens Are Engaged In Meeting Many Serious Problems.

I HAVE often been obliged to ask myself with surprise, when walking of an evening in the western part of Berlin, whether I was really in the great capital, which I recollected as a city bathed in a lake of light, and in which the life of labor and of enjoyment appeared never to cease day or night. How quiet and, above all, how dark the city has become! It is not advisable to walk through the quieter streets without an electric pocket lamp, but even the streets once so busy in the centre of the city, in which, especially at Christmas time, much animation and traffic prevailed till the late hours of the evening, become quiet in the afternoon.

"Save light and coal," runs the watchword both for public and for private life. The shops close, some at five and some at six o'clock, and few find it amusing to promenade in the twilight of the street illumination to admire the displays in the shop windows. What is mainly lacking in the street traffic is the motor cars which followed each other so swiftly and gave the streets such animation.

Every provincial can now, without the friendly help of the policemen, cross the Potsdam Platz, where the traffic reaches its utmost concentration, and without receiving the impression of running great risk to his life. These circumstances have contributed to teach the Berliner to value his own fireside more, even if, in order to eke things out with the rationed coal, he is obliged to restrict himself to one or two rooms of his often very large residence.

Sauntering was once the Berliner's greatest pleasure, and what he enjoyed above all was acting as bear leader on the occasion of visits of his friends from the provinces. Now, however, the reins are drawn very tight by orders "from headquarters."

What should he do in the restaurants now, when he can no longer get his favorite dishes and selected dainties? The severe police look sharply after it that no one receives more than he ought, and find out all the secret cellars in which the great restaurants have concealed their smuggled supplies in order to be in a position to supply their regular customers with a frequent but feeble reminder of the former luxurious abundance.

I once saw in a very frequented restaurant how an elderly gentleman was treated with striking obsequiousness by every one from the manager to the boy in buttons. We learned that it was the chief of police himself, who was inspecting without having previously announced his visit.

Externally, also, the restaurants make a different impression now, since there is no longer any stable linen. The tables are for the most part covered with a glass plate, but one also sees paper tablecloths. The cafes in which good orchestras play, and where for some time past cabaret artists also appear, are those in which most animation prevails. The attractions of the cafes are not to be sought in the gastronomic delights afforded by food substitutes (Ersatz Praparate).

Real enjoyment is still to be found in the theatres and concerts, and although the prices have been greatly increased one has to exert oneself betimes in order to reserve a seat.

Although the latest despatches from the front and the prospects of peace are subject to a thorough discussion on all sides, the question of bodily well-being occupies the front place in every one's thoughts. The question which is uppermost in all minds is whether the various cards—I believe there are twelve different kinds—will be sufficient for the needs of the people, and whether kohlrabi, the national winter dish, could not be prepared for table again in a somewhat different way, for the fifth day of the week.

The Berlin women have grown slender owing to the scanty diet of the war, and the question "How much do you weigh now?" or "How much have you lost since I saw you last?" is as often asked as the quite ordinary "How do you do?"

People who still look rotund and well nourished are frequently to be pitied, for they are easily looked at somewhat askance, with the arriere pensee, "Their larder must be well filled," and the street urchins make fun of them, exclaiming, "Look, there goes another "Hamstertante," — untranslatable expression meaning "Auntie who gets food on the sly" —or similar amiabilities.

People are not always content with the universal distribution, and the Zentral Einkaufs Gesellschaft (Central Purchasing Company) and the municipal authorities are frequently roundly abused. In recent years the people have gradually accustomed themselves to privation, so that the complaints of the smaller quantities of provisions are not excessive.

"We shan't starve in any case." With this comforting assurance the people endeavor to overcome everything. What they most regret is not to be able, when their dear ones come home on leave from the front, to coddle and pet them as much as they could wish, and as much food as possible is always set aside for these visits.

I have always heard that 'South Germany has more provisions, especially dairy products, than North Germany, particularly Berlin and the west industrial region.

The prohibition of export by the individual states, and, indeed, by the provinces, is maintained very strictly, and every traveller must reconcile himself to having his luggage examined.

Naturally recourse is had to every device for smuggling. Once during a visit, when I expressed surprise that the rare delicacy of a piece of ham was presented to me, my hostess told me that she had received it in a very secret way. One day she received from a friend of hers living abroad a fat parcel of newspapers. She expected to find some specially interesting articles, but to her amazement she discovered, fixed in the newspapers, a small, flat packet filled with butter and another containing ham.

This manoeuvre succeeded a couple of times with cocoa and sugar, also, but at last an ingenious post-office official must have suspected the secret. The newspapers still arrive, but the most important news has always been cut out of them.

Yet with money you are able to open many a back door, and occasionally to buy a pound of butter for 20 marks ($5), or get a bit more sugar, rice or similar delicacies. Any price asked is paid, in order to get extra food without a card.

Most housewives have to do their own work, since they are not able to pay the wages, which have increased threefold, for domestic help. Moreover, not every housewife can comply with the demands of her servant, for before the latter accepts service she asks the question, "Have you supplies, ma'am, or do you live from what you get on the cards?" If the latter is the case she rejects the place with great indignation.

Anyone who has a girl seeks to keep her by all possible means. Thus I heard of an old lady who promised her servant no small part of what she had to leave in her will on condition that she would not forsake her. —Impressions in London Times from letter of neutral woman who had, till recently, lived all her life in Berlin.

ACROSS SIBERIA.

Effect of the Revolution Upon Asiatic Russia.

Although much has been written of late about Russia under the revolutionary regime, we have had little first-hand news of conditions in Russia's Asiatic provinces. Louise de Weiter has written an article entitled "Across Siberia, Homeward Bound," which gives a vivid personal impression of the Siberian journey in war time. Here are some of Mrs. de Wetter's comments:

"Although fully provided with three huge hampers of food, not to mention the presents brought to the train by our kind friends, we decided to try the dining-car. It did not lack a piano, or discouraged-looking plants on every table, but the quality of the food placed before us may be guessed at when I say that it was our only appearance in the car. To reach it, we had to stagger through the entire train; for although the speed was such as to make a self-respecting freight train smile, the tracks were far from even, and we careened drunkenly from side to side on our subsequent excursions to the bathroom. There was a tub, and there was water, though fearful and wonderful to behold, being a bright red; but at least it had the virtue of being hot and of washing off some of the layers of gritty dust which covered us from head to foot after a few days. I actually took it off the window-sill with an after-dinner coffee-spoon in the mornings.

"These trips to and from the bath were interesting in other ways. We were forced to climb over sleeping warriors lying upon the corridor floors their battle-stained sheepskin coats giving the indescribable and awful odors, and their guns and accoutrements lying beside them, stumbling blocks for the unwary. Woe unto any one who accidentally fell over a loaded gun.

"Those who were awake when we passed seemed to recognize in our forced smiles a feeble attempt to be friendly, and after a few days we began to nod, and they to hold the doors open for us as we passed by.

"The nights were really terror-ridden. Awakened from a fitful sleep by a sudden jolting stop, we all lay listening to the howling mobs outside. They were intent upon boarding the train, and upon frustrating the attempts of the conductors to keep them off. Battering upon the sides of the cars with their rifle-butts, pounding on the windows with their fists, they shrieked maledictions upon those within the train. Most of all they reviled the soldiers who, faithful to our trust in them, refused to let them enter our car.

"Refused admittance, the men climbed up the little iron ladders to the roofs of the cars and scrambled for the coveted places beside the ventilators, which, like tiny smokestacks, dot the roofs of Russian cars. Curled around one of these, a man could at least hold on as the train sped through the night. The noise of their heavy boots tramping just above us, the sound of their heavy equipment being dragged along, and their groans and curses as they moved about trying to find a secure hold will long live in my memory. Every morning the porter would tell us how many had been lost during the night. Cold and numb with sleep, dozens rolled off the roof and were lost. I still picture them as they must have lain, crushed and bleeding, often still alive and suffering on the barren ground, far from any human habitation."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Loan of a Loan

By ETHEL HOLMES

Leona Winters was a great reader. Her taste for literature took in almost every branch, but fiction was her favorite. She read Sterne, Fielding, Smollet and other authors who were the first English novel writers, as well as the best fiction of the nineteenth century. Of course she was dependent on the town library for books, since no private library could supply her requirements for a week. She was chummy with the librarian, who favored her, notifying her of the return to the library of any book she wanted that had been taken out.

Miss Winters was not wealthy, and since she expected to spend her life reading desired a husband who had sufficient means to enable her to spend her time in that way. She had decided on the man she wanted. He was Bob Shackelford with an income of twenty thousand dollars. Mr. Shackelford had just been graduated from college.

Bob was fond of Miss Winters, but not fond enough to bring matters to a head and ask her to be his wife. When he wanted some one to spend an evening with or go for a ride with him in his auto he had only to telephone Leona Winters and a companion was provided. But the matter of giving up his independence by marrying her had never entered his head.

It had entered Leona's head and found a lodgment there. But how to turn Bob into a lover was a problem she was unable to solve.

One afternoon Bob had called to take Miss Winters to ride and was waiting in the drawing room for her. There was a telephone in the hall. He heard Leona's voice say:

"Yes, I'm Leona Winters."

Bob's ears were very sharp; he heard a cracked telephone voice say: "John Bunyan," and later, "is here waiting for you."

Fifty years ago John Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" was read by millions; today it is scarcely read at all. Shackelford had never heard of the book or its characters. Even Apolyon was not known to him by that name, though with Satan or the devil he was quite familiar. The next thing he heard of this telephone dialogue was Miss Winters saying:

"I can't come today; I'm just going out to ride."

"Don't let your engagement with me interfere with your meeting the gentleman," cried Bob. "I'll excuse you."

Miss Winters was standing with the receiver at her ear. For a few moments she did not understand what Bob meant. To gain time she said, "wait a moment," through the phone, and asked him to repeat.

"Could you make our auto spin just as well tomorrow?" she asked Bob.

"Oh, yes, certainly; any time you like."

Through the phone Leona said: "I'll be with you in a few minutes." Then she entered the room where Mr. Shackelford sat scowling, said he was "awfully" good to excuse her for the day and she would gladly ride with him tomorrow. But Bob went back on what he had said, and told her that he had engagements for every day during the rest of the week. Then he left the house giving the door a bang.

Miss Winters sank back in a chair laughing, then began to think how she should follow up the advantage she had gained. She had thought of borrowing a lover from the young men of the town, but none of them would serve. The idea of going back to a man who had been dead a couple of hundred years had never occurred to her. After much thought she decided to be governed for the future by circumstances.

She heard nothing from Bob for a week; then she wrote him to know when they were to have their ride. Bob gave her a curt reply suggesting that if Mr. Bunyan had no car, he—Bob—would be happy to lend him one.

Leona, after consideration, wrote a severe reply stating that she would not permit him to dictate as to who should be her associates. It was none of his concern if she took up with Lawrence Sterne, or John Inglesant or any other of her friends, though she confessed that John Bunyan was superior to any of them.

Bob never having heard of these gentlemen made inquiries. Then he heard that John Bunyan had written the greatest of all allegories, Lawrence Sterne was a celebrated author of the seventeenth century, and John Inglesant was the name of a modern novel.

Leona did not suppose that Bob would remain long in ignorance of the fact that he had made a guy of himself, and she was not mistaken. One afternoon she saw him drive up to her door in his car, alight and pull lustily at the doorbell. When she went downstairs to receive him she stopped at the telephone and asked for the library.

"Has Peter Simple come in yet?" she asked.

The reply was inaudible to Bob, and there was more, too, that he could not hear.

"Well," said Leona, "when Peter Simple comes in you need not keep it for me. I've had enough of his kind."

When Leona went into the drawing room she found Bob red as a turkey cock and a shame-faced grin on him. She smiled her prettiest, offered him her hand and the trick was done.

Bob since his marriage has become a great reader. He no longer boasts of his contempt for learning.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

The Joy of the Trail.

Is there any joy in life like the joy of the trail? Sun and wind and rain and winding spaces of earth and sky, days that trip off like a gypsy tune and ever the magical road, mysteriously beckoning on and on! Sometimes the vagabond in Mongolia walks in the wakes of the carts, through the white dust of the trail. Or the carts rumble on while he stoops to a miniature goldenrod or a splendid larkspur. The plain is studded with flowers — gentian, Canterbury bells, thornless thistle, a tall, delicately fringed daisy, a scented pink morning-glory, an infinitesimal moon-flower and a hundred others. But most vivid of all, the electric-blue larkspur. Sometimes the vagabond rides by the side of the sleepy Chinese carter, ready to recall him when the donkey, seeking a nip of short grass, strays too far from the road; sometimes he sits silently rapt in the mystery of the horizon. Sometimes—a true vagabond—he lies on his back in the cart, only dreamily conscious of the castellated clouds shaping and re-shaping themselves. It seems to him then that he peers into the mystical vision of life itself, and in these moments he is in some way released from the cell of the individual and mysteriously merged in the universe—in some way linked with the earth and the multitudes of her children who have entered again earth's caverns.

Canada's Net Debt.

Canada's net debt stood at $1,010,780,470 on Feb. 28, an increase during February of $13,251,263. The total gross debt of the Dominion on Feb. 28 was $1,996,393,359. Total assets were $985,612,889. Total war expenditures for the eleven months' period to the end of February was $207,849,726.

Revenues show an increase. In February, 1918, the revenue was $21,225,872, as compared with $17,513,473 in February of last year. Expenditure on account of consolidated fund was $11,323,497 in February of the present year, in comparison with $12,581,954 in February, 1917.

Birds' Sweet Songs.

The bluebird, who lives by the side of a purling brook, has a tinkling voice that reminds one of running water. The bobolink, who will have no home but a meadow, showers down a cascade of melody that he has caught from the breezes soughing through a sea of grass or clover-heads. And, in like manner, "Passer domesticus," as ornithologists call the grimy little British sparrow, has tuned his vocal chords to the clatter of hoofs over cobblestones, the roar of the elevated, policemen's whistles and other barbaric sounds.

Prehistoric Skull Borings.

The operation called "trepanning," by which a button of skull is removed, is regarded in these modern days as very hazardous, and to be attempted only as a last resort.

But the ancient Peruvians, centuries before Columbus landed, practiced it very commonly. Of 1,000 of their skulls, recently obtained by the United State Bureau of Ethnology from prehistoric caves and cemeteries a large per cent. had been trepanned.

The early Peruvians used clubs and warhatchets in battle; also slings, for throwing stones. Skull fractures must often have resulted. But apparently they trepanned also for brain troubles, and possibly for other diseases.

The surgeon of ancient Peru held the head of his patient between his knees, and with a sharp flint sawed out the button of bone—an agonizing process, surely. Sometimes he filled the hole with a button of silver, or of molusk-shell, but more often he was content to cover it simply with the flap of the scalp.

It is usually possible, by examination of one of the trepanned skulls, to find out whether or not the victim survived the operation, because, if he did so, a new growth of bone shows it. From evidence thus obtained it appears the operative mortality exceeded 50 per cent.

This was creditable, considering the lack of suitable instruments, antiseptics, etc. But, on the whole, an ancient Peruvian who got through life without having a hole bored in his mind-box was rather fortunate. —Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Wealthy Tokio.

The prosperity of Greater Tokio City is shown by the increased taxes over last year, the average being 37 per cent. In the eight tax collection districts the total exceeds 99,000,000 yen ($49,500,000); the rates of increase vary from 9½ per cent. in the Yotsuya district to 50 per cent. in the Ryogoku and 72 per cent. in the Yeltai districts, where the offices and residences of the narikin are located.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY WITH HER HEART

Would Wake Up Smothering

The terrible smothering and choking up sensations and sinking spells, the feelings of dizziness and faintness that come over those whose heart and nerves are deranged causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

Mrs. A. M. Powell, Norval Station, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered five years with my heart and nerves, but the last two years I have suffered terribly. If I went to bed I would wake up as if I were smothering. I did not get one night's sleep out of seven. I got so very weak that the doctor was called in, and he said it was my heart, and that I must take great care of myself. I saw your advertisement in your almanac for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and said I would try them. I have only taken two boxes of them and I feel a new woman. I will recommend them to anyone afflicted with heart trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Guarantees of Victory.

Two guarantees of victory for Britain were recorded in the news the other day.

British-American decision to seize 1,000,000 tons of Dutch shipping interned in allied ports was the first great guarantee of victory.

The second great guarantee of victory was written in the reported completion of a 5,000-ton merchant ship built of concrete.

A Dutch fleet of 1,000,000 tons added to the allied shipping will employ the destructive powers of German submarines for four or six months. If the German submarines still continue to destroy British shipping at the present rate the addition of concrete to the materials out of which seagoing craft can be built will enable the allies to build new ships faster than the German submarines can sink old ships.

Transfer of 1,000,000 tons of Dutch shipping and the success of the concrete ship venture will stand as mighty events in the history of this war. These events mean the defeat of Germany's submarine campaign. The defeat of Germany's submarine campaign means the absolute defeat of Germany.

Houses of Rock Salt.

In the Libyan Desert stands the town of Siwah, which has been restored to Egyptian control as a result of the defeat of the Sensussi, in a district of much historical interest. At Siwah was situated the temple of Zeus Ammon, to which Alexander the Great made his famous pilgrimage in 331 B.C., when he is supposed to have been acknowledged there as the son of Ammon. What actually passed between Alexander and the priests was never known, but that he was satisfied is shown by the munificent gifts he made to the temple.

At the present time Siwah is an outpost of the great Berber or Libyan race. The people still speak their ancient mother tongue and possess distinctive and curious customs, perhaps the most peculiar of which is the segregation of unmarried youths and widowers in a separate quarter. The existing town stands on a hill surrounded by a wall, and presents a virtually unbroken front. The houses are of rock salt, mud brick, and palm trunks, and are built one on another, to a height of about eight stories. The walls are very thick at the base, but taper to a perilous thinness at the top.

Last year's record should be broken by the Veterans' Tag Day on Saturday.

MAN POWER IN EUROPE.

Expert Makes Estimate on Conditions on Western Front.

The British have at least a million men on their part of the line, with large reserves to fill vacancies behind. The French have close to another million with at least one class, 00,000 men, to replace wastage. In other words, the Germans, so far as their East and West fronts are concerned have not enough men available to give them any real numerical advantage. Have they the troops behind? This is exceedingly unlikely, given what we know of their promptness in calling up and using the younger classes. They are always at least one year ahead of the French in this respect.

Therefore, if the United States could have 500,000 men ready to fight next May these would give the allies a decisive advantage in the west. They will not have such a force ready and therefore the numbers will be approximately equal. Accordingly, Germany can attack, since her foes will not attack, pending the arrival of the Americans on the line. Thanks to Austria, thanks to her great captures of Russian artillery in the summer and Italian in the fall, with huge stocks of munitions, Germany may have an advantage in guns. This possession of superior artillery did not get her Verdun, nor win for her at first Ypres. The allies will certainly be able to make great counter concentrations, if the first German flood be checked.

On the foregoing statement of the situation it seems to me that all belief that Germany is to have overwhelming advantage in numbers, is idle. On the contrary but for the transfer of French and British troops to Italy she would probably be slightly out-numbered as she surely will be when any large American force gets up. Her chance, her advantage it would appear, lies rather in artillery. She probably will have more guns, possibly more munitions. These are a great factor, of course. They might prove decisive, but they didn't at Verdun. So much for numbers and the transfer of troops from East to West. All told, Germany has now at most 2,500,000 men on all fronts. In the West she can hardly have more than 2,000,000 present and eventually available, while her foes certainly have 2,000,000 men now on the line. —Frank H. Simonds, in American Review of Reviews.

Ants That Carry Umbrellas.

In Mexico there is a variety of ants that carry little green umbrellas, made from bits of leaves, to protect their bodies from the fierce tropical sun. Sometimes, writes a contributor to the Youth's Companion, who has lived in the turbulent republic across the Rio Grande, I have seen two ants walking together while one politely carried the umbrella over the two. At other times, she says, I have seen them, when going in opposite directions, stop and salute each other before they passed on.

With the Unusual.

It is the unusual event that gives the unusual person a chance. To meet the unexpected with decision and effectiveness is the sign of the leader. If you can take responsibility when responsibility is suddenly thrust upon you, and do your very best with a clear head, you are the sort of person who will achieve a permanently responsible position. And it is the responsible positions that are well paid and interesting.

Tired Nervous Mothers
Should Profit by the Experience of These Two Women

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I am the mother of four children, and for nearly three years I suffered from a female trouble with pains in my back and side, and a general weakness. I had professional attendance most of that time but did not seem to get well. As a last resort I decided to try Lydia E. I was all run down and so weak I could not do my housework, was nervous and could not lie down at night. I took treatments from a physician but they did not help me. My Aunt recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried it and now I am strong and well again and do my own work and I give Lydia E. TRUTH HOPES BRITAIN WILL FOLLOW CANADA

Pleased With Idea That Titles Should Be Abandoned.

LONDON, April 19.—The absence of Canada from the lavish colonial distribution of the Order of the British Empire, declares Truth, has been explained by Sir Robert Borden with a frankness which the Downing street announcement lacked. Truth refers to the preparation of the list and Premier Borden's refusal to participate in "this kind of foolery."

Apropos the Canadian suggestion that titles should be abandoned, Truth adds: "I suppose constitutionally that this suggestion is an interference with the Crown's prerogative, but it is backed up by the practically unanimous opinion of Canada and some day perhaps we shall become equally sensible."

ACTIVITIES OF THE GUNS.

Work of the Artillery at the Front Is Strenuous and Varied.

There are many different tasks assigned to the guns in the day's work. In the morning they may have a job cutting wire for the infantry, who are going over for a raid or an attack. They may be called upon to retaliate on certain vulnerable positions of the enemy in reply to a strafe which he is giving our infantry. If a barrage, or curtain of fire, is being kept up on the enemy's back roads, to prevent the bringing up of supplies or ammunition, one battery may take on the job at scheduled time, to be relieved again by another battery later on. This continual keeping up of a barrage around a certain place effectually shuts that place off from all outside communication. In the town of Combles last fall we found the Huns starved to death in the streets, no rations having been able to penetrate our barrage for days.

The bombardment is a time of intense excitement and activity at the guns. A 4.5 howitzer battery, to which I was attached in the Ypres salient in 1916, fired three thousand rounds between 7 a.m. and the following 1.30 a.m. This was at the time that the Canadians retook Sanctuary Wood, which they had lost a short time before. The major was called out at night for a conference at group headquarters; on returning he announced, "We've got a stiff day ahead to-morrow; three thousand rounds is our assignment." The continual shock and roar of the guns during such a bombardment is a terrific strain on the nervous system.

At one-o'clock that night we opened up an intense bombardment of every gun in the Ypres solient. From the 18-pounders to "Old Grandmother," away back on the far hill, every gun joined in. At the last five minutes of a time like this the officer's nerves are strained as taut as a violin string. With trembling hand he examines his watch, apprehensive of every last second. To fire overtime would be to kill our own infantry. At one-thirty sharp the cry of "Stop!" rings out, and a silence almost as distressing as the previous roar ensues. We know that in that grim silence our infantry, far up under the star shells are going "over the top."—Arthur Hunt Chute in Harper's.

Are Pigs Cause of the War?

An ingenious philosophic historian, seeking cause and effect in the present cataclysm, has traced its origin entirely to pigs. The line of reasoning seems fairly direct. Serbia is chiefly a pig-raising country, it has for years depended for its economic prosperity almost entirely upon the export of this product. Unfortunately this little people could send its pigs to the outside world only by way of Austria, which had the unpleasant habit of closing the ports whenever she desired to discipline her cantankerous neighbor. Serbia's desire for expansion, particularly her ambition for a port on the Adriatic, has been mainly for the purpose of obtaining a trade route by which her pigs could get access to the markets of the world. Hence all the troublous times in the Balkans, and hence ultimately this calamity. Whether pigs started the war, however, it seems not improbable that they will play an important part in ending it. At least that is a fact which Mr. Hoover and his associates are attempting to impress upon the American consumer and the American farmer. The emphatic message is going out to the farmer—"Raise hogs!" An equally emphatic injunction is being laid upon the American housewife—Economize on fat!—The World's Work.

NEWSIE KNEW HIS BUSINESS

The following is a story related by Lord Northcliffe in a London paper, concerning his book "At the War":

"In the United States and Canada the newsboys walk through the trains selling the latest publications, and recently one of them offered his lordship, who was on his way from New York to Chicago, a copy of his own book, 'At the War.'

"I've read it," quietly replied the author, shaking his head.

"Oh, you have!" exclaimed the boy, adding, with true Yankee inquisitiveness, "And how did you like it?"

"Pretty well," said Lord Northcliffe Then, thinking of the tedious hours spent in revisions and proofreading, he added impressively, "I read it five times."

"Gee! five times!" exclaimed the boy, and two passengers who had overheard the conversation promptly bought copies, while the enterprising newsvendor moved on down the car saying:

"'At the War'—new book just out; one man read it five times. Only a few copies left."—Stray Stories.

MUSIC FOR THE WAR TANK

Graphaphone Records Are Gift of Woman; French Officer Requests Bowling Equipment for His Men.

For the amusement of soldiers probably no more unique donation has been made than that of $50 from a woman for graphaphone records to equip a tank. There is something grotesque about music emanating from this weird iron caterpillar, states a trench correspondent.

Other donations have not lacked an element of the picturesque, as, for instance, the supplying of a hospital in Paris which was filled with African troopers, with 700 fans. They were so appreciated during the summer that the hospital appealed for more. A accordion was sent to fill a specific demand.

One French officer requested games for his men. What sort? In one regiment in which most of the soldiers were fathers of families the preference, for some reason or other, was for bowling. The trench, it must seem does not make a bad alley if a few balls and pins will liven a dull period. Possibly a change of noise is agreeable!

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

No Butter at Vassar.

The announcement at Vassar college that no more butter will be served at dinner has caused much discussion, but the girls promise to give the plan a trial, says New York World. It is a war measure, established on account of the high cost of living. The girls will have gravies, jellies and jams to take the place of butter. It was said that the college would lift the ban on butter for dinner just as soon as there were any complaints.

The hard-boiled egg for breakfast is doomed, too; at least it must not be served where omelet is to be had.

Because most of the girls have a sweet tooth, the college authorities will increase the sugar service at all meals; but this will be evened up by cutting down of meat.

Sheep-Killing Parrots at Large.

Not long ago no little consternation was created by the escape at San Francisco of two keas, or sheep-killing parrots, which were being shipped from Australia to the Smithsonian institution, at Washington, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The birds liberated themselves by splintering the slats of their wooden crates with their powerful beaks. The federal authorities offered a reward of $100 for each bird taken dead or alive. This species of parrot has made itself an enemy of man in both Australia and New Zealand by slaying sheep for the sake of eating parts of the flesh, of which it is very fond, and there bounties are paid for killing the birds.

Sarcastic Surprise.

"I wonder why it is considered an insult to call some men insects?"

"Why is it?"

"Because insects never miss a chance to work for a living."

"I'm Glad To Tell Everyone Of It"

Mrs. Mainhood Suffered For a Whole Year—Tanlac Has Relieved Trouble

I would never have thought that I would give a testimonial to a medicine, but since taking Tanlac my relief has been so remarkable that I am glad to tell everybody about it," recently said Mrs. Agnes Mainhood, of 969 Gerrard street, Toronto, whose husband has been employed by the Grand Trunk Railway for 30 years.

"All last year," she continued, "I suffered terribly from indigestion in its worst form. I had no appetite, the very sight of food on the table would sicken me, the little I forced down soured on my stomach and bloated me up with gas that pressed on my heart so that I could hardly get my breath. I would feel like I was smothering to death and would have to run to the door to get some fresh air. I never relished a thing for I had such a mean, bitter taste in my mouth and would become so nauseated that I couldn't retain what I had eaten.

"I never had such faith in patent medicines but when my husband urged me to give Tanlac a trial I consented, and before I had used up half my first bottle I was feeling so much better that I kept it up until I had taken six in all. That mean, bitter taste in my mouth has disappeared and I have such a fine appetite now I can eat and enjoy anything I want without having the least trouble afterwards. Gas has stopped forming, I never feel bloated now, those smothering spells are gone and I am not nauseated at all. In fact, Tanlac has entirely relieved my stomach trouble and I just can't help crediting it with my recovery.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Declares Fish Sunburnt.

A patient angler was fishing from a jetty at a seaside resort, and two visitors were watching him. Most of the fish caught were flat fish, and the two watchers began to argue why the fish were brown on one side and white on the other. One suggested that the fish were originally all white, but that, sleeping on their backs in the mud, they had become so soiled that it wouldn't wash off.

This was so ridiculed by the other man that, angrily, he bet any amount that his theory was correct.

Upon the case being put to the angler, he remarked: "You are entirely wrong. The real cause of one side being brown is that the fish have been swimming so long with their backs uppermost that they have got sunburnt!"

High-Grade Naval Gunnery.

No one can foretell the future, but we are disclosing no secret when we say that, if our battleship line should ever range up against the enemy, he will be treated at the longest ranges to a storm of fire which, in rapidity, accuracy and the uncanny way in which it clings to its ever-shifting objective, will be a most uncomfortable surprise to the enemy, asserts the Scientific American. For it is a fact that the methods of mounting, fire control, etc., which have been adopted and perfected in our navy, have raised our target practice to a point of accuracy, even at the longest ranges, which has never been reached in our own, or, probably, in any other navy.

Poisonous Constituent of Ivy.

Whether the poisonous constituent of poison ivy is chemical or bacterial is discussed in the Medical Record.

Doctor Frost insists that it is bacterial, because of the incubation period, the complete natural immunity of certain individuals, and that exposure may be strictly limited to proximity of the plant and for other reasons, and asserts that he has found a form of bacteria constant on all leaves examined.

J. T. McNair insists that actual contact with the resinous sap must occur, and that neither mixing with mercury nor heating destroys the poisonous quality of the sap. He therefore believes the action is chemical.

Dandruff Surely Destroys the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Incognito.

Royalty has suffered much in the present war, even at the hands of its friends. When the recent Inter-allied Conference in the interest of permanently disabled soldiers was concluded in Paris, a party of delegates journeyed to England to inspect the great schools established there for the re-education of men maimed in battle. One of these schools in particular excited the visitors' admiration because of its marvellous equipment and seemingly perfect management. This was all the more remarkable because the director of the school was a very young man. So much impressed were the visitors that before leaving they waited upon the youthful director and fairly showered him with praise.

"It is both a great responsibility and a high honor to you, sir," said their spokesman, a distinguished French scientist, "to have been placed at your age at the head of so important a school."

"I agree with you, Doctor ——, but in times past I have had occasion to direct matters even more important than these," replied the young man, who was none other than the ex-King Manuel of Portugal.

Kitchen Soldiers.

Kitchen soldiers are the latest experiment in practical patriotism. Good Housekeeping, in co-operation with the United States food administration, is conducting the enlistment. In the magazine appears this pledge, which women are urged to sign:

"I, the member of the household intrusted with the handling of food, do hereby enlist as a kitchen soldier for home service and pledge myself to waste no food and to use wisely all food purchased for this household, knowing that by so doing I can help conserve the foods that must be shipped to our soldiers and our allies."

This is a movement for the woman who is actually dealing in the food of American homes. Employers and employees are urged to join the forces. A soldier may be one who fights just with her brain or one who fights by doing with her hands the work of women in this crisis. She may be one whose ancestors have lived here for generations or she may be one whose parents have seen war's horrors pass their very door abroad, whose brothers bear the arms of England, or France, or Italy, or Russia, or any other allied country. Once you have enlisted as a kitchen soldier, your kitchen is your battlefield.

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

Parting Wedged Drinking Glasses.

Drinking glasses and similar articles often become wedged together so firmly that it is difficult to part them without damage. A simple method of parting glasses is to pour cold water into the inner glass and set the wedged glasses upright in a dish of warm water, which should then be gradually heated by pouring hot water into it. The contraction of the inner glass and the expansion of the outer one will release the two.

THE SPRING DRIVE

Our boys are going "Over the top" and into "No man's land" this spring. No one has any doubt of their ability to get there. There will also be a spring drive on this side of the ocean, because March is the year's "blue Monday." It is the most fatal month of the year. March and April is a time when resistance usually is at lowest ebb. It is a trying season for the "run-down" man. But medical science steps in, and says, "it need not be"! We should cultivate a love of health, a sense of responsibility for the care of our bodies. Do not allow the machinery of the body to clog. Put the stomach and liver in proper condition. Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, to be had at most drug stores in tablet or liquid form, tablets fifty cents a vial, composed of native herbs. This puts the stomach and liver in proper condition. You may be plodding along, no spring, no elasticity, no vim, but as soon as you have put the body into its normal physical condition—oiled the machinery, as it were—you will find new vim, vigor and vitality within you. A little "pep," and we laugh and live. Try it now. Send Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch office, Bridgeburg, Ont., 10c. for trial pkg. The prime necessity of life is health. With spirit and energy you have the power to force yourself into action. The Golden Medical Discovery is the spring tonic which you need.

Kerak Has Weird History

THE victorious advance of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force up to and beyond Jerusalem, on the west of the remarkable earth depression of the Ghor, is being supported and supplemented by the advance of the King of Arabia's troops south and east of that historic region. The two expeditions emphasize the physical fact that the Ghor, which contains the Dead Sea and the Jordan, naturally divides Palestine into east and west, each with its own peculiar features and history.

The Province of Moab consists of four narrow strips of land running north and south almost parallel with the Ghor. Most western of the four strips of land in Moab is the wild, rugged escarpment of the Dead Sea, which is high upraised, and from which this part of Palestine slopes gently down, with rolling hills, ruddy from the plough, or gold with waving harvests, on its wry east to desert waste.

Seen from the west, from the far shore of the Dead Sea, this mighty escarpment rises up, a great mountain wall, with slope and sheer precipice sometimes, to 4,000 feet; its projecting headlands grandly impressive, suggestive of the Infinite. South of this the view extends to where the promontory of El Lisan thrusts its head northward, and, in the bay which it forms, the Wadi Kerak empties its waters, a crystal stream against the darkening sea.

Even from below the eye wanders instinctively to the frowning precipice above, searching for castle or keep. There, thousands of feet above the sea, entirely separated from the mountain side (save for a narrow neck of rock), on a strange triangular ridge, stands the nest in the rock of Moab-Kerak, the Crow's Fortress, the Kier Moab of Isaiah, the capital of the province on whose ancient walls King Mesna sacrificed his eldest son to propitiate his god, Chemosh, in his war against Israel and Judah.

North of Trafile, and but three days' march from Shobek, it was one of the world's strongest natural fortresses. It probably had several entrances through tunnels bored in the rock itself, one of which was hollowed out into a impressive entrance hall. It has rock-hewn reservoirs, conduits and cisterns; the Moslem tradition is that Payen, King Fulk's cup-bearer, built it; it has traces not only of Roman and Byzantine occupation, but of much earlier periods. It was the residence of the Grand Master of the Hospitallers; Nalek-er-Daher, Sultan of Egypt, took it from him and restored it. It shows European design and influence, the rounded towers projecting considerably from the walls exhibiting a French origin, though the main walls are older; they increase from above in thickness as a protection against sapping.

The walls of the keep rise from a moat inside the front line of fortifications, the Christian chapel now being used as a mosque. There is a beautiful Gothic banquetting hall; and along the top of the wall runs a passage leading to a magnificent chamber and round tower with pointed windows. The Latin Kings of Jerusalem occupied it and increased its fortifications, for it guarded the caravan routes from Egypt and Arabia to Damascus. It became the chief town of the Crusading Seigneurie of Kerak de Montreal, which included also Hebron. When Renaud de Chatillon held it, Saladin repeatedly laid siege to it, taking it in 1188. It was this Renaud who was the provoking cause of the fatal termination of the Great Crusade by the battle of Hattin. Saladin offered Renaud his life if he would become a Moslem, but he refused, and so Moab passed into Moslem hands.

It was in 1238 that the Emir of Kerak captured Jerusalem and thus drove out the Knights. Abul Fida, who was born in Damascus in 1273, states there was a thermal spring and bath in the valley below Kerak, and that about the city there were many beautiful orchards of apricots, pears and pomegranates. Kerak to-day has a population of about eight thousand, a large number of whom live in the buildings under the great keep, while a Turkish garrison occupies the upper towers.

Like the rest of the western portion of Moab, in which it is situated, the district round Kerak is capable of great agricultural development. Stretches of wheat and millet may be seen, while cattle are bred both there and further east. Some attempts have been made to place sailing vessels and a steam ferry upon the Dead Sea so that the products of Moab may reach Jerusalem, its natural outlet, instead of being dispersed by the long, tedious, caravan routes round the north and south of the Dead Sea. The Hedjas railway is of some service, but necessary connections are still wanting. The spasmodic efforts which the venal Turkish garrisons of the neighborhood make to control marauding tribesmen merely increase the exasperation caused to the fellahin. Seeing the advantages which have accrued to the dwellers on the west side on the Jordan from the advent of the Egyptian expeditionary force, the dwellers in Moab are eagerly hoping that the King of Arabia's forces will effect for them a like liberation from the oppression and neglect of the Osmanli Turks.

Blood Poison Developed

As a Result of Accident—Nerves Break Down After Three Weeks of Suffering—A Glowing Tribute to Treatment Used

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 12.—Blood poisoning seems to become more common from year to year, and the dread of it is ever on the increase. In the case reported here the doctor did not seem able to get rid of it, and after three weeks of suffering the patient was almost a nervous wreck.

Mrs. Susie Thompson, Smith street, Kingston, Ont., writes:

"Early in the fall of 1916 I had a painful accident. I ran a sliver under my thumb nail, and neglected having it extracted. My thumb festered very badly, in fact my arm was fearfully swollen up to the elbow. It developed into blood poison, and I had the doctor lance it several times, but it failed to get better. With the intense pain and loss of sleep I became a nervous wreck. After following the doctor's orders for three weeks and not getting any benefit I wrote my mother about it. By return mail she sent me a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment. The very first application eased the pain, and I slept that night quite easily. I kept using the Ointment regularly, and by the fifth day all the swelling was gone, and also the inflammation.

"During this time I had become so weakened and run down that my whole nervous system seemed affected. I was very nervous and restless, appetite became poor, and I had frequent headaches. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and had the same splendid results from this as from the Ointment. Using the Nerve Food internally built up my system and made me strong, while using the Ointment externally healed my sore thumb. I am now quite well, thanks to your wonderful remedies—the only regret I have is that I did not begin using them earlier, and saved myself months of suffering, to say nothing of Doctor's bills."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

DEATH FOR SLEEPING.

Americans Face One of the Tragedies of Warfare.

If any Canadian soldier has been sentenced to death for sleeping on duty or if any British soldier has been executed for any disgraceful offence the fact has not received wide publicity, so that this feature of war's stern reality is first brought to our attention in the American army. It was announced some time ago that an American soldier had been found guilty of rape and murder and had been executed. A few days ago the announcement was made that four American soldiers had been court-martialed and condemned to death for sleeping on sentry duty. The civilian at first sight does not appreciate the heinousness of this offence, for to go to sleep in the middle of the night seems an extremely natural thing to do. On the other hand, to be drunk when on sentry duty seems disgraceful. Military law, however, makes no distinction between being drunk when on sentry duty and being asleep. In either case it is held that the neglect of duty may expose hundreds, perhaps thousands, of men to death, and that one man's failure to be on the alert might result in a great military disaster.

Gen. Pershing has sent the records of the court-martial to Washington, although he had the power to order the men to be shot, and from this it is inferred that the unfortunate men will not be called upon to face a firing party. However vital it is that sentries shall keep awake when on duty, it is plain that to fall asleep is a less grievous offence than to surrender to the enemy, to foment mutiny or to do any other deliberate act which tends to betray the cause for which the soldier has enlisted. It is not likely that President Wilson will be less kindly in this matter than was President Lincoln, when he refused to approve the death sentence of a country boy who was found asleep at his post. Indeed, Lincoln would permit no sentence of death to be carried out by his generals before he had personally examined the evidence. The War Department of the United States issued a similar order a short time ago at the suggestion of the President, but it referred only to soldiers who might be sentenced to death while in the United States. Abroad Gen. Pershing has absolute authority, and does not require in any case to receive sanction from Washington.

The New York Times tells a story concerning a rather riotous New York company at Camp Upton last summer. They were a raw draft and were sent to spend the first night in camp in an isolated barracks. They were feeling jolly and meant to make a night of it despite the orders of the young second lieutenant who was in charge of them. They disregarded his command for silence, and created a considerable disturbance. Finally the young officer ordered them to dress and fall in. Then he marched them out amid the mud and stumps and kept them tramping for three hours. At the end of that time they were ready and willing to go to bed. Next day the captain called the men together and explained to them why between nine o'clock at night and reveille soldiers must sleep and permit others to sleep. He told them that if there were 150 men in barracks and 149 of them wanted to talk, they must remain silent, so that the one man might sleep. "The reason is very simple," he concluded, "for if a soldier misses sleep he's got to do without it, and if he becomes sleepy and tries to make it up on sentry duty he is shot."

Soap Famine In Belgium.

"It has been noted several times," says the Belgian Information Bureau, "that soap is almost completely lacking in certain places in occupied Belgium, where it is sold for an exorbitant price. This is the case in the region of Charleroi. The working people, according to a Teautonized Brussels journal, do not wash any more, except after the manner of cats. Consequently the scurvy is spreading, especially in the homes dependent on aid, to such a degree that several communal administrations—notably that of Chatelet—are about to take special measures to stop this new scourge. In certain communes establishments are immediately to be created where those who are contaminated can take special baths under the supervision of doctors and nurses."

A bullet-throwing weapon has been made in the shape of a watch. Called on to surrender your watch, you may use it to shoot the thief.

Heroism.

Heroism is the brilliant triumph of the soul over the flesh, that is to say over fear; fear of poverty, of suffering, of calumny, of illness, of loneliness and of death. There is no real piety without heroism. Heroism is the dazzling and glorious concentration of courage.

Tighten Gradually on New Hose.

In installing new water pipes, rubber hose, etc., do not tighten excessively at first. This will not stop any minute leak except temporarily and the rubber walls of the hose are apt to become broken. Tighten gradually and the leak will be cured.

Strength of Stitches.

Tests made by the bureau of standards in Washington prove that seams sewn with the double lock stitch are stronger than those sewn with the shuttle stitch and are less weakened by breaks of the thread.

An English Poet on Canada and War

R. E. VERNEDE AT FRENCH RIVER, ONT.

SIX years ago an English writer, R. E. Vernède by name, spent a summer in Canada and wrote under the title of "The Fair Dominion" one of the happiest description of this country, from the Old Country point of view, that has yet seen the light. Vernède had married a Canadian girl and had a sympathy for things Canadian, which led him to appreciate rather than criticise the New World which he found stretching between Atlantic and Pacific. Although by no means of fighting temperament, he enlisted in the Public School Battalion of the Royal Fusiliers on the outbreak of the war, gaining a commission in the Rifle Brigade early in 1915. A number of poems from his pen attracted much attention in the columns of the "London Times" and other publications—one of which, entitled "To Canada," was widely quoted on this side.

"Canada, Canada, is not thy face most fair?
Is there a land men know fairer than thee?
Where is heaven half so vast? Where blows a lovelier air?
What are thy sons doing here o'er the sea?

So runs the first of six beautiful verses. Wounded in 1916 he went back to the trenches only to fall mortally wounded in an attack on Havrincourt Wood in April, 1917. Like Rupert Brooke and Alan Seeger, and the young Canadian poet, Bernard Freeman Trotter, R. E. Vernède reached his highest powers of expression under the intense emotion of "The Great Adventure," and his verses were eagerly read by lovers of fine poetry. Edmund Gosse, the great English critic, volunteered to edit a collection of these "War Poems," a Canadian edition of which has been issued in Toronto. They contain some truly inspired lines, notably the opening dedication to his wife:—

"What shall I bring to you, wife of mine,
When I come back from the war?
A ribbon your dear brown hair to twine?
A shawl from a Berlin store?
Say, shall I choose you some Prussian hack
When the Uhlans we o'erwhelm?
Shall I bring you a Potsdam goblet back
And the crest from a Prince's helm?

Little you'd care what I laid at your feet,
Ribbon or crest or shawl—
What if I bring you nothing, sweet,
Nor maybe come home at all?
Ah, but you'll know, brave Heart, you'll know
Two things I'll have sent to send;
Mine honour for which you bade me go
And my love—my love to the end.

Used First Sewing Machine.

The first woman in America to use a sewing machine died at Winsted, in Connecticut, at the age of eighty-six. She was Miss Elizabeth Kilbourn, who in the fifties was a teacher in a private school at New Hartford. When Elias Howe was experimenting with his invention, he asked her to help him, and so to her fell the honor of being the first to use the new machine.

Speed on the Piano.

When a well-known pianiste as playing a presto by Mendelssohn a man who was present set himself to counting the notes and the time occupied. She played 5,595 notes in four minutes and three seconds. Every one of these notes involved three movements of a finger, elbow or arm. At 24 notes per second that amounted to 72 movements a second.

Growing of Trouble.

Annoying troubles, noxious weeds that they are, must have the elements of ordinary life or they will fade away and die—a receptive soil in which to grow, the moisture of one's own tears as well as the tears of as many other good people as can be induced to cry, and the gentle sunlight of sympathetic attention.

The Bureau of Mines has estimated the total gasoline needs of America for war purposes will be 929,000 barrels for the next few years. Government figures show that the total daily consumption in the United States is 6,500,000 gallons.

The Bureau of Mines has authorized the publication of a bulletin which says that a saving of 1,500,000 gallons of gasoline may be effected every day by Americans by the careful observation of certain simple suggestions. The Bureau of mines would conserve a half million gallons more of gasoline daily than will be demanded by the government to operate its necessary war equipment or to carry on its other necessary industries during times of war.

What Americans need to learn at this time is to conserve gasoline judiciously and sensibly.—Peoria Journal

Turn Out Limbs in 48 Hours.

One thousand maimed soldiers have already been fitted, and 9,000 are on the waiting list.

NEW YORK'S BURIED WEALTH

Millions of Dollars' Worth of Copper Lead and Other Products Deposited Beneath Streets.

Under the streets of New York city are deposits of copper, lead and other valuable products far exceeding in quantity and value any mine yet discovered throughout the world. Engineers and scientists estimate the amount of copper to be found in the boroughs of Manhattan and Bronx at 30,000,000 pounds, valued approximately at $7,500,000. The lead is estimated at 60,000,000 pounds, worth something like $4,800,000.

This discovery was announced at the electrical exposition at Grand Central palace, where the Consolidated Telegraph and Electric Subway company had a large exhibit showing a full-size cross section of one of the city's principal thoroughfares. In this mammoth cross section of earth and rock the veins of copper and of lead could be easily traced. Of course, the veins of copper are the wires carrying the electric current for lighting, heating, power and communication to every nook and corner of the great metropolis, while the lead is used to protect the cables.

The street cross section at the electrical exposition was 70 feet long by 25 feet deep. It showed the location of the street railway conduits and rails, electric service substation, distributing station, conduits, splicing chambers, with their unique water draining systems and other interesting things that lay beneath the streets of New York and mark the advanced stage of its civilization. It took a crew of 20 men a week to construct this interesting exhibit.

CHIEF HARBOR OF MACEDONIA

Salonica, Built About 315 B. C., Was Named by Its Founder for His Wife.

In the days when St. Paul Addressed his Epistles to the Thessalonians Salonica was not modern, for it was built about 315 B. C. on the site of an older city called Therme, says the London Globe, and was named by its founder after his wife, a sister of Alexander the Great. It has always been a place of importance, as it is the chief harbor of Macedonia, and was a point on the ancient highway from Rome to the East.

With a few fine buildings, like the old mosque which had been in turn a temple of Venus and a Christian church, it has always been a collection of houses largely of wood, and, therefore, highly inflammable in the extreme continuous heat of summer.

The conflagration which recently swept away the main part of it is not by very many the first experience of the kind in its history, one of the most memorable being the fire at the beginning of September, 1890, which did $4,000,000 worth of damage.

Bidding for Trouble.

These women certainly do get away with it.

Who would suspect the supreme court of New York having pronounced views on the equality of the sexes? But here is Justice Goff, comments the St. Paul News, who not only admits that a woman may practice law, but insists that she is just like other lawyers.

Mary L. Lilly rose to address the court. "Are you a member of the bar?" queried the justice.

"Yes, your honor," the lady replied.

"Then you should remove your hat, like all other lawyers."

This little dialogue merely shows that the court values the "woman's prerogative" of changing her mind. Not many years ago Dr. Mary Walker was in trouble with the courts because she wanted to wear trousers, "like all other doctors." Now what would Justice Goff decide if Lawyer Lilly carried his advice to a logical conclusion and came into court in regular male attire, "like all other lawyers?"

Expired Exemptions Before Judge Huycke

Class One Men Seek Extension of Their Temporary Exemptions —Some Appeals Dismissed This Morning—Decision Reserved in Others.

MAY REVIEW EXEMPTIONS

Acting on instructions from Ottawa which he received yesterday, Judge Huycke this morning re-opened the military tribunal for this county, and dealt with a number of appeals for the extension of exemptions which have recently expired or will expire in the near future. Mr. G. W. Hatton, the military representative, was present.

From recent radical amendments in the enforcement of the Military Service Act, including a proposal to review and reconsider exemptions granted in the first class, it is likely that this work will de velop in the sessions of Judge Huycke's appeal tribunal.

Every man who has been exempted must understand that his exemption is only conditional. It is not final or absolute, whatever the reasons for which it was granted. It may be countermanded at any time for a good cause, and if, on examination, an exemption is found to have been made on improper evidence, it will be set aside. Also in such cases in which exemption is allowed on condition of employment, working the land or agricultural employment, such persons must work at that employment continuously, otherwise he forfeits his exemption. If he does not show proper results in his employment in the way of crop production, he may forfeit his exemption. Any cases of this kind that may be brought to the notice of the authorities will be dealt with by them.

This Morning's Cases.

The following exemptions were reviewed this morning:

Howard Murney, a thresher employed on Mr. Breckenridge's farm, Cavan, applied for further exemption, expiring on May 12th, on the grounds of financial loss to himself if he is compelled to dispose of his threshing machine hurriedly. His previous exemption had been granted to enable him to make arrangements to sell his machine, but he has not yet made a satisfactory disposal. Mr. Breckenridge appeared and said he is unable to replace Murney's services. Mr. Berry also appeared and said he did not know what will be done if everything is taken and men gone. Mr. Donaldson and Reeve Green also appeared.

Decision was withheld.

James H. Gilgour, 257 Dublin St., exempted until April 1st for the purpose of getting business affairs into shape. His father, Thomas Gilgour, said he is the mainstay of the business. Gilgour had been turned down on previous enlistment. Gilgour had made no effort to sell the business.

Decision will be considered.

GERMANY WILL HAVE TO CONTINUE ON SHORT RATIONS

The Ukraine is Not Expected to Solve the Food Problem in Germany This Year

TRANSPORT DIFFICULTIES

(Canadian Press.)

New York, April 19. — No essential relief for food conditions in Germany may be expected from the Ukraine, during the present economic year, said Privy Councillor Von Eynern, of the State Food Commission, in discussing the food supply situation, at a meeting in Berlin, according to the Cologne Gazette, of March 21st, a copy of which has just been received here. Germany, he added, must continue to save and husband food as heretofore. Importation of supplies that may be available in the Ukraine, Von Eynern declared, is connected with great difficulties, and no extensive imports can be depended on before June. Even then, the fact must be considered that the transportation possibilities by rail will be on a narrow scale, and the capacity of the Danube waterway also will be limited.

DRUNK MAY KNOW.

What Became of the Keg of Whisky That Was Spirited Away.

NO CITIZEN SHOULD BE WITHOUT A TAG TO-MORROW

All preparations rae compl'ted for the Veterans' Tag Day to-morrow, and all that is necessary to secure a splendid success is the co-operation of the public, which will surely be forthcoming. The school children had their chance to help to-day and everybody else in the city will be given an opportunity to-morrow, as a battalion of "taggers," comprising veterans, members of the Ladies' Auxiliar- Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, and other ladies who are assisting in the campaign, will be on duty on the principal streets. The Children's Aid Society boxes have been secured for the occasion and all will be in operation. The new club rooms over Moncur's drug store, will be headquarters for the day and the campaign will not be declared closed until 9 o'clock tomorrow evening. Veterans will visit Lakefield, Norwood, Keene and Havelock as well, so that citizens of those places will have a chance to help. It will be a big day's effort on the part of the G. W. V. A. and if the weather is at all favorable the results should be great.

Na citizen of Peterborough should be without a tag to-morrow. The cause is a most worthy one and the Veterans desire every support.

WILL RESIST CONSCRIPTION

Lord Mayor of Dublin Was Chairman at Meeting Opposed to Conscription in Ireland

CONFERENCE ADJOURNED

(Special to Examiner.)

London, April 19.—The conference of Irish Nationalists, Sinn Feiners, O'Brienites and Laborites, held in Dublin, under the chairmanship of the Lord Mayor, yesterday unanimously passed a resolution declaring their determination to resist conscription. The resolution was similar to the one adopted by the Irish bishops at Maynooth earlier in the day.

The conference then adjourned until to-day.

More Soldiers Arrive Home From Overseas

Sergt. J. W. Allen One of the Peterboro' "Original Firsts" Among Last Night's Arrivals

A party of Peterboro soldiers invalided home from overseas service, reached the city via the G.T.R. last evening, and were met at the station by representatives of the city.

Among the party was Sergt. J. N. Allen, one of the "Original Firsts," who enlisted here in August, 1914, and went overseas as a member of the 2nd Battalion. Sergt. Allen has been returned as no longer fit for service overseas and he will be attached for duty in Canada to the Special Service Company at Kingston.

Another to return last evening was Pte. W. H. Field, of the 4th C.M.R. He enlisted with B Squadron of the 8th C.M.R. and went overseas in the summer of 1915, and was transferred to the 4th C.M.R. in France early in January, 1916, being invalided home to England after a long period in the trenches. After a stay in England, he was sent back to Canada, not being fit for any further service at the front. His father, Sergt. W. H. Field, Sr., has been home for some time.

Corp. W. Allen, who went overseas with the 39th Battalion, enlisting here early in 1915, was another to get home last night.

Pte. R. Glover, of Peterboro, who went overseas with the 238th Forestry Battalion, and Pte. R. Aker, who enlisted here in the 59th Battalion, were others in last night's party.

Car Of Seed Wheat Below First Grade At Reduced Price

A car of Marquis wheat that is not of first grade is being held for distribution among farmers of this district. It is not up to the quality of the sample accepted, and needs re-cleaning. With this exception, the wheat is satisfactory, and will be offered to farmers at a reduced price. A car of first quality seed was received yesterday and apportioned to its purchasers. The shipments have been late in delivery to Peterborough, and there was some opinion that the supply was less than expected from the Government. Mr. G. A. Gillespie bought forty bushels from Hogg and Lytle for local use and to help meet the demand.

Situation On Western Front Is Unchanged Says War Office Report

Germans Were Repulsed in An Attack Which They Launched Yesterday Around Givenchy—Enemy Suffered Heavy Losses — Artillery Activity

SEVERAL ENEMY ATTACKS BROKEN UP

Canadian Press:

LONDON, April 19.— The Germans were completely repulsed in an attack they launched yesterday around Givenchy, on the southern side of the Lys battle front, the War Office announced to-day. When assaults ceased, after heavy losses, the enemy had only been able to secure a limited footing at one or two points of the more advanced British defenses.

Six different German divisions, it has been determined, were engaged in the unsuccessful attack in the Givenchy-Stvenant sector. The enemy launched further attacks last evening south of Kemmel. These were broken up by the British artillery and machine gun fire.

WAS NO CHANGE.

LONDON, April 19. — (Official.) —There was no change in the situation along the entire British front during the night, which passed in comparative quiet with the exception of activity by artillery on both sides. The attacks against the line in the Kemmel sector, the repulse of which was reported to-day, took place yesterday morning. In minor enterprises at various points during the night the British captured a few prisoners and some machine guns.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

The hostile attacks reported to be in progress yesterday morning south of Kemmel were successfully repulsed and other attacks launched by the enemy in this locality during the evening were broken up by our artillery and machine gun fire. With the exception of artillery activity on both sides in the battle sectors, the night passed comparatively quiet on the whole British front. We captured some prisoners and machine guns as a result of minor enterprises at different points.

GERMANS UNDERFED

(United Press Service.)

(By William Phillips Simms.)

Ten O'Clock Despatch—

With the British Army in Flanders, April 18. — Through rain squalls and a cutting north easter, the Germans kept up their pressure on the Lys front to-day.

Evidence of the importance of Hindenburg attacking the hills southeast of Ypres, is shown in the presence of the 117th and the 11th Bavarian Corps, and the Alpine Corps in the sector from Mont Kemmell to Baulleul (a front of three miles).

Every man of these units is from the German hill country, and Von Bernhardt, who is in command from Wytscheate to Baulleul, is renowned as a hill fighter.

HEAVY LOSSES.

The assaults south of the Meppe forest reveal the necessity for the Germans enlarging the salient of the main enemy thrust toward Hazenbrouck. Prisoners declare the cross fire of the British guns created havoc in the salient before St. Venant, inflicting heavy losses there.

The German troops, themselves unclerfed, are surprised at the quantities and the quality of captured British food, which constitutes the only decent rations they have had in many months.

Our Ample Reserves Are Still Intact, Says Gen. Foch

MILAN, Italy, April 19 —"We hold the Boche waves, but that is not sufficient—we will do something more," Gen. Foch is quoted as saying in an interview published by the Corriere Dellazer to-day. "Our ample reserves are still intact. We are satisfied with the progress of events."

Bolshevik Power Is Threatened

Growth of a Counter Revolutionary Movement is Reported Here—German Troops Operating in Russia

MAKE PRISONERS WORK

Special to the Examiner.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Germany has only six divisions—72,000 men on the Russian front, according to semi official reports received here to-day, while the invading army, which captured Helsingfors consisted of about forty thousand men. The other German forces operating in Russia number less than 100,000, it is authoritatively stated.

PRISONERS RELEASED.

Since peace was declared between the Bolsheviki and Germany more than two million German and Austrian war prisoners have been released. On the other hand officials here declare very few of the two million Russian prisoners in Germany and Hungary have found their way back to their own country. Thousands have died in prison camps. More than four thousand graves have been located at Bandenburg alone while others impressed into Teuton industries, have small chances of being repatriated. The majority who have been allowed to return, are totally incapacitated or permanently crippled, the despatches state.

RUSSIAN UPRISING.

From sources which cannot be divulged the Kerensky Government officials in this country have recently received reports of the growth of a counter revolutionary movement which threatens the Bolsheviki power. Only a decisive defeat to the Allies on the western front can prevent a Russian uprising, they declare.

BRITISH LINE UNCHANGED

Germans Are Trying to Flank Bethune But Apparently Are Unsuccessful—British Fire is Deadly

OFFENSIVE SLOWING UP

Afternoon Despatch:

(By William Philip Simms.)

(United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, April 19. — Aside from Haig's withdrawal from the awkward Passchendaele pocket, the British line to-day looks pretty much as it did three days ago.

On the high ground north and east of Givenchy, as this is cabled there is some German activity. Von Quast is doggedly trying to flank Bethune, but apparently is unsuccessful. The shelling of the British guns is deadly.

ITALIANS IN FRANCE

Premeir Orlando Makes an Important Announcement.

ROME, April 19.—Premier Orlando announced in the Chamber of Deputies to-day that Italian troops would be despatched to the battle front in France.

Archbishop Here St. George's Day

St. George's Day will be duly celebrated in Peterborough this year. As already announced, the Archbishop of Ontario will be in the city from Monday next till Wednesday morning.

His Grace will arrive at the C.P.R. station at 3.20 p.m. on Monday. At 8 p.m. a reception in his honour will be held in St. John's Parish Hall. All are most cordially invited to come and welcome his Grace.

On Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. a great national service will be held at St. John's church, when the Archbishop will preach a national sermon. The service will be sung by the united choirs of St. John and All Saints' churches.

It is to be hoped that all Anglican churchmen will make an effort to attend either the one or the other of these great national gatherings, for it must be remembered that St. George's Day is the Empire as well as England's national day.

The red roses the Empire's national emblem, will be offered for sale on Monday and Tuesday next, and it is to be hoped that no true Briton will be found without one on his or her breast.

On Sunday the 28th inst., St. George's Day service will be repeated at St. George's church, when the preacher will be the Rev. Dr. Mackem, Provost of Trinity College, Toronto.

Raid On The Austrian Front

(Canadian Press.)

ROME, April 19.—British troops operating on the Italian front made a successful raid yesterday in the Asiago Basin, where they inflicted heavy losses on the Austrians and took prisoners, says to-day's War Office report. The artillery fire along the whole front has been only desultory.

EXEMPTION REGULATIONS

Farmers and Railwaymen Will Not Be Granted Exemptions—"A Misplaced Hope" Says Despatch From Ottawa

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 19.—Opinions held or expressed to the effect that in spite of what the Government's new man-power proposals may seem to infer, exemptions in special cases will still be granted, even to men who come within the scope of the first peremptory call are based on a misplaced hope or a wrong reading of the new regulations. It has been stated that railway employees, for instance, will still be largely exempt, and there appears to be an impression that when it comes down to the fine point the Government will not take farmers, even should they come within the age of 20 and 23 inclusive, unmarried. Such statements are entirely without foundation.

The only power the Minister of Militia has is to grant absence of leave, without pay, to such men as have other members at the front in service. This will probably apply to the only remaining sons. Railwaymen and farmers who have been heretofore will be taken in spite of hat exemption, should they fall between the ages of 20 and 23, inclusive, and be unmarried.

The Spring Fair

With the attendance to-day and yesterday at the Spring Fair, the committee in charge have every confidence the objective will be over reached. Last night, notwithstanding the unpleasant weather, hundreds turned out and an as usual the stocks had to be replenished constantly.

The ladies of the Sacred Heart parish have reason to congratulate themselves not only on the financial results of their two days in the dining room, but also on the favourable comments made upon their efforts. To-day the ladies of the Immaculate conception church are doing a good business and holding up their end in giving the best and daintiest meals.

Letters.

There are letters at the Canadian post office, Spring Fair, for: Mr. Jas. Dillon, Mr. Ted Hanrahan, Mr. Fred Grady, Mr. Earl Graham, Mr. Eleric Letellier, Mr. Kel Sheehy, Mr. Dan Lebarr, Mr. Dan White, Mr. Thos. Masterson.

"WETS" GET 70 PER CENT.

In New York State.

Albany, April 19. — Recapitulation on Tuesday and Wednesday's local option elections in New York State, showed that although prohibition forces won out in a bare majority in 30 cities voting, the wets secured the larger municipalities and retained nearly 70 per cent. of the total involved.

The line up stands: For prohibition, 20; for retaining license, 19.

Syracuse and Schnectady, the largest cities voting, went wet by big majorities, ranging from approximately 2,000 to 2,500 respectively; Binghamton, the only other second-class city affected, went dry.

The total vote averaged 70 per cent. greater than that cast a the last gubernatorial election.

The sale of intoxicating liquors must cease on October 1st this year in the cities which voted dry.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: The following article from "Le Pays" ought to arrest the attention of every true Canadian and loyal British subject. Here in Ottawa we now know how truly grave—if not yet desperate—is the condition of the Empire in relation to this war and its outcome. The British Empire's back is now against the wall. "He that is not for us, is against us" now for sure. The logic of events at last compels all such and all those who sympathise with them, to take their stand with the Empire's enemies. There is no time left for further camouflage. We are down to bed-rock. "Are you willing to help, or do you refuse?" That is the question. Opposition at Ottawa and elsewhere is still to the fore with its hypocritical talk. Quebec at home, lay and clerical, is doing well, isn't it? But God bless the Irish in the United States! They couldn't be hired to funk conscription, but rejoice in it, and ask with surprise: "What is the matter with the Irish in Ireland?"

I refer to their opposition to conscription, Home Rule or no Home Rule. The time for shilly-shallying is passed for all of us unless we want to see the Empire go under, while some discuss, or what is nearer the truth, pretend to do so—and we have not a few of that kind in Peterboro.

We must now be prepared, we are told at headquarters, for extreme measures and efforts to save the Empire. Let us drop all ease, especially the detestable self-interest which for business reasons, pretends to sympathize with a minority and, as Wellington said before Waterloo, — "Rush forward to save the nation."

J. H. Burnham.

The editorial in question is as follows:

Montreal, April 17.—Le Pays says: "What can the object be in creating this division between English and French-Canadians. Let us face this question from a material and a practical point of view. What have we gained the last few years in allowing a band of narrow-minded and fanatical men to make us believe that we are the first people in the world, and we have nothing to envy in other people, and that we have a providential mission to accomplish on this continent? It must be very providential, indeed, if we are to judge of the results obtained up to the present time. Does it mean that here in the Province of Quebec we are still in the times dear to the partizans of the holy Kings of France? Does it mean that we are rivals of Spain and Ireland in the ignorance of our rural population? Does it mean that there is no liberty for the French press in this province?

"During the past few years every means has been employed to deceive our people by inculcating in their minds the worst possible prejudices, and stirring up the fires of discord between English and French. Under the pretext of fighting for the conservation of the French language we are forbidden to read French books of a high class. The worst calumnies are put forth against the English and the 'damned French,' so is it surprising that the French-Canadian should be imbued with superstition, and should swallow everything that is told him? We have reached a point when it is impossible to carry on a political or municipal campaign without bringing in questions of race and religion, and in consequence the Province of Quebec has become the chosen abode of hypocrisy, deceit and fraud, and the painful part of the whole business is that the great majority of French-Canadians realize the fact, and are too cowardly to protest against it.

"Who will ever make us believe that the English hate us because we are of the French race, when England and France have cemented with their blood an entente which has become an alliance? Who, also, believes that the English dislike the French tongue, the official language of the diplomatic world? Some people mistake for hatred, perhaps, the ardent desire to see the Province of Quebec follow the other provinces in the march of progress, and is it not more plausible to think that it is the fear on the part of our present masters to see the French-Canadians educated and unprejudiced, and to look with a paternal eye on the divisions between the English and French of Canada?"

ALEXANDER GETS HIS CALL.

Further Inroads Are Made on the St. Louis Nationals—Several Liable.

ST. PAUL, Neb., April 19.—The official notice summoning Grover Cleveland Alexander, star pitcher for the Chicago National League Baseball Club, to go with the draft quota from Howard County, Nebraska, to Camp Funston, April 30, was sent to Chicago by Alexander's draft board to-day.

REV. M. E. SEXSMITH MOVES.

From Bay of Quinte to the Hamilton Conference.

The Transfer Committee of the Methodist Church has made its changes, including the following ministers from the Bay of Quinte Conference, who are well-known here: Rev. M. E. Sexsmith, of Picton, to Hamilton Conference, and Rev. A. H. Going, of Lindsay, to Alberta.

Jerusalem Re-established.

The taking of Jerusalem by the allies is interesting and important in several respects. First, incidents in the capture serve to show how the spirit of the allies contrasts with that of the Germans. Where the Teutons are said to have taken sacred relics from the Tomb of the Holy Sepulchre to send to the Kaiser for his "war museum," the British commander, in driving out the Turks, used every possible precaution to protect the city from damage. Then, in a military sense, the fall of Jerusalem is a severe blow to the Teutons and their allies, because it means control of Palestine, and, with the taking of Bagdad, must greatly weaken the Turks' belief in the omnipotence of their German partners. And it gives new life to Jewish hopes for the establishment of a republic in the old homeland of the Hebrews. The British Government has already declared its intention to aid this project possibly by establishing a protectorate to give the re-established Jewish nation, if re-established it is actually to be, the support it will need at the outset.

With this latest defeat of Turkish forces, the effort to cripple England by taking the Suez Canal and invading Egypt seems to be finally checked. The Turks have been conducting this campaign since November of 1914. At one time within fifteen miles of the canal, they have been steadily forced back by Anglo-Egyptian troops, with the support of Australians and New Zealanders and French and British regulars. The British invasion of Palestine began last March, and its success after ten months was a great triumph for Britain's army.—St. Nicholas.

FOLLOW CAMPAIGN OF JOSHUA

British Army Duplicates Victory of Head of Israelite Hosts, Marching Over the Same Ground.

And now the British Mesopotamian army has captured Hebron, 20 miles from the birthplace of Christ, observes the Wichita ((Kan.) Beacon.

More than 33 centuries ago Joshua, at the head of the Israelite hosts, marched over the same ground, capturing Hebron and putting its king to death. In one of the battles he found the time was too short and so he commanded the sun and moon to stand still while his men fought.

Forty years before, Moses was leading the children of Israel out of Egypt to this promised land of Canaan. He sent out spies, who were overawed by the giant sons of Anak whom they saw at Hebron. All but Joshua and Caleb gave unfavorable reports, and the Lord was displeased at the perverseness and the credulity of the Israelites, and decreed that they must wander 40 years in the wilderness.

"How are the mighty fallen," mournfully sang David as a requiem for his friend Jonathan, nearly 3,000 years ago, and then he asked the Lord for guidance. God commanded him to go to Hebron, and there he was anointed king of Judah and reigned seven years before going to Jerusalem.

And almost 40 centuries ago Abraham built an altar at Hebron and there bought his first land. There was buried his faithful wife Sarah, and also Isaac and Rebekah and Jacob and Leah and Joseph.

The bones of the shepherd patriarchs, of David, the sweet singer of Israel; of Joshua, the mighty warrior, have crumbled and mingled with the sands of the centuries, but the world fights on over its ancient battlegrounds, and mankind, like Sisyphus, rolling the great burden to the top of the hill, sees it roll back and create another task.

But mankind has learned. Upon reaching Hebron it refuses to be awed by the giants who bar the way to the promised land of world peace and freedom.

It is a strange and wonderful drama that is taking place on earth today.

The Sound of Guns.

Conflicting statements have been made from time to time as to the distance at which the guns can be heard. On a still night, when an easterly breeze is prevailing, says a writer in the Dundee Advertiser, I have heard the dull thud quite distinctly in South London. It is this disquieting sound, not less than the din of an occasional air raid, which gives Londoners an idea how near the conflict really is. Now records are being prepared which show the extent of the distance at which the guns are heard. Scientists at University college declare they can be distinguished at a range of 200 miles. This would include places like Warwick, Hull, Cromer, Brighton and Weymouth. Sound travels at a rate of about 1,090 feet a second, so that the sound of the guns in Flanders reaches London about 12½ minutes after the explosions occur.

The Soldier's Life.

Sergeant Finnegan was all dressed up and looked it. He was stationed at Fort Tilden—which is away among the sand dunes on the far end of Rockaway Point—and he was going to take a day off, writes a camp correspondent.

"Good-by, fellers," he shouted. "It's going to be a cold night. Me for a warm bed at home tonight." And he started on a run for the boat waiting at the pier.

He had got about 25 yards along when he heard: "Sergeant Finnegan." The voice was the voice of his company commander, and the sergeant turned and went back and stood at salute. The captain spoke;

"You will distribute the underwear this afternoon and bring over the stoves which arrived at the barracks this morning."

A Hindu Prince on Missionaries.

Never shall I forget a frank conversation which I had in his palace with His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda. He told me of some of the measures which he has already introduced for the betterment of his subjects, and of the difficulties which he had encountered. His admiration for things American is so unqualified as to be almost naive, but I think I was most of all impressed when he said, "I am thinking of calling together the missionaries and asking them to tell me their views on how we can improve the quality of the native priesthood. Then I want to call the priests together and say to them, 'Look at the missionaries. See the sacrifices they are making to help our people. You ought to go out and do the same kind of work.'" His Highness has already established a professorship of Comparative Religions in the Baroda College for the express purpose of introducing the native religious leaders to other religions with a view of improving the quality of their own.—Tyler Dennet, in Asia.

The Austrian Emperor.

The impression which the Austrian Emperor has made on his subjects, since his ascension, is showing itself in the nicknames which he bears in Vienna—Karl der Ploetzliche—which "Diarist," of the Westminster Gazette, renders as Charles the Man of Impulse, because of the Emperor's brusque decisions. The Czech nickname, according to "Diarist," is: "Karel Novak spravce konkursni podstaty firmy Austria," which he renders into English as "Charles Jones, official receiver for the liquidation of the House of Austria."

No Pedestal.

"It's funny, but—"
"But what?"
"Standing on your dignity never seems to lift you above the rest of the crowd."

Rain Carries Electricity.

Rain carries both positive and negative charges of electricity, says a French scientist who has experimented exhaustively.

Prepare for Sudden Deeds.

We prepare ourselves for sudden deeds by the reiterated choice of good or evil which gradually determines character.

Rowboat in Three Pieces.

A rowboat for light service has been invented which can be taken apart in three pieces for carting and shipping.

Currie's Message To The Canadians

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA April 19.—In anticipation of a tremendous assault against the Canadian lines, Lieut. Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, K.C.B., commanding the corps, under special order of March 27, exhorted all ranks to advance or fall where they stood facing the enemy. "You have overcome the enemy before, and with God's help you will again," said General Currie to his men. "To those who die I say, "you will not die, but sleep into immortality. Your mothers will not lament your fate, but will be proud to have born such sons. Your names will be revered forever by your grateful country, and God will take you unto himself."

ONE APPLICATION HAS BEEN RECEIVED.

Not a Very Enthusiastic Response in This City for Enlistment in Tank Battalion.

Lieut.-Col. J. Mills has received one lone application for enlistment in the Tank Battalion which is being formed in Canada for service in France. The application came from Sergeant Sam. Mills, of Kingston, son of Col. Mills, who for some time past has been attached to the instructional corps in the Limestone City.

BUY YOUR FOOTWEAR Before the Prices Go Up

The Canadian Government has been contemplating putting an embargo on goods coming from the United States. This will make the price of all lines of Footwear go away up, as most of the fine boots come from the States. We have known this for some time and our Mr. Zacks has been to the leading shoe centres in Canada and bought large lots of all Spring Boots at very low prices.

Young's Point Items Of Interest

James Carroll Was Thrown Under a Moving Wagon

YOUNG'S POINT, April 14.—Capt. Scolland is spending a couple of weeks' holidays visiting friends and acquaintances in Buffalo, N. Y., before the navigation season opens.

Miss Nellie McAuley has returned home to Peterborough, after spending the week end visiting friends in the village.

Mr. P. J. and Miss Mollie Young attended the dance in Lakefield given by the Lakefield Curling Club on the night of April 12th.

Miss Helen Brooks is spending a few weeks visiting friends in Peterborough.

Miss Jennie Kearney is spending the last couple of weeks visiting her sister, Mrs. F. G. Young, King street, Peterborough.

An Accident.

Mr. Jas. Carrol was the victim of a very painful accident on Monday last, when the team which he was driving attempted to run away. There was a small quantity of straw on the waggon at the time, which provided a slippery surface, and while endeavouring to check the team, Mr. Carroll slipped off the front of the waggon down on to the tongue, and from thence fell under the wheels. The front and back wheels on one side of the waggon passed over the forehead and head inflicting very severe scalp wounds. His many friends are congratulating him on the narrowness of his escape, which might easily have resulted more seriously.

Mr. Fred Johnson received a severe accident during the week also while working in the saw mill. The belting on one of the pulleys snapped, striking Mr. Johnson in the face. The nasal bones were fractured slightly.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Robinson of Peterborough, spent the week end in Young's Point visiting friends and renewing old acquaintances.

Mr. Edward Young spent Wednesday in Lakefield on business.

Is Recovering.

Her many friends will be pleased to hear that Mrs. A. Allan is making satisfactory improvement as the result of injuries sustained in a runaway accident with a horse and buggy while driving home from Peterborough. One shoulder was slightly fractured, but beyond that no serious injuries were received.

Mr. Pattie Young was in Lakefield on Wednesday.

Dr. Gibson of Lakefield, passed through the village on Wednesday.

Messrs. Albert Batten and George Barr passed through the village last week, taking with them a large herd of cattle for pasturage on Mr. Carr's ranch near Eel's Creek.

Mr. J. C. Strickland of Lakefield, was in the village during the week.

The Young's Point cheese factory has reopened for the coming season with Mr. Andrew Wilson as cheesemaker.

Mr. Wilbert McNaughton was in Peterborough on Thursday last on business.

Mrs. C. Fart of Peterborough, is spending the week visiting her sister, Mrs. Will Young.

WELSH MINERS ARE FLOCKING TO ENLIST.

LONDON, April 19.—The flow of recruits from the mining districts of Wales to Cardiff continues freely and to relieve the congestion at the receiving depot a general appeal has been made for persons to assist the recruiting officers. President Callaghan, of the Cardiff Chamber of Commerce at the Coal Shipping Exchange there, yesterday called for volunteers to assist in the work. He said the recruiting officers were virtually snowed under" and were working all day and until late at night without being able to deal with all the men who had come forward.

A GREAT VICTORY FOR THE ALLIES

Has been won by the fact that we have been able to supply them with food and money. But to make that victory effective we must continue the supplies until

THE WAR IS FINISHED.

The only way we can continue to do our share is by saving and investing our savings in war loans, and by leaving man power free as far as possible to produce food. One of the best ways to attain these objects is to adopt the cash and carry system. By paying cash the merchant is able to give you better value and enable you to save money to invest.

By carrying small parcels, the delivery can be done with less labour, and leave more help for the farmer. If you want to realize how much you can save by this system, come and see it worked out to perfection.

Every article in our store is marked in plain figures, showing you the actual amount you save. You do not need to ask. Come and look around. The result will surprise you.

Letter From A Peterboro' Soldier

Pte. Stanley Bucknell Refers to a Number of Peterboro' Boys Who He Met at the Front

In a letter to his mother, Mrs. A. Frick, Private Stanley Bucknell of Peterborough, one of the "Original Firsts," has the following to say:

France, Feb. 14th, 1918.

Dear Mother,—Received that Christmas parcel O.K. and believe me we certainly made short work of that cake. I had just came in from playing football when one of the lads said, Buck, here is a parcel for you, so I didnt lose any time opening it. The cigarettes were fine, also the soap, which one feloiw tried to eat, thinking it was candy. We took the cake into a French woman's place, cut it for six of us and started looking for the money. I got one ten cent piece, a fellow from Toronto got two, and a lad from Peterborough by the name of Ford got the other one. You were asking about Albert White. I have not heard from him for a long time, but I hear he is on his way back. I saw young Garn. Powell awhile back and got a letter from him yesterday. He is all right and looking fine. I got a parcel of papers yesterday and was reading about that young fell w getting held up in England. I used to go school with him. I have not got the other parcel yet, but will either drop a card or a letter when it comes. Well, mother, I will have to quit. Remember me to everybody.

RHEIMS IS A COMPLETE WRECK

HISTORIC CITY IS NOW A WILDERNESS OF SCORCHED AND BLACKENED STONES.

(Special to Examiner.)

Paris, April 19. — Rheims is completely in ruins as a result of the German bombardment. During the last week 100,000 enemy shells, including incendiary projectiles, have fallen within the city. On one day alone 30,000 shells were thrown.

The city is now a wilderness of scorched and blackened stones, with a few ghastly remains of houses rising from the flames. Streets have vanished under the shattered walls.

The Palace Royals Theatre and the law courts, like the ancient hotels, historic salons, and the Mason de Musicens, are a mass of embers.

The arched roofs of the famous Cathedral are splitting and crumbling. Soon only the pillars will remain.

Lieut. Walter Worth The Guest Of Bonner Worth Employees At Farewell Banquet In Empress

Cordial Relations Existing Between the Heads of the Company and the Employees Reflected in the Speeches—Lieut. Worth Returning Overseas.

Lieutenant Walter Worth was the guest of the men employed by the Bonner-Worth Company at a dinner given in his honour at the Empress Hotel. Lieut. Worth was injured at Vimy Ridge a little more than a year ago, and is returning overseas shortly to resume his duties. While last night's banquet was essentially an expression of congratulation and God-speed to the young subaltern, there was an insistent note of harmony, based on mutual understanding and goodwill, in the relations of the employees and the heads of the Bonner-Worth Company that largely explains the splendid spirit that prevails in this factory. There was a fine exchange of felicitations and courtesies, and a personal appreciation of the individual members of the firm which centered particularly in Lieut. Worth by reason of his approaching departure to rejoin the forces "over there."

Among the guests of the men were Messrs. Dyson Worth, Ald. Edgar Worth, Mr. J. W. Worth, Mr. W. R. Morris and Mr. W. H. Dunsford.

Mr. R. J. Begley made a capable chairman, presiding over the following toast list:

"The King."

"The City of Peterborough," proposed by Mr. Allan Pilling, and responded to by Ald. Worth, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Dunsford.

"Our Guest," proposed by Mr. G. Melton, with Lieut. Worth responding.

"The Firm," proposed by Mr. Jas. Emmett, responded to by Mr. J. W. Worth.

"Our Absent Brothers Overseas," proposed by Mr. Bigger, Mr. Wm. Tinker replying.

A bright musical programme included vocal solos by Mr. Ed. Hanrahan, Mr. Ed. Bartley, bagpipe selections by Mr. Robert Yeaman, sword dance and Highland fling in costume by Mr. Gordon Yeaman, and concerting selections by Mr. Harry Edmondson.

The feature of the evening was Lieut. Worth's recital of the preparations for the attack on Vimy Ridge, the twenty-four hour postponement on April 8th, and finally the going over the top on April 9th at a signal of a single cannon shot, which was the first batch stroke for the terrific barrage that tore lanes through the German wire and killed or dazed most of the enemy in his front trenches.

LIEUT. WALTER WORTH.
He was the guest of the men employed by the Bonner-Worth Company at a farewell dinner last night.

In proposing the toast of "The Firm," Mr. Emmett stated that the Bonner Worth was a model mill. He had visited and worked in many similar plants in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, but did not find them as complete and modern as that of the Bonner-Worth Co. The co-operation between the men and the staff was notable as was the quiet efficiency with which the work was carried on.

"The week before last," Mr. Emmett said, "when we were going out at noon we saw a notice that the factory would go on the nine-hour day. This was all the more welcome because it had not been sought by the employees."

Loyalty Appreciated.

"No factory in Peterborough," Mr. J. W. Worth said, in reply, "can congratulate itself upon having employees more loyal and more interested in the business than the Bonner-Worth Company. For this co-operation we are heartily grateful. We have raised the wages forty per cent. since the outbreak of the war, and it was from a desire to recognize the spirit of our employees that we decided on the nine-hour day.

"The company has fulfilled every promise made to the city, and it is safe to say that the people of Peterborough never expected the Bonner-Worth Company to become one of its leading industries. We are employing 256 hands, and our weekly payroll is $2,500."

Mr. Tinker, in proposing the toast to the absent brothers overseas, stated that twelve of the Bonner-Worth employees had enlisted and gone to the front.

A CHANCE TO HELP.

The people of Peterborough are to be given an opportunity to-morrow of showing their appreciation of what this city's soldiers have done by contributing to a fund that is not intended for the returned men themselves but to assist them in seeing that all cases of need in the families of local soldiers are taken care of—i.e., the relief fund of the Great War Veterans' Association.

The annual Tag Day to-morrow, commemorating the third anniversary of the second battle of Ypres should be made interesting by a record-breaking response from the public.

The cause is a worthy, unselfish one—them on who are asking for the support of tried fellow citizens, are men who have shown themselves worthy of that support by meeting the "fiery trial and sacrifice" of the battle line in France; men who have stood in the mud in the Flanders trenches, have encountered the clouds of German poison gas and faced a hail of shells and bullets.

These things should be remembered to-morrow.

The wearing of a tag will be a symbol that you realize what these men have gone through, and that you honor them for their self-sacrifice and courage.

See that you are with such a symbol to-morrow.

Remember April, 1915, and give accordingly.

GENERAL HUGHES' QUESTION.

That the contact between the Canadian forces in France and the Canadian military authorities at home is not as close in some particulars as it might be, was illustrated in the House yesterday by the fact that Sir Sam. Hughes should have to ask and that General Mewburn was unable to answer the question as to who was commanding the army of which the Canadians in France form a part. The Minister of Militia's reply was that he could not say off-hand.

The average newspaper reader would undoubtedly be able to supply the information that the Canadian Corps under the command of General Sir Arthur Currie, is part of th First British army of which General Horne is the Commander-in-Chief — unless there has been a very recent change.

AN AMERICAN TRIBUTE.

The United States newspapers are paying unstinted tribute to the valour of the British troops these days, as the realization of the magnificent fight Field Marshal Haig's men have been making in the face of the terrific assaults of Hindenburg's war machine, is making itself felt. The Philadelphia Public Ledger drives home the truth that Britons have always fought the hardest when the handicap against them is the greatest, and remarking that the unconquerable British never know when they are beaten, adds:

"The Haig message has not only stiffened the wearied ranks of his hard-beset army, but it has sounded like a trumpet-call across the allied world to hearten the watching millions who know so well what they each personally have at stake in this terrific struggle. The British armies stand as the buckler of democratic liberty. We all know only too surely in what a tragic position the defenders of democracy would be if the Anglo-French armies found themselves unable to dam back this renewed Teuton tide. To say—as our writers so often repeat—that as much is at stake to-day as hung in the balances at the battle of the Marne, is surely to underestimate the unparalleled importance of this struggle. But the very fact that British generals like Haig and Maurice are employing grave language, and appealing to their men 'to die where they stand rather than give way'—the Joffre version of this universal message of inspiring leadership—encourages us all with the sure knowledge that the two finest fighting races in the world—the Anglo-Saxon and the French—have risen to the sublime pitch of Verdun and will not let them 'pass.' We record our confidences that two such armies—two such nations—cannot be beaten. It will not be unfitting, however, for our people to stand with metaphorically bared heads while this tragic, this devasting conflict rages. It is our lives which are being defended. Our liberties are at stake. Our democracy will be in deadly danger if the lines of khaki and disappearing 'blue' are broken. They are but holding till we come up. They are admittedly waiting for our soldiers to deliver the winning blow. But as they hold—as many, sorrowfully many of them fall—we can bow gravely with the sincere and heartfelt grief we so keenly feel, and then look up with the pride, the confidence, the comradeship, their splendid courage calls up in all our hearts."

A CORNER OF BLIGHTY.

For some time after the Canadian forces first reached France, leave to Paris was not permitted, but subsequently this regulation was abolished, and thousands of Canadians have had an opportunity of spending a short holiday in the French capital. One of the places they are almost sure to visit, is the institution known as "A Corner of Blighty," founded by Miss Lily Butler, and designated, as its name suggests, to supply a touch of home life for soldiers on leave in Paris. The institution includes a library, providing newspapers and periodicals, music, writing and tea rooms—all at the disposal of the soldiers, with no charge attached. Excursions around Paris, and to special places of historic interest, are arranged daily, while cars are provided by the military authorities. As many as 300 teas have been served in one day, and the comforts of the institution are thoroughly appreciated by the British soldiers, whether Imperial, Australian or Canadian.

All the work, including entertaining and sight-seeing trips, is done by forty-five English, Irish, Scottish, Canadian and Australian ladies, who are voluntary workers.

Naturally the expense of carrying on this work—over 39,000 soldiers have been entertained in nine months—is heavy, and the committee in charge would appreciate donations to assist them in their most useful mission.

"Our object," writes Sir John Pitler, honorary president of the British Chamber of Commerce in Paris, and one of the patrons of "A Corner in Blighty," is to make our soldiers as happy as possible during the few days they are allowed on leave from the front. We try to give them a good, interesting time, and to keep them away from those temptations of which a large city like Paris is so full. If they are sick or in difficulties we help them as much as possible. No charge of any description is made to the soldiers."

The good work being done by Miss Butler and her co-workers, is endorsed by Hon. Philippe Roy, General Commissioner for Canada in Paris, and by General Sir Arthur Currie, Canadian Commander-in-chief in France. General Currie's letter to Miss Butler, shows how the institution is regarded by the Canadian authorities. He writes as follows:

Canadian Corps Headquarters,
20th Feb., 1918.

Dear Miss Butler:

I believe the time has arrived when you find that it is necessary to make an appeal for funds in order that you may keep "A Corner of Blighty" going. I hope that any appeal you may make will meet with the success it deserves.

When I visited your rooms in Paris I was much struck with their home-like appearance and when I learned that teas and cigarettes were served gratuitously and that the Library, the Music Room, and the Writing Room were at the disposal of our soldiers free of charge, I could not help but realize the great importance of the work you and your co-workers were doing.

Leave in Paris is very popular with the Canadians, and your institution must be a boon to the men. It deserves every support and encouragement and I sincerely trust the response to your appeal will be most generous.

I am, dear Miss Butler,
Ever yours faithfully,
A. W. CURRIE.
Lieutenant-General Commanding
Canadian Corps

Peterboro citizens who would like to assist in this splendid effort on behalf of our soldiers, may send contributions to any branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for transmission to Miss Butler's account, "Corner of Blighty;" Messrs. Cox and Co., (France) Limited, Army Bankers, 13 Charing Cross, London, and 22 Rue Louis-Le-Grand, Paris, also gifts of cigarettes, matches, tea, sugar, biscuits and comforts for the soldiers may be addressed to Miss Butler, "Corner of Blighty," A.P.O., S.5, B.E.F., France, gifts addressed in this way paying no duty.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Remember what the Veterans have done for you. Pay a little back by buying a tag to-morrow.

The commemoration of the battle of Ypres by a tag day to secure funds for the relief of others is an effort worthy of the spirit which led the Veterans to offer themselves for the defence of democracy.

Don't say there are too many tag days. They are all for good causes, and give you an opportunity to help.

The statement of Captain Powers, of Quebec, in the House of Commons that there was a good deal of criticism about officers of district headquarters who had never been overseas, but rolled around in motor cars, wore showy uniforms, and occupied positions that might be taken by returned men, brings before the consideration of Parliament a matter that has been frequently discussed by returned soldiers, and it is to be hoped that General Mewburn will give it the attention it deserves.

The suggestion of the Food Controller that municipalities should open eatinghouses, is not likely to be acted upon in Peterboro. If the eating houses were as bare of food as the municipal coal yards were of fuel last winter, they would not serve many people.

BIG ROUND-UP IN KITCHENER HAS BEEN POSTPONED

Dominion Police Will Wait For More Opportune Time The Stage Was All Set.

(Special to Examiner.)

Kitchener, April 10 — As quietly as they entered the city the Dominion police officers withdrew today. Everything was in readiness for a complete sweep-up of the city and district for all defaulters under the Military Service Act, and constables from London and Windsor were expected, but after viewing the situation yesterday Inspector Taylor from Toronto decided that the moment for the clean-up had not arrived as any action taken now would have to be repeated after the signing of the order-in-council withdrawing all exemptions to men between the ages of 20 and 23, and ordering registration of the boys of 19.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

EVERYBODY WONDERING.

Calgary Herald: A French paper published in Quebec City condemns Henri Bourassa, and wonders why he has not been more severely dealt with by the Ottawa authorities. That is what people all over the Dominion have been wondering for months past.

"ALL OUR ENEMIES."

(Providence Journal)

"Berlin issues orders to Vienna exactly as it does to Sofia and Constantinople. Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey are but mere provinces of Germany's expanded empire. They are all our enemies and we must oppose them all with our utmost strength and will."

THE DIFFERENCE.

(Toronto Globe)

The Boston Transcript asks why the French-Canadians in Quebec show no zeal for enlistment, while their compatriots in the United States are enlisting freely. The answer is not difficult. The French-Canadians across the line are outside the sphere of Nationalist influence and the United States does not allow treasonable newspapers like Le Devoir a free hand.

HELPFUL CRITICISM.

(Toronto Mail and Empire)

The order-in-council "tightening up" the censorship regulations is worded as if it was meant to be a noose to hang every newspaper editor in the Dominion. Legitimate, helpful criticism of war measures, in the public interest, is part of our system and could be stifled only with loss to the public good. However, in application the order is likely to be applied only to disloyalists, which as surely it ought to be.

THE BRITISH WAY.

(New York Herald)

Ten German trawlers have been sunk by gunfire in the Cattegat. Their crews were saved by British ships.—Cabled news despatch.

Despite the provocation to reprisal for "the spurlos versent" methods of the Germans—their coldblooded slaughter of crews of sinking ships, their ruthless abandonment of men and women to death by drowning, their unspeakable atrocities on sea as on land — the British navy continues its merciful work of rescue where opportunity presents.

Thereby, it will be observed, measuring fully up to its best traditions.

THE FUTURE OF THE G. W. V. A

(Ottawa Journal Press)

All who, from the standpoint of the public interest, desire to see the Great War Veterans' Association become a great influence for good in the coutry will hope that the loss to the organization through the resignation of its able Dominion secretary, Mr. N. F. R. Knight, will be more than recompensed by the sound advice and warning he gives it on the occasion of his retirement. The development of the association is replete with potent possibilities, but it is also exposed to dangerous pitfalls. On the steering of its course depends its existence and its community and national influence.

A STORY IN FOUR WORDS.

LONDON, April 18—A Chinese seaman saved from a torpedoed vessel, when asked to describe the sinking, replied to the American vice-consul at Genoa in four words: "Pouff! Bang! Water! Hospital!"

The Motor Show

The wind up of the motor show in the armouries saw the biggest crowd that had yet attended, and financially as well as otherwise, everyone was happy.

The music of the Conservatory of Music Orchestra was particularly well received last night and Mr. Gliddon had gone to no end of trouble in preparing one of the best programmes ever presented. Added to this were solos by Miss Florence Scott, Miss Helen MacLaren, Mr. Ed. Hanrahan and Mr. Douglas Carlisle.

THE DANCE

The cabaret dance, over which Mrs. Fred Roy, and Mrs. Chris Graham, supervised, was the big event in the evening, and Mr. Moher's music was all that could be desired. Very reluctantly at midnight the crowds vacated the recreation rooms and midway, when one of the most successful events ever held for Red Cross purposes, closed.

The following prize-winners are announced by the committee:

THE EXHIBITS

Did you see the display of Fords at the Motor Show? Well, it would have been hard for a blind man to miss it. Ford cars and models were represented, not in "units," but in "battalia" array. The exhibit would have made a good motor show of itself, judging by the throng of visitors who took a deep interest in it. Everytime one looked at a new 1918 Ford model, you saw the efforts of those who in their minds sought to create models that would interest present-day purchasers, in every country and in every clime.

It was interesting to go from one model to another to see the Ford Company's contributions to the total sum of mechanical and artistic knowledge, which have increased the Ford in popular favour with each succeeding year. General interest in the Ford car will be even greater in the future than it has been in the past—it will be universal. This is because the growing generation of the day appreciates the value of quick transportation, its value in the world to-day. At automobile exhibitions boys and girls are almost as keen in their inspections as the grown up spectators. And when it comes to knowledge they will have much keener conception of the mechanical and artistic value ready to guide them when they arrive at the age of purchase.

Winter driving has no terrors for the Ford. The photograph shown on this page is ample and convincing evidence that automobile dealers have proven the falsity of the old order of things in their field. No longer do they entertain the opinion that their business must be shut down during the winter months. Mr. Jos. J. Duffus, the local dealer for the Ford, is here shown on a recent drive home from Chemong. When the winter roads are at their worst, Mr. Duffus, as well as many others of his patrons, have good reason to know that the Ford is a car full of "pep," with an all-year round efficiency, and as forceful as an English tank in winter's zippy days.

THE MAXWELL CAR.

The $38,000,000 Maxwell Motor Company is one of the giants of the automobile industry. Last year its output of the famous one Chassis Model Maxwell placed the company fourth in the motor car field in the matter of production volume. In addition to the building of that horde of passenger cars, thousands of the Maxwell one-ton trucks were turned out by the same chain of factories.

The immensity of Maxwell production benefits the Maxwell car owner in two ways. First: It assures him of real service all over the American continent and in most parts of the world. Second: It enables the Maxwell company, by volume buying, to put the very best grade of steel and other materials into the Maxwell car and truck and yet hold the price down to figures astonishingly low.

But the real interest in those visitors at the motor show who were planning to buy a new Maxwell car was concentrated on the improvements and refinements of the model of to-day. The company is holding fast to the one chassis model, and while there have been no fundamental mechanical changes yet the Maxwell of to-day is a better Maxwell than ever.

Mr. Percy Hawn, the local salesman for the Gillespie Garage, was kept busy demonstrating the salient features of his car and producing proof of executive and productive efficiency.

Maxwell Trucks have been coming to the front very conspicuously of late. The type of body has proved to be satisfactory in an almost infinite variety of uses. It is a worm-driven truck, not a converted touring car.

As a rule, it would be safe to assume that when a motor truck falls over a bridge, forty feet high, into ten feet of water, that truck would be out of commission for some time.

That there are exceptions to that rule, however is proven by the recent performance of a Maxwell truck owned by E. W. Greer of Pittsburg, Oklahoma. This Maxwell, operated on a freight line between McAlester and Pittsburg, took just such a high dive with really remarkable results. Carrying, as a load, a heavy refrigerator, the truck reached the high bridge only to meet a touring car coming in the opposite direction. The driver of the truck became confused, turned the truck squarely around and proceeded to drive off the bridge. There was some splash and the truck sank out of sight except for the top of the radiator cap which showed above the surface. There was no help in sight, the country being but sparsely settled and a full day elapsed before it was possible to haul the Maxwell out of the water and see the extent of the damage. A few minutes' work and adjustment and the truck was driven 12 miles into McAlester under its own power. As the hood had been wrecked a one-gallon test tank was used to hold gasoline for the run into the city. And the high-diving truck made the 12 miles on the one gallon very easily, despite the fact that it had lain on the bed of a river for a full 24 hours.

FRENCH CAPTURE MORE PRISONERS

Several Machine Gun Nests Were Reduced by French Fire.

(Canadian Press.)

Paris, April 19.—(Official.)—There was a rather violent bombardment by both of the opposing armies along the front from Castel to Mailly Raineval. During the night the French reduced certain machine gun nests on the front of the attack yesterday, and the number of prisoners taken by us has reached 650, of whom 20 are officers. North of Bezon-Vaux, on the Verdun front, we carried out a successful raid, and brought back prisoners. Elsewhere on the front there was intermittent cannonading.

Works. Exemption granted until April 1st. Asked further time on being sole support of widowed mother. Exemption disallowed.

With Jewish Battalion.

Harry Florence, a furniture dealer at 267 George Street, whose exemption expires May 1st, appeared and reported that he had signed up with the Jewish Battalion in Toronto, and produced an arm band designating he had joined. The battalion has not yet been recognized by the Government. Florence's case is held over until Judge Huycke and Mr. Hatton hear from the battalion concerning its reliability.

Arthur G. Williamson, a B2 man, who works on munitions during the day and works the land at night, appeared. He was dismissed until B are called, and told he must show strong grounds before he can gain exemption.

John G. Overend, Havelock, whose exemption on personal grounds expires May 1st, wanted to be placed in Class 2. Case will be considered.

Robert Clancy, 487 Roger Street, whose exemption expired April 1st, was exemption on grounds of mother's and sister's illness. Satisfied with former exemption. Will receive notice later.

Walter Hetherington. Exemption expired April 1st, which was given on personal and business grounds. Hetherington wants extension on account of mother's' ill health, and necessary to munitions at Wilson's. Case will be considered, but the Judge gave him little hope.

James F. O'Connor, R.R 6., Peterborough, employed with his father, a farmer, was allowed exemption as long as he remained a farmer. It is thought there is too much manpower on O'Connor's farm. Judge Huycke and Mr. Hatton intimated that there was no use in considering the case on account of the extension of the Military Service Act.

Verbal and written appeals were received from—

H. McClennan, an employee of Kingan's hardware store; lives at 326 Charlotte Street.
A. Helson, 438 George Street.
H. Florence, 267 Simcoe Street.

Summary Of To-day's War Situation

With the British Armies in France, —(By the Associated Press)—Exhausted by the failure of yesterday's heavy attacks, the Givenchy-La Passee Canal front, the Germans made no further move during the night and on the greater part of Flanders battle front quiet prevailed this morning.

The British re-established their line west of Robecq, on the southwesterly part of the Lys battle field, by re-capturing ground at Rieux Du Vinage Farm. Kemmel Hill, on the northerly side of the battle area was still being heavily bombarded this morning in preparation for fresh assaults by the Germans.

This Week's Review Of The Grocery Market

Apples and Potates Have Eased Off —The Sugar Situation

What the future may be in respect to canned vegetables is hard to determine as yet, says the Canadian Grocer this week. Indications are that in as far as human agency can determine the pack will be a large one. This will undoubtedly result in lower prices being made for the coming season, and it is felt that only in this way will consumption keep pace with the increase in the output.

RAISINS SEIZED.

The action of the United States government in seizing 1,200 tins of raisins for their own use will result in orders for Canada for July and August shipments being consigned on a pro rata basis. A shipment of dates has reached the city, and new prices are at considerably higher levels. A 1,400 ton shipment of currants now due in New York has sent the market down there 2c per pound. It is of interest to note that on and after May 1 dried fruit packers will not be allowed to face dried fruit in packages containing over 10 pounds net.

GRAIN SUPPLIES.

What the milling future of corn and oats is to be contains no little element of uncertainty. It is stated in some quarters that shipmens of corn, which have been coming through in very good quantities from the United States are again to be embargoed. It has been intimated also that supplies of the better grades of oats are none too heavy, though shipments to date have been fairly satisfactory. A more definite announcement may be expected shortly for in some quarters little credence is placed in either of the above rumours.

PEPPERS UP.

An advance of 3c per pound in the prices of peppers at primary points, has been recorded during the week, and they are reported very scarce. The local market has not been yet affected, though celery seed and whole cloves show an upward trend. Supplies in practically all lines of spices are limited and the prospects of securing further supplies are not encouraging.

APPLES DECLINE.

Nova Scotia apples have declined $1 per barrel; offerings of oranges are practically confined to Valencias and seedlings, Floridas and California navels being virtually off the market. Tomatoes have registered a decline and are on a much easier basis. Potatoes have also eased off again this week and onions followed suit.

SUGAR SITUATION.

The sugar situation shows practically no change. The demand still exceeds the supply, but with increased shipping available in the service between Cuba and Atlantic ports, hopes are held out that in another month or six weeks a supply more nearly normal will be available. Business shows some improvement and the result of April will it is thought prove satisfactory.

HELD ON CHARGE OF BEING IDLERS

Pool-Room Devotees Placed Under Arrest by Police.

TORONTO, April 19.—Plainclothesmen Ward and Scott last night made the first arrests in the city on a charge of individuals not being engaged in an essential industry. Following a round of the pool rooms the officers collected three youths, whom they alelged did nothing but play pool for a livelihood, while the fourth was taken into custody in a downtown hotel.

White Strips On Pavement As Safety Zone For The Public

A white strip will be painted on the pavements at the busiest corners of the city beyond which motor cars must not pass while street cars are discharging passengers. This will be an improvement on the present protection to street car patrons and will define the safety zone, trespass on which while a street car is standing there will be a breach of the traffic bylaw by any offending automobile.

BRITAIN MAY BAN ALL CEREAL LOAVES

LONDON, April 18.—The excessive consumption of breadstuffs is causing the Ministry of Food to consider drastic steps to deal with the sale of bread and breadstuffs. It is stated that rationing of bread will come into effect early next month. Farmers and potato dealers have been ordered to return full details of all potato stocks to the Food Department by the end of the month.

Sir Charles Bathurst speaking at a meeting of agriculturists, put the situation in regard to bread prospects for the next year in the forefront of his remarks. He said if England is to be fed sufficiently the next 12 months we must concentrate our attention to the potato more. I will be surprised, with my knowledge of the food position, if I do not find in 12 months that bread will be composed largely of potatoes, either in the form of flour or meal, or if we do not have to forego cereal loaves altogether and substitute potatoes for them.

WOUNDED FLOW OVER GERMANY

Trains From the Front Constantly Pour Into Distributing Point.

MASSTRICHT, Holland, April 18. —Reports brought here Tuesday by Belgians from Germany say all the hospitals in the district of Aachen had been evacuated by March 20 to make room for the wounded from the great offensive which commenced the next day. Since the first day of the drive trains have arrived continually, coming through Belgium on a new direct line built by the Germans from Brussels to Aachen, where the wounded are all inspected and then sent to various parts of Germany, as far south as Munich.

Belgian and Dutch merchants who have arrived here in the last week confirm the reports that Germany is staking all on the present offensive, which is regarded as the last coup. Since early in 1916 the German people have been underfed, although they get more to eat now than two years ago. The effect of the war undernutrition has seriously undermined the constitutions of the population throughout the Empire. Soldiers on the front line are well fed, because they must keep up their strength, but those in the rear are suffering, and masses of people in the cities are weak from lack of sufficient food. They get 300 grammes of bread (weekly) and chemical substitutes for other foods, but they are not satisfying.

Canadian Man-power Bill Passed By The Senate And Becomes Effective At Once

All Unmarried Men and Widowers Without Children Between 20 and 22 Will Be Called to the Colours Without Exemption in May—Premier Borden Points Out the Gravity of Situation on West Front.

MEN OF 19 AND 23 WILL BE NEXT

OTTAWA, April 20.— The House of Commons, by a majority of 49, passed the government's man power, calling up all unmarried men and widowers without children between 20 and 22 to the colours, without exemption, in May. The Senate also passed it, and the measure is now law. Men of 19 and 23 will be the next class to be called.

OTTAWA, April 20.—Once again the Visitors' Gallery in the House of Commons was nearly filled in prospect of the debate on the new military service regulations yesterday afternoon.

It is fully expected that the first division of the session will be held on this order-in-Council calling out all unmarried men from 20 to 23.

Sir Robert Borden said that he was making the motion under circumstances of peculiar gravity. "Up to the present point the main attack has been made on the British army, and obviously their object is to destroy that army," he said.

"I want to impress on the House the effort which Germany is making. In Germany every man is liable to military service. In the spring of 1917 Germany raised her fighting strength by 2,100,000, and has enslaved tens of thousands who are forced to work in Germany.

AN AID TO GERMANY.

"The defection of Russia has had an important influence on the western front. It is said that in the spring and summer of 1918 Germany will be able to move a force of not less than 1,600,000 to the western front."

The Prime Minister continued by telling how France had put into the fighting line one-sixth of her total population. In Canada, he stated, that would mean a force of nearly a million and a half men. "There the men have learned that they owe their country service in war," he quoted from an American writer.

What our own Empire has done was read from the statement of a British statesman. Besides our total forces in the field, our casualties had to be reckoned, bringing the total of men actually raised for war by the Empire, up to 7,500,000. Of these, 4,530,000 had been raised by England, 620,000 by Scotland, 280,000 by Wales and 170,000 by Ireland, 900,000 by the Dominions and Crown colonies, and the remaining million were composed of Indian troops and railway troops.

CANADA'S PART.

Sir Robert said that he thought that 900,000 hardly covered the number of men raised by the Dominions, but that it was nearer a million. Canada, he was afraid, had not done as well as Australia or New Zealand.

Giving the figures for Canada, Sir Robert said that up to March 31st, 1918, we had actually sent overseas a total of 364,750 of all ranks. These were made up as follows:

Military District No. 1—35,533.
Military District No. 2—76,597.
Military District No. 3—39,393.
Military District No. 4—32,463.
Military District No. 5—8,389.
Military Districts 6 and 7—37,205.
Military Districts 10 and 12—75,503.
Military District No. 11—36,475.
Military District No. 13—33,192.

Of these, 147,505 were born in Canada of British parents; 16,268 born in Canada of French parents; born in England, 121,571; in Scotland, 37,496; in Wales, 3,574; other British possessions, 3,648; the United States 12,000, and other countries.

Died of wounds—8,671.
Died of disease—1,956.
Wounded—106,185.

Strong markets and higher prices have been the dominant features of the cattle trade this week. In several instances records have gone to smash in particular for choice cattle and choice yearling lambs. With the exception of the opening market on Monday the receipts have been uniformly light. The week's cattle offerings have included some loads of extra choice quality finished steers and heifers suitable for the local butcher trade, and in very active demand for that purpose. Prices in this class have averaged strong and about 25 cents higher than the previous week, the best loads selling firm around $12, ranging about 25 cents above and below that figure. The demand for good medium quality handy-weight butcher stuff has also been steadily active. The feature of the cattle trade, however, has been the strong market for heavy steers of choice quality. Several loads in this class touched the highest record prices ever paid for this class of cattle at this season of the year, full loads selling from $13.50 to $14.50, and on Thursday's market a picked lot of four extra heavy choice steers, weighing an average of 1 620 pounds, passed all previous records at this season by selling at $15. This bunch of steers were highly praised around the market, and considered highly creditable to the raiser and feeder, Mr. Dunn Barr, of Medonte Township. The cattle were sold by Dunn & Levack. Two more steers of the same class were sold by the firm of Sparkhall & Armstrong at the same price, $15. This firm also sold one fancy steer, weighing 1,100 pounds, making another new high record at $15.75.

The burning, early in the week, of the Harris Abattoir plant threatened at one time to check the top speed at which the market was traveling, but the prompt resumption of buying by this firm restored the former activity of the demand, and was in fact the signal for still higher prices.

The sheep and lamb trade this season has been on the smallest scale ever known in this market. This fact however, did not prevent the establishing of a new high record price for lambs, Dunn & Levack selling a bunch of seven lambs, weighing 97 pounds each, at $21.75.

The market for feeders, stockers, and grass cows is correspondingly high with the prevailing high prices for all grades of cattle.

The heavy runs of calves of late have tended to lower prices, except for anything very choice.

Hog receipts continue light, but the general tone of the market has been weaker, and prices have been held down a little lower than last week.

How to Apply Gum.

By means of a printed notice attached to each bottle of gum, H. M. stationery office thus instructs the government officials in the use of that substance: "In ordinary use, the best and most nearly immediate result is obtained by using only such an amount of gum as will just uniformly moisten the surface without leaving any obvious excess to delay drying, the condition to be aimed at being that of a gummed postage stamp just moistened as ordinarily applied to a letter." Which is just another way of saying, "Apply lightly."

URGENT PLEA FOR WAR TIME HARMONY

In Quebec Letter Mgr. N. McNeil Advises Unity—Comments on Regulation 17, and Denies That Ontario Clergy Are Responsible

MONTREAL, April 20.—In a three-column statement in the La Presse, Mgr. McNeil Roman Catholic archbishop of Toronto, issues a plea to Quebec papers to promote unity between the people of Ontario and Quebec.

"I do not propose to enter into the general question of the antagonism between the two provinces," he says. "So far as the English-speaking Catholics are concerned, I can give the impressions received during a residence of five years."

He has heard many friendly references to French-Canadians by speakers in Catholic public meetings in Central Ontario, and always with applause.

The Archbishop arraigns Ontario for the hardship caused by rule 17, and he gives a letter from the late Sir James Whitney.

Bishops Here Not Hostile.

The Archbishop has seen French Canadian newspaper statements that Ontario bishops are hostile to Quebec, and largely responsible for Regulation 17, but thinks that they are without foundation.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

GEORGE RETURNS

CHAPTER XLVI.

I was in bed when George came home. It was the day before my dinner party, and Mrs. Sexton had suggested that I retire early so that I might look fresh the next night. I had not expected my husband until morning, so had agreed to do as she suggested.

I wakened with a start.

"Who is it?" I called.

"Only me!", and after switching on the lights George came over to the bed and kissed me.

I flung my arms around his neck. I was very glad to see him; and that he had returned ever so little before I expected him, was added happiness.

"There, you are hurting my neck," he said and unloosed my arms. "I shall be sorry I came, and so wakened you, if you get so excited.

I was excited no longer. His speech had been, as mother used to say, "like a bucket of cold water." I crept back between the sheets, with a muttered apology. But I couldn't keep quiet for long, and, while he was undressing, I asked:

"Did you have a good trip?"

"Fairly."

"I was so afraid you wouldn't get back in time for my dinner."

"I never break an engagement, unless it is unavoidable. I told you I should remain with you the night of your dinner. I intend to do so, no matter how much it bores me."

ANOTHER REBUFF.

I felt as if a second bucket of cold water had been thrown over me. And the ever ready tears rushed to my eyes. Surreptitiously, I wiped them away with a corner of the sheet. I dared not get up to get a handkerchief for fear George would notice the tears and scold.

"I'm tired. It was an uncomfortable trip. There was a slight accident that held us a couple of hours. I think I will sleep in the other room" and before he scarcely had finished speaking, he was gone and the door between closed tightly.

For some time I lay trying, once more, to adjust myself. I seemed to be making no slightest progress in winning his affection. It was terribly discouraging. He might have dared enough to want to kiss me a second time—when he had been away so long.

Then came the thought: he said there had been an accident. How lightly he had spoken of it. Perhaps he had been in danger. I turned first hot, then cold, at the awful thought. But, after a while, my mind reverted to my dinner party. I was wide awake and I remembered every word that George had said. He was so particular about breaking an engagement, that it had seemed as if it were that which made him stay home to my dinner, more than because he either cared about staying, or because he wanted to please me. "But he's going to be there," was my last thought as, once more, I fell asleep.

In the morning he slept late, and grumbled audibly when I at last awakened him.

"If I had cared to be awakened, I should have said so," was his reply, when I timidly reminded him of the time.

"But you always want to be called" I replied, as he went into the bath room and closed the door.

A BUSY DAY.

I had been down stairs, before I called him, and had found Mary already busy preparing my dinner.

"It sure will be a foine meal, so don't you worry your little head no more," she said to me, as I went into the kitchen. And even George's grouchiness couldn't quite dampen the pleasurable excitement I felt.

But with one of his unexpected changes, that I never would learn to understand, he came down to the breakfast table in perfect good-humor. We were alone, Mrs. Sexton having left the night before—giving as her excuse the illness of some relative; but really going because of her promise, to me, to leave before George returned, so that he would not give her the credit of the dinner, should it prove the success I was sure it was going to be.

I told him of the costume idea, and he approved. I also told him that I had bought his wig, and that everything was ready.

"I can hire the knickers and coat I'll have some buckles put on my pumps. That is all, I believe," he had smiled as he said it, and I wanted to leave my place beside the coffee urn and tell him that I loved him. But I only asked a smile in return, and told him that would be quite all, but that he must be sure and have as nice a costume as he could get.

"You know you are handsomer than any of the other men who are coming and I want you to look the best of any of them."

"I hope I shall succeed in pleasing your ladyship," he said, rising from the table and kissing me good-bye. So, as often happened, he had made me happy, after all. It was a pity he did not, oftener.

Party Frocks For Spring

Belts, Sashes and Other Accessories

New York, April 19th.

"When one is young in springtime" the natural sequence of Lent is gaiety, parties and party frocks. This year they will be simple affairs, but the frocks must be dainty and appropriate, and, most important of all, becoming.

The American materials are very lovely, and American designs seem to suit our American girls perfectly; They are so youthful and slim, these fascinating little dresses. Dainty figured voiles, mulls, organdies and crepes make bewitchingly simple frocks for afternoon or summer evenings and the soft silks, taffetas and satins are suitable for the more formal occasions.

They are doing interesting things to the dress of organdie. Sometimes the organdie is plain, a soft shade of rose or blue; more often it is either checked or striped, in fact, doing the things that were never done before! One quaint little dress had a wide inset of dull blue above the deep hem of a rose organdie dress. Tiny ruffles of footing, turned up, instead of down, edged this inset, and the same effect was gained on the waist and the sleeves by means of collar and cuffs.

WAISTLINES AND THEREABOUT.

Everyone is concentrating a great deal of attention upon the belt or girdle. If the waistline is long (as it very often is) the girdle may be a mere chain of beads, or a heavy cord. Then, too, there is the wide, loose girdle of heavy brocaded ribbon, adding a touch of richness and color to an otherwise somber frock. A dark navy blue Georgette crepe made on very straight lines, pleated from the shoulder, had a wonderful sash of peacock brocade in all the shimmery glow of bronze and blue and green, with just the proper amount of intense blue. The sash was put twice around the waist and finished in a huge bow on the left side of the back; a bustle, and yet not a bustle!

8262

Leather belts, and belts of heavy gros-grain ribbon, perhaps six or seven inches wide, match the hat, and perhaps the parasol of the sports costume. Speaking of parasols, they are very unusual this year. The trimming is as a rule beneath, a flat arrangement of satin flowers, for instance, under the Georgette. One novel sunshade was absolutely square—a wide band of black satin bordering the white Georgette of the parasol. As you can see they are purely ornamental for the sun can easily find its way through the thin crepe or chiffon.

THE CHARM OF YOUTH.

There is something refreshingly young in the dainty little dress illustrated here. Made of flowered silk it is shirred around the waist and drop shoulder. The long sleeves and the upper part of the waist are of white Georgette crepe and a bunch of French rosebuds nestle at the waist.

THE PLACE OF EMBROIDERY.

For a time it looked as though we would not use any embroidery at all on our Spring and Summer dresses. "Trimming-less models" were the cry. But from Paris the latest news is of the wonderful embroidered voiles, linens, satins, silks—in fact, there seems to be embroidery on every thing. Beading, braiding and odd designs in applique make things of beauty out of the simplest frock. Sometimes there is a bold design on the panels of the skirt, near the hem, with it repeated on the waist. Oftentimes the sash has a touch of the Orient, in a colorful splash of embroidery. Sheer crepes and chiffons and even nets are being embroidered in white, black and colors. There seems to be no limit to the use of embroidery, a simple and effective, and so easy to do, if one is at all deft with one's fingers.

MORE ABOUT TUNICS.

The tunic is playing a most important part this Spring. Sometimes it is made of lace (for lace is coming into its own) as shown in the dress illustrated here. Sometimes bordered materials are used and sometimes the tunic is made of the same material as the dress itself. This one has the newest of collar effects and smart sleeves that are long and tight. The tunic may be omitted if desired, thus making a dress of simple design.

His Terms.

"Uh-huh!" a trifle grimly replied the landlord of the Petunia tavern to the horse-faced guest who had just stated in an uncompromising tone and at considerable length his desires as to apartment and services. "Well, Mr. Sawney, my rates are two dollars a day, American plan, cash in advance and catch-as-catch-can—you take what you get and like it or leave it, just as you please. And no drawing maps, solving ciphers or composing national anthems on the walls of your room with a lead pencil, either!"—Kansas City Star.

Less Than a Glass of Water.

Fog, mist and clouds are composed of tiny drops of water, hundreds and thousands and millions of them, so small that they will float in the air. If you should get up early some morning, especially if you live near the river, you might find the houses, trees and the people on the streets lost in a thick fog, yet a block of this fog, 12 feet long, 12 feet wide and 12 feet high would contain less than 1-7 of a glass of water, divided into 60,000,000,000 drops.

Phrenology.

An odd reminder of the days when phrenology was popular as a means of "reading character," with a sly dig at the tendency of its professors to give complimentary explanations of the "bumps," is found in a letter from Elizabeth Barrett Browning advertised for sale in a London book seller's catalogue. It reads in part: "Do you believe in phrenology? Did you ever consult a phrenological oracle? and did it answer, 'My son, thou art invincible'?"

Pay of Our Marine Chaps.

The pay of officers and crews of vessels in the American merchant marine is as follows: Captain, $250 a month; chief officer, $140; second officer, $130; third officer, $120; chief engineer, $190; first assistant engineer, $140; second assistant engineer, $130; third assistant engineer, $130; carpenters, $75; boatswain, $70; oiler, $60; coal passers, $50. In addition to the regular wages the officers and men now receive bonuses, which materially increase their earnings.

How Blue-jay Ends Corns

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive, which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

Your Corn Can't Resist Blue-jay

Blue-jay is the gentle way—but certain. Relief is instant, then the corn comes out in 48 hours.

The little spot of B&B medicated wax covers only the corn itself. It is the dainty, clean way.

Harsh liquids are mussy and dangerous. Paring might bring infection.

Millions of people have used Blue-jay for years. At the slightest appearance of a corn they put on a Blue-jay Plaster.

One plaster is usually sufficient; once in a while an old, stubborn corn requires a second.

Try the Blue-jay way tonight. It means freedom forever from aching corns.

German Schooling.

German schooling has proved antagonistic to co-operation, although demanding unity of action through mass obedience, Winthrop Talbot writes in the Century. It has failed to foster real co-operation, for co-operation is a method by which persons of their own volition and by no compulsion may work together harmoniously. Only when training and schooling are the common privilege of all is that state of civic development possible which permits society to become co-operative in its action. In other words, a socialized society becomes more possible only as all individual members acquire each the widest vision, and thus the power to co-operate harmoniously.

The Folklore of Roumania

THE tales and legends of Roumania are the simple wild flowers of peasant life gathered from village to village. Like ancestors of these humble folk are the wondrous characters in them, and you wonder mightily that such simple people as the Roumanian peasants should be consorting, in their fireside hours, with men and women so far exalted above themselves. Amid the legendary galaxy move, it is true, the poor and the outcast, but they always have their good deeds raise them to undreamed-of eminence, but most of the stories tell of handsome and gallant princes and chieftains, fondly called "Volvodes," and of beautiful princesses. Then there are the love songs, or "doine," and the heroic ballads, or "hora," which might have been collected by that Homeric type of singer, the Bard of Dimbovitza, in whose themes the proud, graceful, and statuesque Roumanian peasant stands out against the golden sky of his native land, a lover of imaginative creations, of symbols, sun, and song.

Step into the thatched, wooden cottage of the peasants. The women are round the old Dutch stove, holding a spinning-wheel party, and telling the tales of ancient Roumania; or an old familiar song is being sung, and each person is contributing her verse; or a satrical folktale, pointed at Jew, gypsy, or parish priest, is going the round. Perhaps there sits by the threshold a wandering minstrel improvising to the guitar some plaintive song with a touch of charm and beauty; or he tells of the heroic deeds of Baba Novak, the legends of the monastery or Argesh or sings the ballad of Torgovan. But it is in the fairy tale of the animal legend of the Aesopian order in which the imagination of the people has had most play. The mere names of the people in this mythical land are often beautiful. There are Costara and Aurora, Flora and Petra, Ileane and Mogarzia, Dapitza and Stana. The stories are sure to have a curious beginning, something like this: "Once upon a time something happened. If it had not happened it would not have been told. Then the delighted hearers are certain that all is quite true and listen breathlessly to the adventures of the beautiful Ileane, for, you must know, she was one of the three lovely daughters of the Emperor of no one knows where, which really doesn't concern anyone, but she was so fair that even the sun stopped to gaze at her. Or it may be the story of the fisherman who married a princess, and was so handsome that his future royal bride used to buy his fish at ten times the price which ordinary folk paid. Or it may be the tale of the old man and woman who had a hen and a rooster between them, but in which the selfish old lady would not share the eggs. But the wonderful folk of this ideal world to which the peasant's imagination is able to live above the sordidness of his material surroundings, are invariably generous, brave, and fair, whether they are kings, popular heroes, or brigands, while the creatures whose duty it is to bring woe and strife always wear a repugnant aspect. The animals, too, are only disguised human beings.

Captivating is the story of the young Voivode and the garden where whosoever entered looked fair. But you enter the real Roumanian fairyland when you take up "Youth without Age." The hero, astride his flying and talking horse, flies to the palace of the two beautiful maidens in the heart of an impenetrable forest. The princesses are quite get-at-able folk, and talk just as nicely and humanly as did ever Alice in Wonderland. The prince marries one of them, and of course there is unalloyed happiness and, alas, the usual proviso. The hero must never, never go into the Valley of Lamentation whatever he does, for then something dreadful would happen. And, of course, he does go, and something does happen. The prince returns to the world of ordinary folk, and finds that he has lived for hundreds of years in a world where time is unknown.

But there the stories are, just as fresh as in Virgilian days, that he who runs may read.—Christian Science Monitor.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN!!

THEY HAVE A DARK SECRET

Husband and Brother-in-Law Feast and Smash Piece of China, Which Is Mysteriously Replaced.

Since the coming of the X-ray and the perfecting of the Bertillon system dark secrets have lost vogue. Yet occasionally one of them does escape the keenest vigilance and flourishes with all the old-time mystery, according to the Kansas City Star.

Mrs. Miller has a set of chinaware, the real creamy ware that the light shines through. It is very old. Mrs. Miller inherited it. She also inherited the proud right to boast that not one piece had ever been broken.

Mrs. Miller went away. Mr. Miller entertained his brother-in-law while she was gone. There were other relatives that he might have entertained, but in an unguarded moment he chose his brother-in-law.

One night they made a feast. They baked a great number of things all in one pan. So when it came out of the oven it seemed to demand that it should all be served on one plate. Mr. Miller looked over the supply of dishes that had been left out for his use and there was really nothing that would contain it. A wild spirit of revelry seized Mr. Miller.

"We will do the thing up right," he shouted.

He went boldly into the china closet and brought out the very largest platter.

When the meal was ended, Mr. Miller's brother-in-law suggested dish washing. Mr. Miller did not favor the plan, but finally yielded to it against his better judgment. What happened was quite natural.

The platter slipped and fell and broke.

After all the years, after all the family pride and care!

From that night on those two men took up and carried about with them a dark secret, for this is what they did—each carrying a piece of that platter, they went from one china store to another until they found its duplicate. They carried it home and brought in a woman to wash it and replace it on the shelf of the china closet.

Now when Mrs. Miller entertains her friends and one of them says: "How I envy you these beautiful dishes, and it is so remarkable that not one has ever been broken," Mr. Miller and his brother-in-law sit with a far away look in their eyes and a dark secret in their souls.

Servselfs Also Afloat.

There isn't a chance of dodging them any more, either on land or on sea. The sailor boys on the U. S. S. New York form in line between decks and, tray in hand, select their food at the counter of the ship's serveself. A blackboard over the counter lists the bill and in all other respects except the presence of the grasping cashier the service is just like the midday lunch back home.

The new method, which is to be installed on all of the big battleships, replaces the old system of messmen and mess units, says Milestones. Then all of the food for the meal was piled on the plates at the tables by the messmen and the job of serving the entire unit was completed before the men were "piped down" to their cooling food.

Surely hot food, in the amount you want and of the kind you want, must be an improvement over the old mess, but juggling a tray loaded to the gunwales with beans and corned beef and bread and coffee, on the rolling waves must be something of a fine art.

Our Pensioners in England.

In his way, John Davis, who died at his Bermondsey home in Blue Anchor Lane—an appropriate address for an old sailor—did much useful work on behalf of Englishmen who, like himself, had fought in the American Civil war, relates a writer in the Westminster Gazette.

There are something like 150 of these men still living in this country and John Davis was instrumental in rescuing many of them from the workhouse and getting them pensions which the United States government was always willing to pay if it but known where to find the men.

On the last occasion I chatted with the old man in his little parlor, furnished like a ship's cabin, he told me of a rumor that the pensions were to be stopped unless the men returned to America, but he wrote later to say that this rumor was quite without foundation.

Dumb Dogs.

There are three kinds of dogs that have no voices and can not bark—the Egyptian shepherd dog, the Australian dog and the lion-headed dog of Tibet.

Taking a Joke.

Learning to take a joke is much like learning to take medicine: It can be done, but it is not pleasant.

To Renew Linoleum.

When linoleum becomes worn, polish it with prepared liquid wax. Dampen an old piece of woolen underwear with a tablespoonful of the wax and rub the linoleum with it as if you were scrubbing the floor. Polish with a dry woolen cloth until it shines. This renews the faded colors. After the first coat of wax, the linoleum may be polished daily with a waxed cloth fastened to a mop handle, thus saving the housekeeper from scrubbing the floors.

Keep Criticism to Yourself.

When you feel an inclination to criticize, remember that you weren't born to set the world right. Just murmur to yourself that, after all, it's a pretty nice little old world, and that perhaps it would be even more difficult to get along with people if they were all quite perfect, which they certainly aren't. Just keep your critical faculty to yourself; it will have all the exercise it needs.

Does Not Reduce the Price.

A pipe has been invented which fills itself as fast as the tobacco in the bowl is consumed. How Mark Twain would have appreciated this modern convenience! While Mr. Clemens was a young man, it is said, he contrived a pipe, consisting of a can of tobacco placed on the floor, to which a long rubber tube was attached. Then he would light the whole can and smoke in bed.

Heel Not to Bear Weight.

The weight of the body must never be borne on the heels. In walking, the leg is thrown forward from the hip, knee acting in harmony, heel touching the ground first; but the weight should be so quickly transferred to the ball of the foot that the heel makes no noise. One who walks noisily is always walking incorrectly, and of course cannot be graceful.

A Legal Pun.

"A petition for an injunction, based upon a somewhat doubtful assertion of fact," says a New York lawyer, "came before one of the justices of the supreme court of this state. After consideration of the affidavit of the petitioner, the justice remarked: 'In this case an injunction will not lie, even if the relator does.'"

THE BIG HEALTH DRIVE HAS BEEN STARTED

TO BUILD UP THE BLOOD OF THE PEOPLE

Spring is the Time When People Worn and Weary After a Hard Winter Need a Tonic to Restore the Blood and Renew Energy and Ambition

It is one of the most persistent traditions of the human race to take a tonic for the blood in the spring, and like most of the accumulated wisdom of mankind it has a sound scientific basis. Winter is always a trying season for people who have small reserve of physical strength. Not many of us get as much exercise and out-of-door air in winter as in summer. Much of our time is spent in rooms none too well ventilated, our diet lacks the fresh green foods of summer, and it is no wonder that the blood grows thin and sluggish with ill effects on the entire system.

Many people who need a tonic neglect it, because they are not sick enough to cause them any worse feeling than one of fatigue and discomfort. They do not realize that the decline in health is so gradual that they, themselves, do not realize how far from normal they are until the pale face, weak nerves, languidness and irritability attract the attention of friends. Even then a tonic is the right remedy, and there is absolutely no other tonic to compare with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This medicine builds up and enriches the blood and sends renewed health and strength to every part of the body. The appetite is improved, the digestion is toned up, there is new color in the cheeks and lips, vigorous health replaces weariness and lassitude and you find a new joy in living.

INDIGESTION CURED.

Mrs. Harry Odd, Nipissing, Ont., says: "For a long time I was a great sufferer from indigestion. I could not eat a meal without undergoing much suffering and as time went on I naturally became much run down, and found the greatest difficulty in doing my housework. In fact only those who have suffered from stomach trouble can realize how deplorable my condition was. I was treated by a doctor, but as he was not helping me I began taking other medicines, and had used several kinds without benefit before I heard that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended for this trouble. The result was that I was constantly growing weaker and weaker when my mother advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After using a few boxes I found they were helping me, and I continued taking them until I had used eight boxes, by which time the trouble had entirely disappeared and I was again enjoying the best of health."

A NERVOUS WRECK.

Miss Faith Scott, Brantford, Ont., says: "It would be difficult to find a person more benefitted by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than I have been. At the time I used them I was a nervous wreck, suffering from sleeplessness, dizziness and a severe form of headache. I was recommended to try your pills and did so with such good results that to-day I am enjoying the best of health and feel like a different girl. A dose of the pills occasionally keeps me in the best of health."

RHEUMATISM CURED.

Mr. Fred Elsie, Dashwood, Ont., says: "When I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was little better than a wreck; for years I had suffered periodically from rheumatism and lumbago. I was constantly doctoring, and while this gave me some relief, it did not cure me. As a matter of fact before I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I had spent more than a hundred dollars in other treatment and was still a sufferer. Then I was recommended to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and the use of only six boxes made a cure, and I have not had a twinge of the trouble since. While taking the pills my weight and general health increased in a most gratifying manner, and you may be sure I will always be a warm friend of this medicine."

ST. VITUS DANCE CURED.

Mrs. Wm. Hill, Stratford Ont., says: "I suffered from a nervous breakdown after the birth of my first child, and the trouble developed into St. Vitus dance, which put me into such a condition that I was scarcely able to do my housework; my hands twitched and trembled so that I could scarcely hold anything, and I walked so unsteadily that I was afraid to go out. Before beginning the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I tried several remedies, but they did not help me. It was on the advice of a friend that I took the pills, and in a short time they made a complete cure and I have ever since enjoyed the very best of health."

BAD BLOOD PURIFIED.

Miss Annie Durocher, Maidstone, Ont., says: "I am more grateful than I can say for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. My blood was in a very bad condition, I was weak, appetite poor, the least exertion would leave me breathless and my face was covered with pimples. I tried many medicines without getting any help, and then through a friend heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to give them a fair trial. The result is that this medicine purified and enriched my blood, cleared away all the pimples and left me enjoying the best of health. If I feel that I need a medicine again, you may be sure that it is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I shall take."

DIZZINESS AND FATIGUE.

Miss Beatrice M. Thomson, Guelph, Ont., says: "I have derived great benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For nearly a year I was troubled with anaemia, and many of its attendant evils. My face had a pale, tired, worn-out appearance, and I suffered from dizziness and fatigue with the slightest exertion. I tried different medicines, but instead of helping me I was actually growing worse. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and by the time I had used three boxes felt much better. I continued using the pills until I had taken six boxes, when I found my health fully restored. I most warmly recommend these pills to anyone who may be in poor health."

Do not be persuaded to take a substitute. See that the full trade mark name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." is printed on the wrapper around the box. If you cannot get these Pills through your dealer they will be sent by mail at 50 a box, or six boxes for $2:50, by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MUST FIGHT WILY FOE

LORD BEAVERBROOK FACES A VERY DIFFICULT TASK.

Former Canadian Cement Maker Must Cope With the German Propaganda, and He Will Be Up Against Diplomacy That Has Proved Itself Utterly Cruel and Corrupt.

If Lord Beaverbrook, one-time Canadian cement maker, rises to his full duty as Britain's Minister of Propaganda, he will have to use all the force and finesse that brought success to him in the industrial world. He has to meet a wily and thoroughly unscrupulous foe. There was a time early in the war when German diplomacy was roundly scored for its stupidity. That quality it still shows in many rash acts which have recoiled to the Huns' own disadvantage. On the other hand their propaganda, backed up by fear of the mailed fist, has injured the interests of the allies in not a few of the countries which still remain neutral, such as Denmark, Holland, Sweden and Spain.

Only the other day a Danish newspaper, the Koebenhavn, exposed the manner in which the German authorities had secured control of the Socialist party in Denmark. This was done by making an agreement for the importation of coal from Germany, the business to be handled by a company at a large profit, said profit to be a corruption fund for the enslavement of this powerful political party in a neighboring and neutral country. In this coal office is Alexander Helphand, alias Parvus, who carried on negotiations between Germany and the Russian Bolsheviki some time ago. "He is in Scheidemann's confidence," says the Koebenhavn. "His task is to make Copenhagen into a bridgehead and vantage ground of attack for German Social Democracy, which is now banned by the Internationale, but he also represents that Germany which wishes to triumph in a military sense, East as well as West."

Another example of the relentless policy of oppression by the Teutons is seen in the Italian portions of Austria, to regain which was one of the objects of Italy entering the war. When the United Kingdom of Italy was formed in 1866 Venetia became part of it, and peace and quiet thereupon ended for the provinces of Italian population that remained in Austria's hands — Trentino, Triest, Fiume, Istria and Dalmatia. The Trentino has been dominated by the military. It had been the scene of a flourishing silk industry, but after 1866 it was separated from Venetia and Lombardy by political as well as customs barriers, and it became like a plant cut off from its roots. Its silk mills could no longer import cocoons or export silken fabrics, and they had to close. Paper mills, iron and glass works also languished. Forced back on itself, it had to become an agricultural Alpine land, but that meant ruin to the whole population. Even telephonic and telegraphic communication with the Italian provinces to the south were systematically prohibited. Finally, Italian schools were closed, German schools opened and Teutons brought in for the work of the railwaymen gendarmes and tax collectors.

Farther east the Teutons have had an even greater task for their diabolical diplomacy in the Adriatic provinces of Austria. Here lay her chief interests—the sea and commerce. The method of repressing the Italians here, says Virginio Gayda in his book, "Modern Austria," was to bring in hordes of Slavs and set them up in antagonism to the Italians. "The Government's action," says Gayda, "in this singular disintegration of the nationality of the Italian regions has certain clearly marked characteristics. These are: The forcible introduction of large masses of Slavs, who, by their mere numbers, are difficult for the nationality of the place to absorb; the enforced isolation of these foreign masses to prevent their mixing with the Italian population, and the artificial cultivation of anti-Italian feeling and a rabid Chauvinism among these masses." Thus the two races which lived together in harmony were used to destroy each other as much as possible.

In this connection it is instructive to look at German influence and methods in another part of the world. Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainsford, formerly of Toronto and now of New York, who spent several years in Africa, warns the world against complacence in German designs in the "Dark Continent." In a letter to the New York Tribune he says:

"In Africa, as a colonizer, Germany's policy has been clear as the day. She has beaten to the earth all native tribes; she has prepared herself 'to rush' her neighbors' territory. Yet these are not her chief offence against the peace of the great African land and against those who have chosen it for their home. That offence lies in her deliberate and declared intention to do in Africa what Englishman, Boer, Frenchman, Belgian and Portuguese have so far not only refrained from doing, but have pledged themselves for Africa's advantage never to do, and that is this: Germany has proved her intention of building up in Central Africa a military state. If such a crime against humanity were to be allowed, then must we bid good-bye to peace and progress and quiet in that unfortunate and blood-soaked land. The work of countless missionaries and civil servants would be undone, and the savage instincts of tribes who are just beginning to know the blessings of peaceful industry would be stirred and stimulated."

On the other hand, Dr. Rainsford points out the humane policy pursued by Britain:

"There has been little trace of militarism in England's rule. Up to 1914 she had, for instance, in all her immense East African territory just two battalions of native infantry and one battery of artillery. She was wholly unprepared for war. Her colonization was absolutely pacific. Where climatic conditions were favorable to European settlement the country was being rapidly taken up. Where the climate was unfavorable as in the Uganda region, the tribes were encouraged to practice better agricultural work by capable civil servants and by a large number of missionaries, men and women as devoted, and not only devoted, but as wise and far-seeing in their methods as any who ever left home and comfort to live lonely lives of hardship for the sake of their fellowmen."

TIME MAKES CHANGES.

Descendants of "Rebels" Won Glory In France.

Three young Canadians have furnished a stirring page in Canada's illustrious war annals. The blood in their veins was "rebel" blood. They sprang from sires who, nearly a century ago, were laying the foundation for the most notable and dramatic uprising in the country's history. In 1837 William Lyon Mackenzie, Louis Joseph Papineau, and Samuel Lount rose against Britain in their battle for responsible Government. When the present war broke out their scions hastened to her defence for civilization and human liberty.

Recent British cables carried another list of gallant Canadians decorated for distinguished war service. That list included Major Samuel Kenyon Lount, who received the bar to his previously-won Military Cross. Major Lount enlisted at the outbreak of war as a private, and went overseas with the 76th Battalion. Having secured his commission he proceeded to France in a reinforcement draft, and was despatched to the fighting front. He was wounded on the Somme. On his recovery he returned to service, and has shared in every engagement in which his new battalion took part. At Vimy he won the Military Cross and his captaincy. At Passchendaele he won his bar and his majority. At present he is in a military hospital "worn out."

Major Lount is the only surviving son of the late Samuel Lount, registrar at Barrie. In that town his widowed mother and sister now live. He is also a grandnephew of Samuel Lount, one of the outstanding figures in the stirring times of 1837, who might have saved his life had he chosen to reveal the names of those who took part with him in that historic rising.

Major Lount is the third link in the blood tie that binds the "rebels" of that uprising to the patriots of the great war of to-day. Major Charles Bethune Lindsey, D.S.O., son of Mr. G. G. S. Lindsey, K.C., who won his decoration on the fields of France, is the great-grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie. Major Talbot Papineau of the Princess Patricias, who won the Military Cross, was more than once mentioned in despatches, and finally gave his life in heroic service on the battlefield, was the grandson of Louis Joseph Papineau.

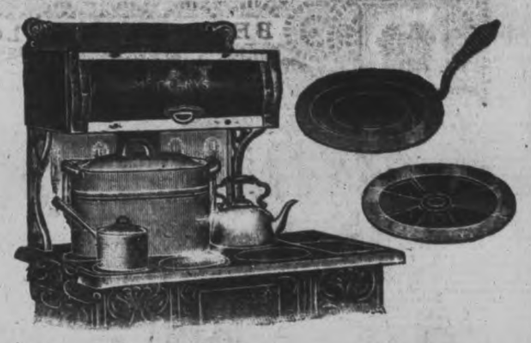
It is to the glory of these young Canadians—descendants of the men of the historic yesterday who fought Britain in the cause of responsible Government—that they were among the first to spring to her defence in the cause of liberty and justice. The names of Mackenzie, Papineau and Lount loom large in the history of the past. The names of their young descendants add lustre to the new pages being written in the stressful present.

Knew His Bible.

On board a steamer "somewhere on the Atlantic" a seasick soldier boy was having a session at the rail when an officer came along.

"Hello! What's that you're doing?" said the officer mockingly.

"I'm rendering unto the sea, sir, the things that are the sea's, sir," gasped the soldier as soon as he could speak.



The Pandora's Top

Three-quarters of your rangework is done on the top of the range.

So the Pandora Range top has been designed to perform as many duties, simultaneously, as it is possible for a range to do.

The Pandora flue system gives you five holes in the top upon which you can boil. The six-hole top is made with two interchangeable sections.

On wash day this enables you to set the boiler on the far side and cook dinner on three front holes.

There is a reducing cover for smaller sized pots.

Also a check cover to hold the fire in at night.

And then when the work is cleared away, by one gentle rub with a cloth you instantly restore the burnished brilliance of the top—less work by half than even the "lick and a promise" you used to give the old style, rough and rattling cast iron covers that would not shine without black-lead and a backache.

THE HABITANT COUNTRY.

It is Picturesque and Recalls the Old World.

New France! The change from the Maritime Provinces or Ontario comes suddenly. In a moment, as it were, one is surrounded by French Canada, by French faces, French farms, French songs and language. In all America, there is no more picturesque and old-world region of the white man than this Habitant Country beloved of the poet, Drummond, and occupied by peasants who form the only important offshoot of the French people to be found. The section has an isolated, quaint, almost medieval civilization, in which gay French chansons echoing from peasant cottages, home-fashioned hay carts and furniture, lofty wayside "calvaries," tumble-down little Norman houses with sloping roofs and dormer windows, like those of France 300 years ago, scarlet sashes and bright, knitted hoods, high, two-wheeled carts or caleches, and low-running sleighs or burleaux, speak eloquently of a day long past. So, too, speak the leisurely, old-world courtesy and the simple gayety and contentment of light-hearted "Pierre and his people," amid whom hospitality reigns supreme and smiles are universal.

The villages are long and straggling. They often begin with one saint and end with another, as though the parishes, having caught up with each other, had decided to make common cause. Pass out of the long, winding funnel of the irregular main street, past the open-air clay ovens, where peasant women daily bake bread, with a crowd of children tugging at their skirts, pass the litter of lumber mills, and a high cliff or slope, crowned by a lordly monastic establishment, invariably comes to view. Noble and majestic in its aloofness, it casts its long shadow across some hut into which a habitant and his numerous family have burrowed. Enter this hut, and you will doubtless find that the main room is doing service as parlor, dining-room, and kitchen. In the corner, a clumsy staircase leads up to a loft that is a shakedown for members of the family and a storehouse for lumber. There, in a flash, one has caught something of the pathos of the Habitant Country, of the out-at-elbows homes, which straggle along until they reach the door of an impressive twin-spired church. It is the old France, the France before the revolution.

All along the shores of the St. Lawrence, once the only highway, lies the true heart of the Habitant Country, the spot where settled the lineal descendants of those who, centuries before, penetrated the "pays d'en haut" with a sublime courage and inspiration, to lift the veil from the unknown West. Here are the historic farms, measuring their precious river frontage by feet and their depth by miles, their houses ranged, in colonial days, in rows that their occupants might the better fend off the attacks of the American Indian.

"Jean Courteau" clings with an almost desperate love to the picturesque riparian villages of the St. Lawrence, stretching all the way from the "gates" of the Habitant Country at Riviere du Loup, beyond the core of Drummond's adopted Habitant world at Trois Rivieres to that outer western edge at Bord a Plouffe, which hugs the banks of the beautiful Riviere des Prairies. Here is the haunt of the gladiators of the saw log who, from the square lumber raft, sing their odd ditties, "Trois beaux canards," or "Par derriere chez ma tante."

"Bord a Plouffe is on de reever,
Bord a Plouffe is on de shore,
An' de family of Plouffe dere all aroun'."

It was Voltaire who, at the fall of Quebec, contemptuously remarked that England and France were fighting for a few acres of snow. But the Habitant knows better. Happy and contented, his country, for him, is the most precious possession in the world, and many a citizen in less happy lands might envy the spirit which sings:

"But I tole you—dat's true—I don' go on de city,
If you seev de fine house an' beau coup d'argent—
I rader be stay me, an' spen' de las day me
On farm by de rapide dat's call Cheval Blanc."

Mrs. Ralph Smith Introduces Bill.

One plank in the platform upon which Mrs. Ralph Smith appealed to the Vancouver electorate in January last was nailed into position when Hon. J. W. DeB. Farris, Attorney-General for British Columbia, introduced as a Government measure, the Vancouver lady member's bill, "An Act to Provide for a Minimum Wage for Women." First reading was accorded the bill and its further pilotage through the House will be left to Mrs. Smith.

Co-operative Stores.

The town of Glenella, Sask., has two stores conducted by co-operative societies. One has been in operation for two years and has conducted business on a cash basis with success, so it is stated. The second is a recent venture and has been established by the Ruthenian Farmers' Co-operative Company.

Generous Redmen.

The Indians of Split Lake have sent a donation of $47 to the Red Cross Society at The Pas, Man. Split Lake lies between the Saskatchewan river and Hudson Bay.

Nothing Like Internal Bathing For Constipation

If people only knew what Internal Bathing is doing for thousands of others there would be fewer Pills and Laxatives swallowed and very much less suffering from Constipation and the accompanying Stomach and Nervous troubles resulting from it.

Mrs. Cave, 841 Ellery Street, Victoria, B. C., writes:

"Before using the 'J.B.L. Cascade' I suffered constantly from Constipation and frequent bilious attacks and sick headaches. Since beginning your system of Internal Bathing with the 'J.B.L. Cascade' four months ago I have not had one attack and feel stronger and better in every way. My only regret is that I did not get a Cascade sooner."

By the proper application of Nature's cure, warm water, by means of the "J.B.L. Cascade" the lower intestines are kept free from all poisonous waste. Drugs force Nature. Internal Bathing assists her.

Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, a specialist on Internal Bathing, invented and perfected the "J. B. L. Cascade," which has done more during the past 20 years in restoring health and lessening disease than all other means combined. Ask the Warne Drug Co., Peterboro, for Booklet, "Why Man of To-day is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient." They will also be pleased to show and explain the J. B. L. Cascade to you.

Severe Pains In The Back

Told of Kidney Trouble—Was Unable to Work, But Finally Found a Cure by Using This Well-known Medicine

Gananoque, Ont., March 19—There is plenty of enthusiasm in this town for Dr. Chase's Medicines, and many people ready with good reports of cures effected.

There seems to be no treatment for kidney derangements which proves effective in such a large proportion of cases as does Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This is because the liver and bowels are usually involved as well as the kidneys, and this medicine overcomes the disease because it acts directly on these organs.

Mrs. W. Higgins, John St., Gananoque, Ont., writes: "My husband has made use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last thirteen years. Previous to that he had several attacks of kidney trouble, accompanied by severe pains in his back. He became so bad that he was unable to work. Finally he started using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and the results were splendid. He quite recovered, and by using an occasional Kidney-Liver Pill he wards off recurrent attacks, and has never had any trouble since. We also use Dr. Chase's Ointment in our home and find it an excellent salve."

Mrs. James Bishop, Stone St. N., Gananoque, Ont., writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in our home for some time, and find them an excellent remedy for pains in the back. They seem to help the stomach and kidneys to do their work more effectively. We are pleased to recommend them to others."

Drive Turkeys to Market.

In some sections of Texas turkeys are driven to market. In one instance a flock of 8,000 turkeys was driven 13 miles in two days. Twice a year a train called the "turkey special" leaves Morristown, Tenn. Carloads of turkeys are sent to Morristown from the surrounding country, and these are made up into one train and rushed to New York. Each car contains about 1,200 birds and a man is sent to care for them. In spite of all possible speed and care, however, the birds are said to lose about 12 per cent of their weight in shipment.

The House of Illumination.

A visitor to an old English cathedral was told that up in the vaulted roof there was a wonderful bit of carving, but that he had come at the wrong time of day to see it properly. Only at a certain hour of the morning did the light fall on it and reveal its beauty. Those early workers in stone were content that for the greater part of the time their work should remain hidden and unappreciated, and that it should only appear to the visitor at some rare moment of illumination.

The Humanities.

The humanities are those branches of education or study which are included in what are called elegant learning, as languages, grammar, philosophy and poetry, including the ancient classics, an educator says. The name implies that the story of these branches has a tendency to humanize man, to cultivate particularly those faculties which distinguish him as a man in all his relations, social and moral; that is, which make him a truly cultured man.

SERVICE TO THE NATION DEMANDS GOOD HEALTH

War is bringing home to every man, woman and child the fact that service to the nation is not a matter alone for the soldier and sailor and munition worker.

There is work, necessary work, for everyone to do, in the way of thrift and production and to do this work, health is the first essential. Even the most willing will find progress is slow if the health is bad.

Probably the most common complaint among those doing unaccustomed tasks is backache. Work may cause a tired feeling that will easily pass off but this backache that almost doubles one up is an indication of a condition of the system that needs treatment. The Kidneys are giving evidence of their weakness and the sufferer should be thankful for the timely warning given by this pain.

The quickest and surest relief from backache is a treatment with Gin Pills. Gin Pills are the tested specific for the healing of the Kidneys. Anyone who wishes to perform his or her full duty to the Nation in these strenuous times will find relief from backache in Gin Pills.

"THEY SHALL NOT WANT"

In a moment of inspiration an advertising man recently hit upon the above four words as epitomizing the desire and determination of the people of Canada that the Armies of the Allies and the suffering peoples of the Allied nations of Europe shall be supplied with all that Canada can possibly furnish of the food stuffs necessary for their support in the energetic and successful prosecution of their struggle for the defeat of tyrannical Prussian aspirations.

Compressed in this little sentence is more real throbbing meaning than most full pages of printed matter contain. In sixteen letters it expresses the determination of a people that a great cause must be sustained at no matter what personal sacrifice.

"They shall not want."

How aptly these words also express the attitude of the NORMAL, HEALTHY-MINDED MAN towards, those who under our social system, naturally look to him for support and protection. As he thinks of the wife who has entrusted her future to his care and of the children whom he has brought into the world, his thought and determination is "THEY SHALL NOT WANT."

This is always the attitude of the normal, healthy-minded man who is willing to sacrifice, if need be, to attain this noble end.

A policy in the Sun Life of Canada provides the safest and most economical means of fulfilling this noble desire and determination and incidentally, if fortunately in time this mode of protection is no longer necessary he may himself reap the benefits of his savings and thrift.

Thus virtue has its own reward.

College Boys in Kahki

A FINE record of what the graduates and undergraduates of the University of Toronto are doing in the war is presented in the 'Varsity Magazine Supplement recently issued. It is dedicated in the words of Mr. Sidney Childs, the editor, "To those members of our Alma Mater who have left behind the attractive haunts and pursuits of academic life and abandoned pleasant prospects of easy and honorable careers in their chosen professions for the chance of wounds or death." Since August, 1914, the Toronto University has been transformed into a war institution, and has given of its best in men and women to the supreme task of winning the war. It would be invidious to make comparisons between the University of Toronto and the other great British universities or similar institutions among the other belligerent countries, but since the University of Toronto is the largest in the British Empire, more might have been expected of it than from any other.

Its war record may properly become as time goes on that of which Toronto University is most proud, dedicated though it is to the arts of peace. Since the last supplement to the magazine was issued the list of 'Varsity's dead has increased from 120 to 346. Altogether there have been about 4,300 enlistments from the university, and the editor remarks that it has been a source of keen pride that the Military Service Act found few men of military age in the colleges. Up till the end of December two members of the university had won the Victoria Cross, Major T. W. MacDowell and Lieut. J. M. Reid. Some ten had received the C.M.G., and two the C.B., they being the late Major-Gen. M. S. Mercer and Col. J. A. Roberts. More than forty had won the D.S.O., four of them having been killed in action. Some two hundred, one would calculate by the length of the list, are Military Cross winners, and hundreds more have won other decorations or have been mentioned in despatches. Decorations have been bestowed upon Toronto 'Varsity men by Italy, France, Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Russia. They have fought on every front, and wherever there is an army opposing Germany or one of Germany's allies there are to found students or former students from 'Varsity.

A fine feature of the publication are the pages containing the photographs of the 'Varsity men who have fallen. The list is complete with the exception of a dozen or so out of the 346, and "dull would he be of soul" who can scan these pages and look into the fine young faces of these gallant fellows without feeling an additional pang, however greatly the horror of the war has taken possession of him. One is struck with the same thing in looking over the English illustrated papers with their pages on which appear the photographs of the week's grist in the mill of the war gods, surely one of the most poignant records of the conflict! But these pages in the 'Varsity Magazine Supplement are finely headed by Rupert Brooke's great lines, beginning:

"Blow out, you bugles, over the rich dead!
There's none of these so lonely and poor of old,
But, dying, has made us rare gifts than gold."

The magazine contains special messages from the Duke of Devonshire, Sir Robert Borden, Sir W. H. Hearst, Sir Robert Falconer, Sir Edmund Walker and articles describing various departments of the university's war work in many parts of the world. The Prime Minister of Canada notes that some 12,000 graduates and undergraduates of Canadian universities have volunteered for active service, half of them being undergraduates. Sir Edmund Walker's article is a fine appeal to patriotism. He says that great as Germany's internal troubles may be we have no reason to think that Germany is prepared on this account to make a righteous peace, nor will she be ready until her armies have suffered a crushing defeat. This is a point which writers have sought to emphasize many times, and at no time is it more necessary than now that our thoughts should be concentrated upon a more vigorous prosecution of the war, instead of permitting ourselves to be beguiled by speculations on the subject of peace.

Sir Robert Falconer makes fitting recognition of the stronger bonds of affection that have been knit between Canada and the United States, and observes that this is another of those unexpected results that was not planned by those who engineered the war. Another interesting article tells of the work of the Canadian officers who were summoned to American universities to assist in training after the United States entered the war, and it would appear that to most of the great American colleges men from the University of Toronto have gone and are now hard at work. Prof. D. R. Keys contributes an admirable article on the Balfour convocation, which is enriched with several photographs. It is impossible to mention all the other excellent features of the 'Varsity Magazine Supplement. It is worth many times the price charged for it, 75c, and is to be obtained from C. C. Grant, at the University of Toronto. All profits from the sale, and we hope they may be great, will be devoted to hospital and Red Cross work.

Make Your Vegetable Garden A Family Affair

The best way to insure the success of your vegetable garden is to get every member of the family interested in it.

Don't put the whole burden upon father and mother. Any child over the age of ten years can, and usually will be glad to help, if his interest is encouraged; and even younger children may be shown how to help.

The way one family cultivated a very successful vegetable garden last year was as follows:

The husband and wife planned the garden. The man spaded up the soil and manured it as he went along.

Then he and his wife and their two eldest children raked it all over thoroughly and put in other fertilizer. In this way they got the ground into good condition.

The man planted the potatoes, the corn, the tomatoes and the cabbages.

The woman attended to the beans, peas, green onions, spinach, radish and lettuce.

The children looked after the late onions, parsnips, beets and carrots. And they all helped one another with the hoeing.

What was the result?

There grew up in that family a friendly rivalry and an interest in the garden such as no person would have believed possible had the experiment not been tried.

The family had plenty of salad vegetables during the summer. They preserved sufficient tomatoes, beans and pickles to last all through the Winter and they took off enough potatoes, beets, carrots, parsnips and onions to carry them through until March of this year.

What this family did your family should be able to do. The way they went about cultivating their garden is described in a booklet entitled "A Vegetable Garden for Every Home." This book has been prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture for distribution to any householder who will send for a copy. It is full of helpful, practical suggestions, including plans for various sized gardens. You can get a copy free by filling out and mailing the coupon below.

FOUGHT IN PALESTINE.

Canadian Soldier Gives His Impression of the Orient.

Under date of Dec. 28th, 1917, H. H. Dewart, M.P.P., of Toronto, has received the following letter from Capt. Norman S. Macdonnell, Royal Field Artillery, Palestine:

"It is a long time since I wrote you a decent letter. But it is also a long time since I have had any spare time to write in. Fighting here is not so fearfully severe, but with open warfare, a far-away base, impoverished and undeveloped country, and scanty equipment, the work of carrying on is pretty considerable and not much time is left over.

"The capture of Jerusalem was great. One division approached from the south, my own from the west. The main fight occurred outside and the city surrendered. We marched in, each battalion and battery on its own account. So I led mine. It was fine. No 'spit and polish' parade. Heavy rain had delayed the horsemen and vehicles in mud; clothing and equipment was torn and lost. But it was the real thing. And I had all the pride of the Celt as I rode at the head of my guns through all the starling throng of Orientals of three continents. It was splendid to be the representation of the greatest power on earth in a day of triumph. From the point of view of immediate military advantage the fall of Jerusalem is not important as compared with actions in France. But from the general view it is important. It is something for the Cross to have swept away the Crescent after so many centuries; and it is something to feel that it has been done by Britain. Bagdad, Mecca, Jerusalem—all gone from Islam. Only Damascus and Constantinople remain. As I rode into the city and out again along the old wall and past the Damascus Gate I thought I was in Fairyland. All the old Bible stories I heard as a kid—Sennasherib and Nebuchadnezzar; the history learned later at college—Rome and Mahomet; the romance of the Crusaders and the French; the might of Britain; the present conditions—it all galloped through my head, and I laughed to think that it was all true.

"This is an extraordinary land in that way. It is at once so strange and so familiar. The names are familiar. One night we camped at ———, ———is only eight miles away; I am near the Mount of Olives at present, ahead are ———, and further still ———. The heavens at night are wondrously brilliant; no wonder they impressed the ancient imagination. And those hills have looked for 6,000 years on scenes like these.

"The London Scottish climbing the mountain tracks, with kilt and pipe, must be not unlike those older battalions. (Man! It is great to see them—the hills and the pipers!) And yet it is very strange. We are very near cut off. We never heard of the collapse in Italy till after six weeks. We read of things at home and in England as of things in another sphere. And the names and tales that are so familiar come from very long ago. So much that is strange has intervened. Somehow it is a very lonely land. To fall here seems very lonely. But cheero! We have taken Jerusalem; things are O.K. And everybody is hearty. On the whole in the last two months the weather has been great. Now it is terrible. The rainfall here is as great as that of London; and it all comes at once; we are getting it now, and it has made transport almost impossible; even the camels are giving out. But who cares? It is worth it. The last two months have been among the best of my life. The East has its points."

Frills and ruffles have given place to embroidery on all occasions.

His Comment.

An amusing story of an ingenuous Canadian sailor comes from the Y.M.C.A. hut in the Strand, London. The waitressses are 'most of them American ladies, who, of course, give voluntary service at the canteen. The other day a sailor proffered a tip to the "waitress" when he had finished his meal, and it was refused. "What. Have you really plenty of money?" said the sailor in astonishment. She assured him that she had, but was somewhat taken aback when the sailor boy, looking her up and down, remarked: "Well, you don't look it."

Pulsation of the Heart.

Each pulsation of the heart in the average adult sends a wave of blood through the arteries of the body.

A Prayer.

A subscriber to Outlook writes apropos of a recent paragraph, that an "unintentionally irreverent prayer" uttered in perfect solemnity by an old-time hill-town parson was as follows: "O Lord, Thou art like a chipping-squirrel in the wall—Thou canst see us, but we can't see Thee!"

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

Many ailments find their beginning in a torpid sluggish condition of liver, kidneys and bowels. As a matter of fact you can add years to the length of your life as well as comfort and happiness by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to keep these organs regular and active.

STOP HEADACHES BEFOREHAND

You never had a headache when you were well.

To keep well is to keep clean, inside.

To relieve headache, and to prevent it, keep the liver active and industrious and the bowels as regular as a clock.

Two generations of healthy, vigorous people have done this by taking one pill at bedtime, regularly—a larger dose when nature gives the warning.

Ruse to Get Auto Ride.

Willie's father does not own an auto but a good friend of the family has a seven-passenger car. One Sunday afternoon the little one became restless and was wishing some one would come and take them for a ride. Finally he said: "Daddy, call up the Johnsons and ask them if they wouldn't like to take a walk with us—and daddy, tell them to be sure and bring their auto."

Arabs Love Turkish Delight.

The confection known as "Turkish delight" is the most important used by the Arabs of Arabia, reports United States Consul Addison E. Southard of Aden. This is made from sugar and American starch, with flavoring and sometimes almonds or the kernels of ground nuts. Turkish delight often makes up the bulk of the Arab's breakfast, and it is eaten often at other times.

To Detect Coloring Matter.

To ascertain whether artificial coloring matter has been added to tea place a small quantity of tea on a piece of white paper, and rub with an ordinary table knife until the leaves become a fine powder. Now brush the paper with a bristle brush, and if any Prussian blue has been used for coloring purposes there will be little streaks of this all over the paper.

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION From 16 to 20

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind, and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels so regulated that in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma E. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my sister-in-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BRINGS OUT LATENT TRAITS

War Develops Hidden Qualifications of Many Young Heroes Now in Government's Service.

"It takes all sorts of things to bring out latent traits in us all." The speaker in the club car rolled his cigar to the other corner of his mouth. The other occupants sat silently, surmising that a story was coming, recounts a writer in an exchange.

"Knew a young fellow over East. Father had lots of money. Son did not seem inclined to add a great deal to it by working, but made several dents in the family purse by his spending. Not that he was a bad boy at heart—only thoughtless. Sometimes I think the rich father was attempting to make a business man out of a man never intended for that sort of life. The boy did not seem to be able to find his niche. Said to me one day when he had gotten confidential: 'You know, my only fear is that I am not going to make something out of myself that will make dad proud of me.' And the two surely did love each other. One day the boy asked the father for several thousand dollars. It was forthcoming. Then he asked the father to cash a check for some money left him by his dead mother. He got that. Then the boy sort of dropped out of New York life.

"Next thing I knew he was a lieutenant in the aviation section of the army. He had bought two airplanes, taken them down into the country to one of his father's farms and learned to fly. Guess those that knew him thought it was another of his money-burning ways. But when he thought himself competent he went to the government and simply said: 'Here I am, ready for any service you may have for me,' and the government took him up in a hurry. He may be in France. But you should have seen that father's face light up every time he mentioned that boy. And when he does get back from France he and his father are going to be greater pals than ever, if that be possible.

"Now I am not going to say that many young men are going to have about $20,000 at their beck and call to demonstrate that it only needs the occasion to make men out of them, but I do say that there are scores of young men doing just as much or more."

Switzerland Like United States.

Switzerland is the only European example of a federative and democratic republic of the American type, observes a writer. Switzerland, as the United States, was born from a desire for emancipation from autocratic despotism; like the United States, Switzerland never believed in the divine right of kings. The very past which the ancient federates, on that quiet spot, the "Rutli," on the classic Lake of Lucerne on August 1, 1291, swore to, embodies that great principle for which now, 626 years later, the United States is fighting, namely, to quote President Wilson's own words, "For the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own governments." There the old Swiss proclaimed self-government against the autocratic rule of the Hapsburg, in the following words: "We ordain and direct with unanimous accord, that in the above-mentioned valleys we shall recognize no judge who shall have bought his rights with money or in any other manner, or who shall not be a native and an inhabitant of these districts."

Futile Disputes.

In stating prudential rules for our government in society, I must not omit the important one of never entering into dispute or argument with another.

I never saw an instance of one of two disputants convincing the other by argument.

I have seen many, on their getting warm, becoming rude and shooting one another.

Conviction is the effect of our own dispassionate reasoning, either in solitude or weighing within ourselves, dispassionately, what we hear from others, standing uncommitted in argument ourselves. It was one of the rules which, above all others, made Doctor Franklin the most amiable of men in society, "never to contradict anybody." If he was urged to announce an opinion, he did it rather by asking questions, as if for information, or by suggesting doubts—Thomas Jefferson.

In Luck Again.

"I thought you couldn't get credit any more?"

"I couldn't for a while. But since scientific salesmanship came in I amble around and let the scientific salesman sell me some delightfully large bills."

How Canada's Greatest Shoe House Supplies the Nation's Footwear

CONSIDER the amount of time and the infinite care you take when buying footwear to suit your own taste in regard to style, size, etc. Multiply your own individual needs by millions and you will get an idea of the immense task which confronts the makers of Canada's footwear, and the size of the organization it is necessary to maintain for that purpose.

The buying of a single pair of shoes is an event that occupies a person but a few moments two or three times a year—but to meet the accumulated demand of a nation's individuals, it requires the whole resources of a gigantic industry. Ames Holden McCready are truly "Shoemakers to the Nation." It is a title justified by their size and the importance of their business.

It may be a revelation to many Canadians to know that to supply them with proper footwear, this firm maintains huge factories each with many acres of floor space, and hundreds of intricate, almost human, machines—facilities and equipment sufficient to turn out 8,000 pairs of shoes every working day.

It requires a small army of workpeople, clerks and warehousemen, in addition to executives, buyers and travellers.

It requires much study and thought to plan styles and models of Men's, Women's and Children's shoes in their various grades and styles.

In order to secure the best results in the production of various kinds and grades, it is also necessary to specialize.

For example: Ames Holden McCready factories are separated into three distinct factory units, each a complete factory in itself.

One unit of our factories is devoted entirely to the manufacture of high grade footwear for Women and Children. Consider the great variety of styles in women's footwear, including high-top boots, oxfords and pumps.

Consider the many different patterns and lasts, the varieties and shades of leather and finish—then you will see what a great number of models are required to meet the widely different needs of Canadian women in the cities and towns and also in the country districts.

Another factory unit is devoted to making only the better grades and styles of Men's Shoes—shoes for professional men, lawyers, doctors, and all business men, whose occupations permit the use of fine leathers such as calf and kid.

The third unit specializes in sturdier types of shoes for heavy wear and rough usage. Shoes for farmers, lumbermen, miners, trainmen, and workpeople who require a heavier and more solidly-constructed boot.

In addition to the work of manufacture—the requirements of distribution are also tremendous. A manufacturer must not only make his goods economically and well—but he must deliver them—DISTRIBUTE them. Therefore, in addition to a force of 60 travellers constantly visiting the retail trade from coast to coast, Ames Holden McCready maintain, in the centres of population throughout Canada, immense stocks of boots and shoes ready for immediate shipment to the retailers in each section.

These warehouses are located in the following cities:

St. John Toronto Montreal
Winnipeg Edmonton Vancouver

Years of experience has taught us the kind and styles of boots which are required in each locality. No matter in what part of Canada you reside, no matter what particular kind of shoe you require, your retail dealer can procure it for you without loss of time.

And that is the reason why you will find, even in the outlying districts, that dealers selling Ames Holden McCready goods are up-to-date with stocks that are fresh and new, and which reflect the latest shapes and styles.

When you see the A. H. M. trade mark on a shoe, you know that not only is that mark an endorsement by the largest shoe concern in Canada, but that being the product of a highly organized industry, the shoe you are buying represents the utmost in value, style and wearing qualities which can be obtained at the price.

The Difference.

Everyone who enjoys nature thinks that the principal thing to the tree is the fruit, but in point of fact the principal thing to it is the seed. Herein lies the difference between them that create and them that enjoy.

In the Embryo.

Gertrude strutted about like a peacock with her aunt's hat and veil on. Billy, her cousin, poked fun at her.

Wind and Trees.

The existence of tall plants and trees depends largely on the wind force. A tree with square trunk and branches would offer so much resistance to the wind that it would be continually having its branches snapped.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

What the Children Did

By F. A. MITCHEL

It was springtime. Not the early spring, but June, when the leaves and flowers are fully developed. A boy and a girl stood leaning on a fence looking over a slowly rolling stream beneath them, with broad fields beyond, then a range of mountains. They had had their first lovers' quarrel. There they made it up, there he told his story, there he took his first lover's kiss. That was the happiest moment in their lives.

Slowly they walked on. The sun approaching its setting, spread a yellow carpet in their path. It tinged the leaves above them; it gilded the stream beside which they walked. It lighted up the dogwood blossom; it gave a deeper hue to the wild rose. It flooded the meadow; it placed a crown of glory on the mountains. And it seemed to them that all this splendor was to give a more spiritual zest to that betrothal kiss.

"We will never quarrel again," she said.

"We will never quarrel again," he replied.

A bird on a limb beside the road on which they walked burst into a song of infinite happiness.

"Do you know what it is saying?" she asked.

"No, what is it?"

"We will never quarrel again."

Ten years passed. They were arranging for a separation. Quarrel had followed quarrel, and much of the time the demon of jealousy held full sway in the mind of the once happy wife. Now the husband was going away, leaving with her one of their children, a girl of four. The father was to take the boy, aged seven.

All had been arranged and they were now to break the news to the children.

They had not thought how difficult this would be.

"Call them in," said the father, trying hard to keep his voice steady.

"How would it do for you to go to their playroom and tell them there. I am sure I will break down and that would make it still more dreadful for all of us," said the wife.

He hesitated.

"Well, perhaps it is best that I should be present," she said. "If you will go and bring them here I will do what I can to bear up."

He found the children romping, and they pounced upon him.

"Oh, daddy, dear, do come and play with us; we are having a beautiful time."

Then something in his face seemed to quiet them, and when he said gently: "Come with me, chicks," they each took the father's hand and passed out of the room. The little girl, however, unable to keep the dance out of her chubby legs, skipped along by his side. As they entered the living room their mother faced her husband and said:

"I am ready; tell them."

He drew the little boy to his lap and said: "John, you are to go and live with me in another house, and Alice will stay here with mother."

"Then will mother come every night to undress me and hear me say my prayers?"

"No, dear, some kind woman will do that for you. Mother will be here with Alice; perhaps I can undress you for a few nights."

"Now, daddy," remonstrated the boy, "you don't know how to undress me, and I don't want some strange woman to do it."

Just then sobs broke the stillness of the room. Little Alice buried her head in her mother's lap, and a wailing voice said: "I don't want any naughty woman to have brother. I want brother to stay here and play with me."

Then she crept from the arms of her sobbing mother and going to her brother, put both her little arms round his neck, saying:

"No, brother can't go away from Alice."

The two children clung to each other; they seemed to feel that some calamity overhung them. They looked from the serious face of their sobbing mother and wondered what it could all mean. They ran over to their mother and putting their arms around her, the little girl said: "Mother, don't let daddy take brother away, and I don't want daddy to go, either; we will be lonely without daddy," and she darted for her father, taking him by the hand and pulling him over to her mother.

"Mother, you tell daddy not to go away; it makes you feel so awful bad."

The mother raised her head and looked directly into the eyes of her husband, who was kneeling near her. His arm joined the children encircling her and in a voice he could not control he said:

"Agnes, for the sake of these two dear little ones, can't we try it again? This terrible suffering has wiped away all anger from our hearts, and now for the sake of all we hold dear, let us forgive and forget. I have been thinking of the kiss I took that day in June when we made up on our first lovers' quarrel. You remember?"

"Strange, I was thinking of that, too."

"Let us repeat that kiss and let it be the pledge to hold together the four, now, instead of the two then."

And so saying he enfolded the three in his arms, at the same time placing tenderly a kiss full of affection on the lips of his wife.

LIVING IN JAPAN.

What It Costs an Oriental to Keep a Home.

As bearing upon the future trade relations and the commercial and industrial competition of the Japanese and American peoples, a recent study on the standard of living in Japan by Kokichi Morimoto, professor of economics in Tohoku Imperial University, published in the course of Johns Hopkins University studies, has some significance and interest in this country.

Prof. Morimoto finds the cost of the standard diet of Japanese people, which is, however, better than the actual diet, to be 18.3 cents a day, while the cost of the suggested standard diet of Americans, which is less than the actual cost, is estimated at 28 cents a day, based on 1913 figures.

The actual diet of the Japanese small farmer or laborer costs six cents a day, and is largely made up of rice, barley, fish and vegetables. Relatively little meat is consumed in Japan. Japanese prisoners are fed at a cost of about four cents a day, and this is also the cost of a Japanese woman laborer's rations. The Japanese navy man is fed on beef, bread, barley, beans, vegetables, and has portions of sugar, vinegar and oil, at a cost of about 20 cents a day; the soldier's ration costs about 18 cents. The recommended standard diet of the urban dweller costs something like 16 cents a day in Tokio. The average weight of a Japanese is eight-tenths that of the average European; the food nutriment necessary to a Japanese is about 80 per cent. that of a European.

In the "overhead charge" of maintenance the American individual cost is, roughly, double that of the Japanese. For a family of five, two of the children girls, the clothing cost would be about $85 a year to those of moderate means, ranging to $150 a year for families in easy circumstances.

Among the city dwellers of large income, father's silk overcoat costs $15; his shoes, $1.25; a cotton overcoat costs about $5; his silk garment, $4, and cotton garment, about $3. There is a sash at $3.50 and a skirt at perhaps $6.

Mother's clothing costs about $100 a year, and her ob, or sash, at $25, is the greatest single expense; but her silk haori costs $13, her topcoat $5, her shawl, $1.30, umbrella or parasol $1.25, and handkerchiefs, 30 cents; women's shoes, or clogs, cost perhaps $3.

However helpful the Japanese low cost of living may be in fixing the various standards of wages and costs of production, the statesmen of the empire believe the economic welfare of both individual and nation would be advanced by a greater home consumption. Japan's national wealth is about $400 per capita, while that of Great Britain is $1,500, the United States $1,250, and Germany $950. Japan needs wealth to secure its growing place in the world of business. Efficiency in production has increased ten to one hundred times; machine has replaced hand power, yet there has been no conspicuous advance in the use of wealth.

"The mass of people," writes Prof. Morimoto, "live in the same way as they did during the feudal regime. There should be improvements of such a kind that an efficient standard of living could be economically maintained. Unless production and consumption make parallel advancement the economic welfare of the individual as well as of the nation can never be expected to improve."

The recent flow of wealth to Japan by reason of the war business has enhanced values and no doubt raised the general standard of living somewhat above Prof. Morimoto's estimate.

TIRED AND DISCOURAGED

Mrs. Warren Randles, Rothesay, Kings County, N.B., "I have three small children and had to stay in the house all winter. So when spring came I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out, and looked on the gloomy side all the time. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel fine now, and am recommending the Nerve Food to others."

Gaza, a Place of Trade.

In almost every particular the modern Gaza is an Egyptian rather than a Syrian town. It is full of rich vegetation, and its many glistening minarets show up against the dull green of innumerable olive trees. Gaza is still, as of old, a place of trade, of camels and caravans, and its bazaars are loud with traffic and filled with merchandise.

Songs of the Heart.

The finest music of the greatest orchestra on earth cannot help a heart along to happiness as the songs do that the heart sings to itself—songs of cheer, of patience, of trust, of unselfish love. These make the melody of life, and grow stronger and sweeter by practice year by year.

Deliveries by Ford One-Ton Truck

THE commercial car is looked upon today as a necessity by progressive business firms who have hauling and delivering problems to consider.

Wholesale or retail merchants who must deliver quantities of merchandise have found the horse-drawn delivery to be too slow, expensive, and entirely inadequate.

The Ford truck, with a single driver, will do more work and cover more ground than two teams and two drivers, for it travels in half the time. This truck will reduce your hauling costs. It eliminates one driver's salary and the care which horses always require. It will make your delivery service more efficient. It will widen your area of distribution. It will be constantly ready for work—day or night. It will show a profit on your investment.

There has been a popular demand for a Ford truck as is shown by the many uses, for commercial purposes, to which our standard chassis has been put. Now, after most careful designing and exacting tests, we are able to offer the Ford One-Ton truck to meet this demand.

The Ford truck is supplied as a chassis only. This permits the purchaser to mount any one of the many body styles specially designed for the Ford truck, and already on the market, and he can select it to meet the individual needs of his business.

Price $750 f.o.b. Ford, Ont.

Elegance.

A professional deviser of interior elegance—a woman who always considered the appearance and antecedents of her clients — had planned and furnished the boudoiresque room on a carte-blanche order, according to Judge. The result revealed something of grace in forms and warmth in color. Rose, the happy occupant, was dressing; Stella, a familiar, had come in to congratulate — for had they not been companions in the theatre?—while really she envied. Rose, rattled on with the old-time freedom of companionship. As she donned her ten-thousand-dollar rope of pearls the string broke and the costly pearls parted company. "Gee!" she exclaimed, "there goes me beads!"

GOT WET FEET TOOK AWFUL COLD

COULD NOT SLEEP FOR COUGH

A bad cold accompanied by a distressing cough that keeps you awake at night is most aggravating, and unless it is attended to at once may develop into something very serious.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you should take. It heals the mucous surfaces, relieves oppression and tightness of the chest, removes the accumulation of phlegm, quiets the most obstinate and distressing coughs, and secures rest and sleep at night, not only to the sufferer, but to others whose rest would be otherwise broken.

Mrs. Ezekiel Acker, Lake Pleasant, N.S., writes: "I got wet feet and took an awful cold; could not sleep at night, and would do nothing but cough. My husband got me a bottle of medicine, but it was not worth bringing home. I was going to call the doctor in when a friend asked me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told her I had little faith in it, but she urged me to get a bottle. I did, and I must say that of all the medicine I ever took, it is the best, and relieved me the quickest of anything I ever saw."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CANADA'S PULPWOOD.

An Industry That Has Grown by Leaps and Bounds.

The pulp and paper industry has expanded very rapidly in Canada during the past ten years and it appears that Canada is destined to become perhaps the leading country in the world in the manufacture of pulp and paper products from wood. This is largely because of our extensive natural resources of water-powers and suitable tree species. It is important to point out the opportunities and responsibilities for Canadian engineers in this technical industry. The consumption of paper increases so rapidly from year to year in the more highly developed countries that there is no indication of slackening development, at least for some years to come. Canada now has a total of about 90 mills many of which are large and of modern design. The export figures for the calendar year 1916 show that pulpwood, wood pulp and paper have increased to nearly half of the total export value (approximately $100,000,000) of all forest products with the exception of the small proportion of specially manufactured articles.

The soft woods are the most important species for paper-making, spruce and balsam fir accounting for the bulk of the woods used with hemlock, jack-pine, tamarack and other conifers coming into more extensive use. Poplar and basswood representing the "soft hardwoods" are valuable for making soda pulp and a variety of hardwoods such as birch and maple are used in smaller quantity. In 1915 the total reported pulpwood consumption amounted to 1,405,826 cords with an average value of $6.71 per cord. In addition Canada exported 949,714 cords of pulpwood, which quantity has remained fairly constant for several years while the consumption of pulpwood in Canada has rapidly increased.

The groundwood process is the simplest method of manufacture, involving the wet grinding of pulpwood blocks. In 1915 this process accounted for 52.9 per cent. of the total pulpwood consumption. An important direct use of groundwood pulp is in the manufacture of wallboard such as ordinary "Beaver Board" and the thicker "Insulite" board used for insulating cold storage rooms and refrigerator cars. Fibreware, represented by indurated pails and tubs, moulded egg cases and pressed milk bottles impregnated with paraffin, is composed mainly of groundwood pulp. Paper pie plates arec ut and pressed from sheets of this pulp.

The sulphite process is the most important of the chemical processes and in 1915 used 33.5 per cent. of the total pulpwood. The wood is chipped and steamed in large digesters with a solution of calcium (and magnesium) bisulphite containing free sulphurous acid, which dissolves most of the lignin and other non-cellulose material, amounting to about one-half of the dry weight of the wood. Production of sulphite pulp has now reached about 1,000 tons per day, over half of which is used in the manufacture of paper in Canada. An important development is the increase in manufacture of bleached sulphite pulp for high-grade papers.

Newsprint paper is by far the most important manufactured product in the pulp and paper industry and is essentially a mixture of about 75 parts of groundwood pulp and 25 parts of sulpite pulp with suitable loading, sizing and coloring materials. Canadian production now totals about 2,100 tons per day which is now over half the production of the United States. Only a small proportion is needed for Canadian newspapers so that about 89 per cent. is available for export chiefly to the United States. Other products made by mixing groundwood and sulphite pulps are hanging paper (wall paper), the cheaper grades of wrapping paper and book paper, container board for paper boxes, liners for cars and boxes.

Sulphite pulp in the unbleached or bleached state is used for making many papers of the higher grades including print paper, book and writing tissues and wax paper.

Another "Profiteer."

L'Evenement of Quebec says: "Le Devoir is indignant over the alleged war profiteers, and because, while poor devils die on the battlefield, others become rich. Our confrere, however, forgets that one of the worst profiteers of the war is Mr. Henri Bourassa himself. Indeed, Mr. Bourassa, since he returned to this country, at the beginning of the war, thanks to the protection of the British fleet, has never ceased denouncing England, France, and, in fact, all the allied nations. At each access of rage he has put his writings in volumes, selling them at so much the copy. Le Devoid is moving heaven and earth against the allies, and is treating as outlaws the diplomats who have espoused our cause. Then he puts this stuff in brochures and sells them, filling his safe with the proceeds. Is he, therefore, not a war profiteer?"

Soldiers' Voted Union.

"The result of the elections in Canada has given the greatest satisfaction, and has created the greatest enthusiasm amongst all ranks of the corps," according to Lt.-Gen. A. W. Currie, officer commanding the Canadian Corps in France, in a letter to Mr. Norman Somerville, president of the Empire Club. The letter was an acknowledgment of a resolution to him recently passed at a general meeting of the club.

"There were many who professed that they were very nervous as to the outcome," he continues, "but to those of us who have daily witnessed for the past three years deeds of the noblest valor, have seen men sacrificing all, even life itself, for the love of home and country, the result was never in doubt. We knew that fathers and mothers of Canadian heroes would keep faith with the living and with the dead as well. Fully 98 per cent. of the corps voted, and I am quite certain 90 per cent. of these cast their vote for the Union Government. We have every confidence that a Government so thoroughly endorsed by the people of Canada would appreciate to the full its responsibility."

Some Important Parliaments

THE extraordinary character of the Parliament now assembled, together with the extraordinary circumstances under which it is meeting, are a reminder that it has often been the fate of Governments in this new land to assemble in their legislative halls under strenuous circumstances. In 1791 we see the French-Canadian deputies gathering in Quebec, freed from military rule and granted the right of beginning their own self-government. They must have come forth from their distant parishes with swelling hearts. They were citizens with greater powers than had been known under French kings. At the same time the members of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada were assembling at Newark on the Niagara river. They were United Empire Loyalists and other Britishers, more or less familiar with responsible government. They hailed with delight the promise of the Colonial Secretary that "a perfect image and transcript of the British Government and Constitution was to be set up in the province." But immediately, as the Legislative Council proceeded to be a real House of Commons, the so-called image changed its face. Instead of party government it was to be patriarchal, where the governor took his own advice on critical matters and ruled very much as if the staff was not to pass from his hand. The intention indeed was good but in practice the results were unfortunate. It added another racy chapter to the story of our constitutional history.

Then followed a full half century of turmoil, culminating in the Act of Union in 1841. On June 14th of that year the first Parliament of United Canada met at Kingston. There were forty-two members from each province. Canada East and Canada West were now the official names until they were changed at Confederation to Quebec and Ontario. It was with mingled feelings that so many representatives came together to try the experiment of legislative union. Those from the east were mindful that since the rebellion they had been refused the right of an assembly. They had therefore no voice in making the change. The Council, which was chiefly English, took it upon themselves to vote in favor of the Union.

One of the most important Parliaments was that which assembled in Montreal in the spring of 1848. A not contest had brought a strong Reform majority to the House. In Canada East the cry was "Give us recompense for the losses of the rebellion as Canada West had been dealt with." Lafontaine carried the bill which provided for rebellion losses. In opposition a furious agitation arose among those who claimed that rebels were to be compensated as well as innocent sufferers. Everywhere pressure was brought to bear upon the governor to get his veto. He saw the dangers of the opposite course but also knew that to override the decision of Parliament was to turn back the hands of the clock to the old days of autocracy. He, therefore, gave his protection to the rule of the people, at the cost of being mobbed himself and seeing the Parliament buildings burned. It was a stormy victory.

In 1854 another shake-up had taken place at the polls. The sessions of Parliament had been held at Toronto and Quebec alternately, with some new and strong members added. There was William Hume Blake, the father of men who later shone in the same arena. George Brown had appeared with the Globe as his personal organ. Francis Hincks, the lifelong friend of Baldwin, had won a leading place. The old ministry had tired of service and the elections had been fought out in a three-cornered contest. Hincks represented the Government, MacNab the Conservative Opposition, and George Brown was the leading spirit in a sort of Protestant-Radical-Reform Party. When the House assembled the third section forsook their former Reform associates and thus felt themselves to be the balance of power.

A notable event happened. Instead of Hincks coming to terms with his disaffected followers, he formed a coalition with his opponents. He gave place, himself, to Sir Allen MacNab and Hon. A. N. Morin, a French-Canadian, succeeded Lafontaine. This was the origin of the famous Liberal-Conservative party. It was composed of moderate men from both parts of the country and had the satisfaction of settling two of the most troublesome questions of the day. The Clergy Reserves were disposed of and Seigniorial Tenure was abolished.

But the greatest of all Parliaments up to this time was that which met in Ottawa, the new capital of the Dominion, after Confederation in 1867. It was another coalition. The union of parties were successful in forming an alliance with the Maritime Provinces and joining all into a federal scheme.

Space forbids reference to other historic Parliaments. But all will agree that they all fade in comparison with that which is now convened as a Coalition, with "Win-the-War" as its chief policy. There are peculiar features about the present session. As in '67 there is a real opposition and it is led by the great, old parliamentarian, Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The old bugbear of racial misunderstanding and division is painfully apparent. Never before was the situation more acute. Hence the issues will be carefully followed and the fortunes of statesmen and parties watched with interest.

Instead of using soda for washing clothes, add one teaspoonful of turpentine. This not only saves soda, but also coal, as the clothes take less time to boil.

Miraculous Virtue.

Gaze thou in the face of thy brother, in those eyes where plays the lambent fire of kindness, or in those where rages the lurid conflagration of anger; feel how thy own so quiet soul is straightway involuntarily kindled with the like, and ye blaze and reverberate on each other, till it is all one limitless, confluent flame (of embracing love, or of deadly, grasping hate); and then say what miraculous virtue goes out of man into man.

Starting the Clock.

If a clock refuses to run after being wound owing to the need of cleaning try this: Roll a bit of cloth, tie it well so it cannot unroll and saturate it with coal oil. Place the roll in the bottom of the clock, well out of the way of the pendulum. After the fumes of the oil have had time to do their work—say from ten to twelve hours—wind and start the clock, and if nothing is broken it will run.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

German Raiding Operation Was a Failure—Prisoners Taken By the French

WAR OFFICE REPORT

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, April 20.— German troops last night launched a raiding operation against the French lines in the region of Hangarden Santerre, south-east of Amies. The effort was a failure the War Office announced to-day. The French took prisoners in this location. The artillery has been active along the southern battle line between Lashigny and Noyon.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

The Germans attempted a raid last night in the region of Hangarden Santerre. Prisoners, including an officer, remained in our hands. On both sides artillery fighting continued to be very active between Lassigny and Noyon, During the night French detachments carried out a number of raids. At various points along the front, especially north-west and east of Rheims, in the Champagne, in the sector of Juvincourt and near the Heights of the Meuse. The French took a number of pirsoners. The Germans made several of these attempts west of Butte Dumesnil and in the Woevre region. All were repulsed. Everywhere else the night was calm.

OBJECTIVES GAINED.

The British gained all their objectives in their counter attack in Flanders, advancing their defences at Givenchy and Festubert and re-establishing their positions. In sharp fighting south-east of Robecq the British drove back German attacking parties.

THE GERMANS HAVE GAINED NOTHING THE ALLIES COULD NOT AFFORD TO LOSE

Allies Are Now in a Better Position For An Overpowering Offensive Than They Were One Month Ago—Allies Have Been Able to Inflict Losses More Than Commensurate With the Value of Positions Sacrificed.

TO-DAY'S WAR SUMMARY

(Associated Press War Summary.)

NEW YORK, April 20.—Active fighting operations have halted for the time being while each side prepares for the next onslaught. It is not improbable that the Germans again will attack either in Picardy or in Flanders Artois, while over every move they make hangs the menace of the Allied reserve army and a counter offensive. Unfavourable weather has settled down upon the northern battle field, but a lull in the German attacks is due more probably to their appalling losses, which in the past ten days have caused such depletion in their organizations that offensive tactics must wait till the arrival of new troops.

NEW TROOPS.

The enemy is moving up new troops and supplies along the Lys River and these are being bombarded heavily by the British. Germany probably still has many reserve divisions, and there is little doubt that her masters will use up the last division in their attempts to crush either the British or the French. The British have borne the brunt of the present campaign, which will end its first month to-day, and their line is still unbroken. The enemy has not been able to pierce it and roll up one side as he apparently intended.

CANNOT HALT.

The Germans cannot halt now if they would attempt to crush the Allies while they themselves yet have strength. Field Marshal Haig's Fabian tactis have been more than a match for the strong head-on rushes of the Germans. In the month of the heaviest fighting of the war the Germans have gained nothing the Allies could not afford to lose, when at the same time they could inflict losses more than commensurate with the value of the positions sacrificed. In fact the Allies now are in a better position for an overwhelming offensive more than they were on March 21st.

NEW YORK, April 20.—Field Marshal Haig's troops took the aggressive last night on the southern side of the Lys battle front, with quick and decisive results. They compelled the Germans to give up small bits of ground in the Givenchy-Festubert sector, which were all the enemy had to show for his costly all day attacks of Thursday on this front.

Counter Blow.

The British counter blow resulted in the attainment of all objectives sought and in the complete re-establishment of the British line as it existed before the Germans struck on Thursday. The only offensive action on the German side reported from the British front was in the Robecq region near the westerly tip of the Lys salient, southwest of Merville The enemy gained no success.

PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY

The local Red Cross Society was pleased recently to hear from Lieut. Vivian Fessenden, who, after nearly three years' imprisonment in Germany, is at present in Holland. Lieut. Fessenden has been regularly receiving the Red Cross parcels and expresses a deep appreciation of the work of the Society for the prisoners of war.

The following is an extract from a letter written by him, Christmas Day, 1917, at Holyminden, Germany, and received here in Peterborough by Mr. Fessenden, April 13th, 1918:

"I hope mother will tell Miss Morrow, who, as I take it, is the Secretary for Peterborough, how much I and all of us appreciate their work. A subscription was got up for the Red Cross Society yesterday in this camp and the officers gave, I believe, more than £2200, of which £300 goes to the Canadian section from the Canadian officers."

The following is one of many cards of acknowledgment received this month from prisoners of war for parcels sent by the Red Cross Society:

February 20, 1918.

Dear Friend,—Just a few lines to thank you for the interest you all have taken in sending me parcels of food, etc., for so long. I am sure you must all be working very hard for all our interests. I had a letter from Winnipeg and they tell me that a returned prisoner from this country was lecturing and he spoke very highly of the good work you were doing, and we were all pleased to hear he was doing so.

Yours truly,

PTE. ALFRED DAWE.

The Red Cross workroom in the Public Library will be open as usual Wednesday afternoon. It is hoped that a large number of workers will be present to make the supplies so urgently needed at the present time. The Wool Committee also will be at the Library on Wednesday to give out wool and receive the finished socks.

Several of the Red Cross caps and armlets which were used by workers in the booths at the Motor Show have not yet been returned. Will those who still have them in their possession kindly bring them next Wednesday afternoon to the workroom in the Public Library and give them to the Secretary, Miss L. Davidson?

It is requested that all returns from Motor Show tickets be made to the Secretary as soon as possible. Will the few who have not done so, kindly attend to this at once?

Germans Moving Troops From The Russian Front

Several Recently Transferred Divisions Have Been Identified on the Western Front

FILLING UP GAPS

(Special to Examiner.)

With the French Army in the Field, April 20.—The Germans are steadily transferring fresh divisions from the Russian front to the French front, filling up the gaps in their ranks caused by their heavy losses. The French staff has identified a division which was in Ukrane in February, one which was in Sarrebourg, early in April, one which was at the Russian front on March 6th, one which was in the Comer region on April 6th, one of Uhlans which was in Zodrow April 1st; one which was in Sarrebourg on April 7th, and one which departed from Foscani, March th, arrived at Metz March 15th, at Hirson, 1st April, and is now in the line in the region of Hangard-En-Santerre.

THE WALK EASY'S SEVEN DAY'S SALE

The Walk-Easy Shoe Store, just north of the Market Arcade, has begun a Seven-Days' Sale, at rock-bottom reductions, including the most part of its new stock. Many lines have become too heavy, and must ve reduced, as quickly as possible. A large collection of the most stylish spring and summer models in spring footwear for men, women and children are included in this sale, and, according to the cut prices advertised, the reductions range from one-quarter off to one-third off the former prices. When stocks get too heavy it is a sensible thing to offer special reductions in prices that will bring in the ready cash rather than hold on to the goods. Watch for further particulars of this sale every day.

A FRENCH MONK IS BLAMED FOR THE FORGERY

AMSTERDAM, April 20.—A French monk, who acts as the Empress confesser, is blamed for the "forgery" in Emperor Charles now famous letter to Prince Sixtus De Bourbon, according to despatches received from Vienna to-day.

The Emperor, it was stated, wrote the letter in German and gave it to the monk for translation into French. The monk is alleged to have inserted the word "justified" in regard to the reference to France's claims to Alsace. The monk then took the letter to Switzerland, it was said.

British Casualties

Canadian Press:

LONDON, April 20.—British casualties reported during the week ending to-day totalled 12,368, divided as follows: Killed or dead of wounds, officers 575, men 1,639; wounded or missing, officers 2,173, men 7,981. The casualties reported for this week are approximately half as large again as those reported in the preceding week. Although heavy fighting has now been in progress for a month, however, the lists have not begun to approach in size those of last year in the months of active operations when the British were on the offensive.

Flying Men Will Have To Train Here Next Winter

American Training Fields Will Be All Filled Up

(Special to The Examiner.)

FORT WORTH, Texas, April 20.—In an interview granted your correspondent as he left here for Canada, Brigadier-General Howe, Commander of the Royal Air Force in Canada said: "There is not now a probability that the Royal Flying Corps will return to the South next winter. This is not because we are discouraged or displeased with the results of our winter's training, but it is because it does not appear now that a reciprocal arrangement with the American Government similar to that which we have just completed will be at all practical for next year. Already most of the American training fields are well filled, and by next winter they will have every instructor, every available space, and every machine operating at full capacity training their own cadets.

"Right now everything in both Canada and the United States are operating on capacity basis. Our fields in Canada are filled and we cannot train American cadets here this summer as we did last summer under a guarantee for training privileges in the South of the United States next winter."

THE MONTHLY MEETING OF THE LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

Able Address by Mrs. Boucher on the 'Duties of Citizenship" —National Council Officere—Treasurer's Report —Want All Boarding Houses Licensed

The principal peature of the monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women yesterday was an address by Mrs. Boucher on the "Duties of Citizenship" in which the speaker emphasized the power of individuality in the state. Following the address an interesting discussion on Citizenship was held among the twenty-eight ladies who attended, and in addition a number of helpful ideas were gained.

National Council Officers.

Mrs. Harstone, the president, reviewed the nomination of officers made at the quarterly meeting of the National Executive. The nominations were endorsed by the Local Council.

Assessment Fee.

The assessment of the Local Councils which amounts to $66 to be devoted to the Council aid to the National Treasurer, will be paid by the Local Council and $35.00 forwarded forthwith; the balance to be met later.

Treasurer's Report.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $40 in the bank.

"Year Book."

Mrs. Harstone will order 18 copies of the Council of Women's year book.

Report from National Executive.

Mrs. W. R. Morris who attended the meeting of the National Executive in Ottawa recently gave a resume of the business done and resolutions adopted. It was urged by the Council of Women that there be a Federal Department of Health, which could come more adequately with the social evil that licencing of boarding houses be made a law. In this matter the National Executive sought the confirmation of Local Councils on the evil connected with some non-licensed boarding houses.

That guilty men in social evil cases be punished. In this matter the women went straight to the Government and other matters is under consideration.

The matter of urging the advisability of giving aid in the question of food supply was brought up and lastly the question which has already come into force of the giving of empty lots over for production purposes to any man who will work the land.

Four strong societies of women from the west were received, and Mrs. Morris was surprised at the grasp and grounding these women had on public matters.

THE PRICE OF CIGARETTES TAKE UPWARD TREND

Some of the Ten Cent Lines Will Sell at Two For 25c.

The local tobacco dealers received word to-day that the price of cigarettes would be raised 30 per cent. Tobacco-producing land is very suitable for sugar beets and other such vegetables, and, in accordance with the vigorous greater production movement, the production of tobacco is likely to be limited in the future. Nothing has been done in connection with bulk tobacco, therefore it will be sold at the same price.

Player's, Sweet Caporal and other 10c cigarettes will now sell for two packages for 25c. The 15c lines, like Mogul, Murad, Benson and Hedges, and Craven, will sell for 18c. There are several exceptions to this increase, including Black Cat cigarettes, which will remain at ten cents a package.

Yeotes Bros. stated that cigars were taking a jump of from $5 to $10 a thousand. They will not, however, advance their tobacco prices until Monday.

The above price increase has been announced by the Imperial Tobacco Company. It affects their product only. It is expected that other companies will follow suit.

WOMEN ON THE FARMS.

Side by side with Lloyd George's appeal for more Canadians for the firing line comes the message from Lord Rhondda, British Food Controller: "We cannot achieve victory without food. There never was a time when it was more needed."

The Canada Food Board adds that the "gravity of the food situation cannot be overstated."

In view o. these circumstances, and the fact that the drastic regulations to be adopted by the government to supply reinforcements for the firing line will mean the taking away of many men from the farms, the importance of supplementing the supply of farm labour will be readily recognized. In this connection it is interesting to note that the Director of Women's Farm Work for the province reports that the Ontario farmer is realizing that women's labour is going to be a valuable asset and the more enterprising are employing capable experienced girls. Instances reported by the director in lude that of a 600 acre farm at Bronte, where four women have been engaged, one to run a tractor plough, while a large vegetable and dairy farm is taking on six girls for general farm work, and a dairy farm at Niagara-on-the-Lake is engaging five others for dairy work exclusively.

THE NEW REGULATIONS.

The new censorship regulations have given our pedantic contemporary an opportunity to gloat, inasmuch as the Review takes the attitude that through the changes effected, all criticism of the Government must automatically cease. Fortunately for the freedom of the press, and for the good of Canada in general, the official interpretation of the regulations will undoubtedly be a great deal broader minded than that of the Review.

The latter groups under the heading "the copper head press," all journals who have ventured to criticize the administration of the Military Service Act, who have dared to preach the gospel of a square deal for the returned soldier, who have advocated better business methods in the department at Ottawa, so that soldiers' families may get their allowances without unreasonable delays, who have pointed out that the loss of Hon. T. W. Crothers would not be as serious a matter as the resignation of Mr. W. F. Connor, who have pleaded for better conditions on Canadian transports, so that wounded men should not be herded like cattle in vermin-infected holds; who have, in fact, tried to suggest anything that would be an improvement on present conditions. Evidently, the Review believes that the regulations are designed to line all Canadian newspapers up with itself and the Toronto News, to sing the praises of the Government on every possible occasion.

Our contemporary's view, however, is evidently not very generally shared. Witness the Toronto Globe's opinion:

"The Secretary of State will have noticed by this time that the Press does not take kindly to his new censorship regulations. They will have to be applied with great discretion or there will be trouble. Canada's soil is not congenial to Prussianism."

THE MILITARY SERVICE ACT.

"There can be no doubt that the men available in Class 1, except in the province of Quebec, are at the point of exhaustion, and that if the stream of reinforcements for the troops overseas is to be maintained there is no alternative but to call out the other classes."

This significant statement is from the report of the Military Service Council on the ope rations of the Military Service Act up to the end of March and shows conclusively that even if the urgent call from Lloyd George for speedy reinforcements had not been received, the government would soon have been freed to take some action to make the working of the Act more effective.

The figures presented by the Military Service Council are decidedly interesting. They show that of all the men of the first class who registered under the act only 7.86 per cent., a total of 31,295 had been put in uniform, and of these 11,059 reported for service before their class was called, so that the men actually drafted numbered under 20,000.

The failure of the Act to get speedy results in Quebec is also shown by the report, the following figures being illuminative: For London district the number of men secured up to March 30 was 2,583 or 9.59 per cent. of the registration; for Toronto district 7,351, or 11.91 per cent; for Kingston district, 3,442, or 8.22 per cent.; for Montreal district, 2,608, or 3.92 per cent.; for Quebec district, 660, or 1.64 per cent.; for Halifax district, 1,732, or 5.90 per cent.; for St. John district, 1,507 or 8.94 per cent.; for Winnipeg district, 4,175, or 16.88 per cent.; for Vancouver district, 2,902, or 11.70 per cent.; for Regina district, 2,611, or 5.99 per cent.; for Calgary district, 1,634, or 5.73 per cent.

LEST WE FORGET.

"Congratulate you most warmly on splendid and gallant way in which the Canadian Division fought during the last few days north of Ypres. Sir John French says their conduct was magnificent throughout. The Dominion will be justly proud."—Cable from King George.

"The Canadians had many casualties, but their gallantry and determination undoubtedly saved the situation."—Official British War Office Communique.

"Canada has every reason to be proud of the gallantry of her sons who have nobly done their part in this great struggle for the liberties and honour of our Empire, against the tyranny and injustic of Germans. As an English officer I am proud of our Canadian comrades and feel that they have brought honour to the British army a s well as to themselves."—Message from the Duke of Connaught.

"I wish to express to you and to the Canadian troops my admiration for the gallant stand and fight they have made. They performed a most brilliant and valuable service last night and again this morning. I have reported their splendid behaviour to the Secretary of State and have a reply from him saying how highly their gallantry and determination in a difficult position are appreciated in England."— Message from Sir John French.

The reproduction of these remarkable tributes to the valour of the first Canadian Division is timely in view of the fact that Monday is the third anniversary of the 2nd Battle of Ypres and that the event is being commemorated to-day and to-morrow by the Great War Veterans.

Remarkable as have been the other achievements of the Canadian forces in the great war, the second battle of Ypres will have a hold upon the memory of the people of Canada. It represented the testing time for the Canadian troops and for the fortitude of the re latives at home as well, for it was on this occasion that the world learned the worth of the Canadian soldiers and that the people of Canada realized that great achievements in war are carried out at a heavy cost in flesh and blood.

The narrative of the battle need not be recounted at length. Many of the men who took part in it are, thank God, home to tell the glorious story for themselves and some of them will be in the procession of Veterans to St. John's church to-morrow morning.

A quotation from the Canadian's Eye Witness's description of the battle may not be out of place, however:

The story of the second battle of Ypres is the story of how the Canadian Division, enormously outnumbered—for they had in front of them at least four divisions, supported by immensely heavy artillery—with a gap still existing, though reduced, in their lines, and with dispositions made hurriedly under the stimulus of critical danger, fought through the day, and through the night, and then through another day and night; fought under their officers until, as happened to so many, those perished gloriously, and then fought from the impulsion of sheer valour because they came from fighting stock."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"We have lost territory, but we have lost nothing vital."—Lloyd George.

Sir Sam Hughes says he is still proud of J. Wesley Allison —no accounting for taste.

The official figures given out by Premier Borden in the House yesterday, show that of the Canadian forces actually sent overseas, 45 per cent. were born in Canada, 33 per cent. in England and nearly 10 per cent. in Scotland.

In their big engagements last year the Canadians sustained no fewer than 58,433 casualties, killed, wounded or missing. The losses at Vimy Ridge were 13 461; during the fighting that followed during the next month, 10,434; at Hill 70 in August, 10,008, and at Passchendaele Ridge 24,530.

Col. Mowbray, of the Canadian Pay Department, London, has arrived in Canada to secure, it is announced, more complete co-ordination between the pay office officers in Ottawa and London. Returned soldiers will agree that it is needed.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

AS AN ALTERNATIVE.

(Rochester Post-Express.)

At any rate, if von Hindenburg's soldiers do not accomplish anything else in the new offensive on the western front, they can heroically destroy all the fruit trees in the war zone while retreating.

YEARNING FOR A FIGHT.

(New York Sun.)

The British officers and the Americans who have been operating in the European waters since our entrance into the war, will welcome a test of strength with the German fleet. They have been preparing a long time for a raid out of Kiel and have been yearning for a good sea fight.

IN DIRE STRAITS.

(Springfield Republican.)

The present "pitiable poverty" of the former dowager empress of Russia, is well shown by the statement that she is reduced to only five servants. But that means very straightened circumstances for one who had been accustomed to hundreds of them all her life. Poverty the world over is a relative matter. One servant for the majority of people on earth means affluence.

THE CRISIS.

(London Advertiser.)

Military necessity has proved that the military service act as applied up to the present time, was far from adequate to meet the demand for men. It was necessary almost to scrap the measure in order to meet the situation, or at least to alter it most materially. The call for men now comes to all of those previously exempted for any reason excepting physical disqualification, and, in addition, men over 19 at the present time are to be ordered to report. It is estimated that 9,000 men in this district will immediately feel the effect of the twist which the Government has given to the screws.

In this hour of grave danger there is little or no fault finding. The call for help comes not from the Borden Government, but from the men on the firing line through the British premier, Lloyd George. Better that every man who can shoulder a gun should be taken than that the German chances of victory should be increased. The Borden Government did not apply conscription in a manner to secure the men required at a time when it professed to see the very crisis with which it now must cope.

THE O'CONNOR MATTER.

(The Globe.)

"It is a pity," says the Mail and Empire, "that the valuable services of Mr. O'Connor were lost through Mr. Crothers' refusal to give him control of his sub-department. Mr. O'Connor, as the head, was entitled to control its personnel, and, in turn, should have been responsible to the Minister." Our contemporary is right. Even on the correspondence as made public, the Minister's position needs explanation, but the public want the whole situation sifted. They are not willing to lose the valuable services of Mr. O'Connor on a petty matter of this kind.

MIRACULOUS CURE WONDERFUL REMEDY

Study this extract from an artcile dated November 20th, 1915, on "The Adulteration of Food and Durgs"—

Swaizema is a blood purifier and tonic builder of extraordinary merit. There came to my notice while in Kitchener a case in which a most miraculous cure was effected through this wonderful remedy. A gentleman had developed a running ulcerated sore. For two years eminent specialists had treated, at enormous expense, the injured limb without success. He was induced to try Swaizema, which resulted in an absolute cure—and this with the purchase of two bottles only.

30,000 Men Is Estimate Of Conscripts Available Under The New Order In Council

First Call Will Be Young Men of 20, 21 and 22 Years Who Will Be Summoned About May 1st-Others to Be Called Later If Needed.

BECAME LAW TO-DAY

First class to be called — Unmarried men and childless widowers of 20, 21, and 22 years.

Second class, to be called later if needed — Men of 19 and 23 years.

First summons about May 1st.

Expected levy of men — 30,000.

OTTAWA, April 20.—It is stated to-day that upwards of 66,000 men will be affected by the cancellation of exemptions under the Order-in-Council approved by both Houses of Parliament last night. Many of the men already exempted in these classes will, of course, be found physically unfit, but it is thought that thirty thousand men will be made available under legislation approved by Parliament last night. Details of the calling up of these men are not yet perfected, but it will be done early in May.

OTTAWA, April 19.—Parliament has endorsed the Order-in-Council under which the Government takes power to abandon the principle of selection underlying the Military Service Act. In both the Senate and the House of Commons the resolution embodying the Order-in-Council was adopted to-day. In consequence, that order will be proclaimed to-morrow by publication in the Canada Gazette and will become operative. Its publication will be followed by the message of a second Order-in-Council calling to the colours men of 20, 21 and 22 years of age, who have hitherto been exempted from military service or who have been seeking such exemption. It was stated a few days ago that the first recruits to be summoned would be unmarried men and childless widowers between the ages of 20 and 23 years, both inclusive. Sir Robert Borden, however, announced in his speech in the Commons to-day that the rst call would be for unmarried men and childless widowers from 20 to 22 years of age, and that later, if the present demand for reinforcements continued, youths from 19 years and 23 would be ordered to report for service.

The Prime Minister estimated that in each class to be called 10,000 recruits would be secured. That is to say, if all the available men from 19 to 23 years of age were enrolled in the Expeditionary Forces, 50,000 woud be added to the strength of that army.

Called Up in May.

Under existing conditions there are recruits sufficient only to meet the requirements overseas until July 1st. In the event of an attack by the Germans in force those reinforcements may be exhausted by June 1st. It is stated, however, that under the Order-in-Council just approved the first men summoned will begin to join the depot battalions about May 1st.

"The exemptions of 1917 are being abolished," said Sir Robert Borden, "but the situation on the Western front is serious and the Government knows of no other means by which it can be met."

Stern Task Demands Men.

"It may be said that these regulations will interfere with production. I hope they will not seriously interfere with production, for I realize that production is necessary in order that our troops may be supplied and the civil population fed. But production alone will not suffice. The stern task remains to the Allied nations of overcoming the enemy on the field of battle, and what are we to say to our men at the front? They have gone out to fight for their country, they are there overseas, the need is urgent, so urgent that without this Order-in-Council I do not believe we could provide them with reinforcements after the first day of July next, and if the attack comes, as it may come, within the next two weeks we might be left without any reinforcements after the first day of June.

No Shifting of Responsibility.

"I have heard the statement that we should rely on other countries to provide fighting men and further reinforcements. I have seen those men at the front, and I can realize the impression that would be made upon them if the people of Canada here at home, who are the second battleline that Canada holds, if we should say to them, 'We will devote all our energies in the future to production, and leave you to shift for yourselves with such reinforcements as you may get from the British Islands or from the United States of America?' For not one moment I think would the people of this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific stand for any such policy as that."

Charges Breach of Faith.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier accused the Government of breaking faith with the farmers after telling them that they would not be conscripted. They had witnessed the spectacle of the Minister of Militia trying to get exemptions. The Government was a house divided against itself, one Minister wanting soldiers and the other wanting farmers.

"If you take these men from activities connected with food production, what is the result?" asked Sir Wilfrid. "You take from the active work of food production 30,000, 40,000 or 50,000 men. What is it best to do? Shall we take these men from civil life and make them soldiers, although they cannot do any fighting for at least four or five months, or shall we leave them in civil life, where they can at once engage in the production of food for the Allies. Under the circumstances there are no two ways of looking at the question. If you want to help England in the present emergency, leave these men to produce the food of which she stands so greatly in need. That is the way I approach this question, and that is the way I think we should approach it."

No Humbug! Lift off Corns

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift a corn or callus off with fingers.

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn and instantly, yes, immediately, all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it out, root and all, with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, just seem to shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on your dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

Navigation On Otonabee River Opened To-day

The steamers Rainbow and Geneva arrived at the street car wharf this morning at 10.30 a.m. The Rainbow came from Birdsall and the Geneva from Gore's Landing. Both boats came without a cargo, but are going to take flour and feed and groceries when they return at 4.30. Capt. Burnett, of the "Rainbow" stated that the current is very strong. The ice did not break up in Rice Lake until Thursday, except east of Ferguson Island, where it broke up over a week ago. Both steamers from now on will make their regular trips every Saturday. Last year navigation did notopen until the twenty-seventh of April a week later, when the "Geneva" brought up a cargo of hogs. The farmers along the river are complaining of the time of the steamers, saying that by the old time they would have to get up at 3.30 a.m. in order to get their produce ready for the boat.

The river locks will probably be opened in the course of a few days. This has been delayed this season on account of the force of the current, which is at present unusual, and the ice is at present unbroken.

A DIVORCE GRANTED.

After many years of patient suffering one can be divorced from corns by applying Putnam's Corn Extractor which acts in 24 hours without pain. Refuse a substitute because "Putnam's" is the remedy that is safe and painless. 25c per bottle at all dealers.

The Spring Fair

Closing as brilliantly as it opened, the spring fair is now a thing of the past in reality, but will remain active in the memory of the hundreds who thronged through the hall during the five days it remained open. In all nights, perhaps Friday was the most lively, largely on account of the awarding of the prizes won in the raffles and competitions, three winners to be announced later.

Last night one feature which left considerable enjoyment to the occasion was the solos by Mr. Ted Hanrahan, "The Veteran's Song" and "Sussex by the Sea." Both number were enthusiastically received.

Prize Winners.

The beautiful picture donated by Mrs. Peter Simon, Queen street, to the spring fair, was won by Mr. Charles Matthews of Brownlown.

The handsome hand-painted cushion donated by Miss Annie Simon, was won by Mr. Michael Nearey, 333 Rubidge street.

"Keep-A-Pig" Advocates Reckon Not With High Price Of Piggies

Sixteen Dollars a Pair For Six Months Varieties is Almost Prohibitive — Maple Syrup Fairly Plentiful on Market To-day and Potatoes Were Abundant.

EGGS 35 CENTS A DOZEN

The prices of young pigs on the market this morning left the impression that the "keep-a-pig" movement will find its greatest obstacle in getting the pig. Several three-months-old specimens were said to be worth $11 each, and the six weeks varieties were quoted at $16 a pair. Only munitioneers could consider an investment of this extent, and they would probably be hampered by the demands of their occupations and their automobiles.

Eggs were down to a flat thirty-five cents, although some of the women upstairs mentioned thirty-six cents.

Butter at 55 cents was featureless, and maple syrup at 60c a quart searched the crowds for those persons, easily parted from their money, have been particularly designated as lacking in wisdom. The maple syrup season incidentally has stretched out considerably longer than expected. Supplies were quite plentiful this morning, but the end is here, the farmers said.

Potatoes were as plentiful at $2 and $1.90 a bag, and seed Cobblers at $1.50 were also freely offered. This staple is just as bearish in its market influence as the predictions last fall indicated. The supply is unusually large, apparently, and far exceeds the demands.

"The little white bean" sold at 25 cents a quart, and several farmers had sacks of them for sale.

GERMANS APPARENTLY HAVE STRUCK A STONE WALL

Nearly Fifty-five Divisions Have been Used by the Enemy in the Flanders Battle Since April 9th —Are Unable to Advance.

BATTLEFIELD SCENES

Ten O'Clock Despatch

(By Wm. Phillip Simms.)
(United Press Service.)

With the British Armies in Flanders, April 20th.—The British and the French are fighting shoulder to shoulder on the Lys battle field.

Von Armin and Von Quast have sacrificed further divisions at the foot of Mont Kemmell, while on the plains south of Mont Roug, Mont Moir and Mont De Cats, Von Eberhardt and Von Stettin apparently have struck a stone wall.

Nearly 55 divisions (660,000 men) have been used in Flanders by the enemy since April 9th, and apparently many more will be needed if the fourth and sixth German armies are to battle on much further. Some of these divisions are too badly battered to go on. Others are physically exhausted. The remainder are tired, are too badly battered to go on, but are pushed on desperately in attempts to penetrate the British lines.

STRIKE ELSEWHERE.

Hindenburg must strike elsewhere, using many of his remaining precious men, to enable him to advance farther in Flanders.

The German high velocity guns are extremely busy on the villages and roads fringing the battlefield, and the bombardment is being increased, as the heavier artillery is being dragged up.

In the Arcadian hill country north of Bailleul, the windmills and thatched cottages are shaking under the concussion. The country folk are gradually deserting their little farms, carrying their belongings. Some linger (not fully comprehending their danger) gazing doggedly at the shells bursting in their yards, and shrapnel blossoming about their hay ricks, while low flying airplanes battle above their vegetable gardens.

CARRIED A DOG.

It makes a lump rise in one's throat to see these poor old people tangled up in the war. I saw a bent old lady toddling along across a battlefield towards a village where geysers of brick dust and smoke and terrific explosions marked the landing of the German shells. She carried a large dog in her arms, with a gingham bib about its neck, like a child. The dog probably was the only living thing she had left to love. Nearby where five little girls laughingly chasing two stubborn snorting goats, while their children were closing the cottage shutters before leaving. Those who stayed too late were forced to leave everything. Soldiers are milking the abandoned cows on the battle fields thrice a day. No gunner's mess is without cream for its coffee.

BLIND GIRL SAVED THE LIVES OF SIXTEEN CHILDREN

(Canadian Press.)

New York, April 20.—Rosa Cohen, 9 years old, and blind, saved the lives of 16 other blind children, at the Blind Babies' Sunshine Home in the Bath Beach section of Brooklyn early to-day. Awakened by the smoke from a fire which started in the kitchen of the home, the girl groped her way through the girls and the boys' rooms on the second floor, aroused each sleeping child and quietly marshalled them into the corridor, later leading them into the courtyard in the rear of the house.

Officials of the Home were not awakened until the children were passing out of the blazing building. Two floors of the Home were burned out.

The Immortal Memory of Saint George

How England's Patron Saint's Day Will Be Observed in Peterborough

Saint George's Day— the Patron Saint of England's day—will be observed in a fitting manner in this city this year.

Next Tuesday will be—as probably all the British world knows—the day dedicated to the noble chivalrous gentleman — martyr and England's patron saint. It has therefore again been considered fitting that a religious service of a national character should be celebrated at 8 p.m. on Tuesday evening next in the parish church of St. John, the Evangelist.

This is not the first service held on this occasion in our fair city. The first of its kind was inaugurated some few years since at the little church in South Peterborough, dedicated to Saint George, and of which the Rev. Jas. Price is Rector. He was the originator, and his service, held on that occasion on the eve of the Saint's day, was attended by the Military, Civil and Borough officials, and by a crowd which was far larger than the capacity of the church.

The observance of this Festival was then transferred, under Mr. Price's auspices, to St. John's Church, a full Festal Evensong being provided by the combined choirs of the Anglican churches, with some notable preacher to tell his hearers the lessons to be learnt from the day. The musical arrangements have been in the capable hands of Mr. R. J. Devey, the indefatigable organist and choirmaster of the church.

This year the day will be observed more than hitherto. The preacher at the Festal Evensong will be his grace the Lord Archbishop of Ontario, who is a very fluent speaker. There will be a special hymn sung on this occasion, written expressly by the talented organist (a friend in London, Eng. of the writer of this notice), Mr. A. E. Harris). Mr. Harris also composed a special tune for the words, but unfortunately time did not admit of this music being reproduced here. Mr. Devey has therefore selected a well known favourite tune in "The Book of Praise" for use with the words.

On Monday evening the Archbishop will hold a reception at 8 p.m. in St. John's schoolhouse, where the parishioners and public persons will be presented to his Lordship.

Festal services will be continued—as is most fitting—on the following Sunday, in the Church of St. George in the south end of the city. The preacher on that occasion will be the Rev. Principal McKim, of Toronto University, who is said to be one of the most fluent preachers in the Dominion.

The following is the ode to St. George to be sung at these festal services:—

St. George of England.

Oh noble martyr, thee we sing
O soldier worthy of the King,
St. George our Patron Saint,
A heathen ruler to defy
And for thy Master—Christ to die
Thou didst not fear nor faint.

Those arms, unstained by coward fear,
Now red with thine own blood appear,
All soiled is thy face;
That bloody robe is whitened now
That soil upon thy noble brow
Shines like a crown of grace.

May we in Jesu's armour dight
Shine in the white-robed Martyr's fight
To reap a life renown.
And militant on earth below,
Thro' Him withstand unghostly foe
And win the Heavenly crown.

To Christ our King all praise be given
The Prince of Martyrs, throned in Heaven
Who suffered for the lost.
To God the Father glory be
And honour, laud and praise to Thee
Oh God the Holy Ghost. Amen.

These arrangements seem to be very fitting, for the solemn services in the churches are public acknowledgments that the civic life and interests of this important city, just as much as the life and personal interests of every individual are under the care and guidance of Almighty God.

The offertory on Tuesday evening will be devoted to the little Church of St. George.

RUNAWAY HORSE SAID TO HAVE BEEN UNTIED.

Ran From Dalhousie Street With Boy on the Seat.

For leaving his horse untied on Dalhousie Street, Walter Hatcher, driver for John Hill, grocer at the corner of Charlotte and George Sts., will make the acquaintance of Police Magistrate Dumble next week. The horse ran away yesterday afternoon, with a boy clinging to the seat. The youngster managed to crawl to the backboard as the waggon was speeded toward the river. There the animal turned north, and at Sherbrook Street the boy managed to drop out unhurt, during a momentary slackening in the speed. After that the horse disappeared up Water Street. The police discovered the fact of the runaway, and they say that the horse was left standing untied.

BILLY COTTON—In "You're in Love," at The Grand next Tuesday.

"You're In Love," Arthur Hammerstein's newest musical comedy creation by the same authors who gave to the public such splendid successes as "Katinka," "High Jinks" and "Firefly," will brighten the way for our local amusement friends at The Grand next Tuesday, April 24, and it is not counting with speculation that the performance will fully satisfy the most exacting desire for a happy blend of scenic beauty, lavish costuming, with an overwhelming amount of catchy tunes and distinguished dancing.

Indeed "You're In Love" enjoyed such a vogue at the New York Casino that everybody in the Metropolis talked about this wonderful Hammerstein success. Several genuine novelties are scheduled, one of which is as startling as it is surprising, and the unusually large company includes Miss Edna Pendleton, Marguerite Strasselle, Alice Johnson, Raymond Crane, W. H. White, Harry T. Hanlin, Ralph Whitehead, Billy Cotton and Maxson and Brown, one of the greatest of all eccentric dancing teams.

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintsman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street.—B. H. Britton, Manager. Phone 258.

This Skin Peeler All The Rage In Society

There is a growing tendency among women of culture and fashion to pay more attention to hygienic means of preserving their charms. The advent of mercolized wax doubtless has been largely responsible for this. This remarkable substance produces complexions so natural in appearance, so magnetically beautiful, artificial complexions are no longer desired. Instead of "doctoring" an offensive skin, the skin is peeled off. The wax peels the skin so gradually, in such fine particles, no discomfort is experienced. The fresher, younger skin beneath, wholly in evidence within a week or two, is lily white, satiny soft and smooth. It's not a patched-over complexion, but a brand new one. That's why mercolized wax has become such a rage among society folk. The wax is put on nights like cold cream and washed off mornings. All druggists have it; one ounce will do.

Artistic Refinement

In Our New

Wall Papers and Draperies

Of wall papers there is a splendid array, varied in type and pattern. If you were born with that decorative sense which craves plain papers, or whether your aesthetic ideas incline to figured wall papers, there is plenty here for your choosing. This season the prevalence is equally divided between artistic plain papers and those of tapestry and soft foliage and floral effects.

Our drapery department is aglow with color, and as usual chintzes which bring into your room the freshness and beauty of Spring herself, are the centre of attraction. It is not difficult to "make over" a room, new draperies and your winter furniture covered with a pretty chintz, and the deed is done.

Interesting Addresses Mark The Opening Of The Girls' Conference

One Hundred and Fifty Workers Attended the Opening Session Which Was Accounted For Last Evening in St. Paul's Church—Address By Miss Thomas.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME

At the opening session of the Leadership and Girls' Work Conference opened last night in St. Paul's board room, the attendance from the city and neighbouring places exceeded all expectationss. About one hundred and fifty Sunday school workers, including most of the clergymen from the city, were present. Mr. Wearing presided.

Good Programme.

A bright programme was presented, between the splendid speeches, including a solo by Mrs. J. H. Renwick and quartette from the Baptist church, Miss Eastwood, Miss Sanderson, Mr. Irvine and Mr. Graham.

Rev. J. C. Roberts, D.D.

In speaking on "The National Advisory Committee; Its Work and Aims," Dr. Robertson spoke of the importance of best leadership in the group life into which all humans evolve. He said that to-day the most important challenge is the conservation and development of resources and the most imoprtant of these are the boys' and girls' lives. In doing this most important work the highest and best ideals must be set before them, and the best of these is the gospel of Christ. No place has been so taxed for boys as Canada and they must be replaced by the boy and girl life now growing. In training the girl life, home seem to be the ce where it is to be developed and no one is so influential as the mothers. Church is to a boy a most important training school, but there is something more essential to life, and that is the group life, and this is more strongly identified in Sunday school life than any other. The girls in group life must have a leader, and one who is to be trusted and looked up to. The Sunday school has a large place in doing the work of conservation of life.

At a meeting of teachers in Sunday schools the methods of all Sunday school teachers were discussed, all found to be the best, so all the officials got together and formed an Advisory Board to confer, and a conference such as has been called was the result where all leaders of different sects could confer on the best system of leadership for girls of teen age to ge the best results. The three problems to be considered by the conference will be what is the best time for girls to meet together, what is the best programme to take and what is the best organization to make for in group system there must be organization

Discussion on S. S. Work.

Mrs. A. H. Cuttle led a discussion on girls' work in the Sunday school, in which some very thoughtful questions were asked and satisfactorily dealt with.

Address by Miss W. Thomas.

Miss W. Thomas spoke on the "Individual Responsibility of Leaders." In her talk she said the critical time in a girl's life is when they are growing up, and if as leaders the task God has given is done, the duty is fulfilled. Girls must be guided so Christ is to them a reality. In teen age the things of the spirit are very real, but unfortunately that sense dies away while it is possible to keep the sense of God before girls for life of the proper leadership is taken, and to do so the sense of Christ must be real to the leader. The principle forces in aiding the everlasting consciousness of God and Bible study live questions which promote the study of the Bible, prayer and to train the student to become a disciple of Christ. If girls are once guided into a sense of the reality of God that sense will remain with them through life.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: Have just had my attention drawn to Magistrate Dumble's charge of treason against the International Bible Student's Association, as reported in a recent issue of your paper, and I ask permission to use your columns in reply.

The word "treason" is a very grave word to be used at a time when real treason is lurking in the land, and to my understanding should not be used when proof of the same is not furnished. If the Magistrate made this charge, with all due respect for his position, I beg to inform him that the I.B.S.A. do not teach treason, nor are they treasonable in any sense of the term. Their meetings are not now and never have been secret. They have always been advertised and everyone or anyone welcome to attend. They have never been of a political nature anywhere, and the subjects taken up were religious ones. Religion was not used as a cloak. The object of the meetings are to build one another up in the most holy faith, and to promote Bible study and Christian fellowship. Anyone believing in the Ransom sacrifice of our Lord can be at home in these meetings. Any one claiming to be a Bible student and talking against recruiting or conscription, or talking in a way which would tend to excite or inflame the hearers or to influence them to action against the Government, could be proven to be out of harmony with the teachings of the Association ministers or offices.

As an example of Bible Students' views, I relate the stand taken by one of my personal friends: His son asked if he could claim exemption as a C.O., and the father replied that if he had consecrated himself to follow in the Lord's footsteps, then he could so claim exemption if he wanted to. Upon the son replying that he had not done so, and that he could not do that, the father made answer that in that case it would be better not to put in a claim as a C. O., because he would not be able to carry it out .Does any one think such teaching as that would lead many young men to become C.O.s?

As a matter of fact, the sons of the Bible Students are in the war, and no attempt on the part of the parents beyond what any parent would make, has been made to keep them from enlisting.

The "Finished Mystery" is accused of being against Christianity. Again, I beg to differ. The book draws the same distinction between Christianity and Churchianity that I notice by the papers many of the clergy are doing at the present time—for example the Archbishop of York. They are saying that after the war there must be less church and more Christ. The late Pastor Russell advocated this for over 40 years prior to his death. The other day one of the papers reported a chaplain as writing from the front that after the war the ministers would have to have more than the collar and tie to mark them as ministers. I hope he meant they would have to have the ministerial marks read out by Magistrate Dumble from the Finished Mystery. I am sure we would all like to see every Minister in the land with just such characteristics, and every Christian minister has them now, and has had them since the days of our Lord.

The Bible Students are facing the grave situation at the present time with an earnest sobriety and a strong desire to do nothing to embarrass the Government in any way, but they have the comfort and enlightment of God's word in a way that they find many have not, and they certainly long to share this comfort with others; but if the government decides that they are not to do this, they have no recourse but to submit till such time as the government entertains a different view.

We appreciate the pulpit utterance of one of the Peterboro ministers, who counselled care as to what was said against us, for we claimed to be Christians. We desire to be Christians in the fullest sense of the term, and with malice toward none.

Thanking you for your space, Mr. Editor, I remain, yours for the truth.

Irish Nationalists Will State Their Objections to Conscription to the World.

(Special to The Examiner.)

DUBLIN, April 20.—The Irish Nationalists to-day were arranging to state their objections to conscription to the world.

The conference also requested the Lord Mayor to go to Washington to explain the situation to President Wilson.

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment.

"SUFFERERS, FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. O. A. Tooker, of Monson, Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my dugout. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years indeed, with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed, smaller size 50c, sample size 25c, at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

BOY HAD ARM BADLY BROKEN.

Norman Nesbitt, the little 9 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Nesbitt, 474 George street, sustained a painful fracture of his arm yesterday afternoon. The lad with several of his small companions, had gone to Fitzgerald's back yard, where Mr. Nesbitt works, and climbed a shed. Norman attempted to jump from the roof daring his companions to follow, but his clothes caught on a nail, and he fell. The right arm was badly broken and his elbow dislocated. Dr. McClelland attended him.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM ALLEN MACNAB

Boys at the Front Are Very Optimistic Over the Situation Judging From Letter of Peterboro Soldier.

Following are some extracts from a letter received by Mr. MacNab, G T.R. agent of this city, from his son Allan MacNab of the Cyclist Battalion. They reflect the spirit of confidence with which our Canadians in France await their turn to grapple with the Hun. The letter is dated March 29th, one week after the great Hun drive began.

"Well, here we are around to Good Friday once more. It is a dull, windy day, with spells of rain to make things more cheerful.

"It finds us well away into what most pepole claim as the last big battle. Here's hoping that it is, although it has not started very much to our advantage—from what we hear about events further south. So far we have had no definite news of what has happened down there, but rumour is putting rather a bad face on it.

However, we are not worrying, for we are all confident that we can trim Heinie in the end, although he has lots of kick left in him yet.

Everything is "Jake" with us, although Heinie is trying for something he can't get up up our way, too.

We did not get much of a rest down the line on our last spell—we were up the line for seven straight weeks and went down last Wednesday. After being there only four days, we were sent up again, and here we are waiting for Heinie to do his worst. We are not actually longing to get at him, but if he does come, we are hoping that it may be in his old massed formation style, so we can do good execution wit hthis old Lewis gun of ours. Don't go worryin gabout any reverse we may get for we are going to trim him up good and proper in the end and no mistake.

For every yard of ground he gains he will lose one or more men I'll bet. You cannot imagine what a terrible and yet magnificent sight one of our artillery barrages is.

If the stem end of a head of lettuce is brown, it is generally beginning to spoil at the heart.

Motor Show Exhibits

The Banks' Garage Display—Moffat "Electric" Stoves by Alexander & Miller

In addition to the creditable dsplay of automobiles at the Motor Show, quite a number of our local merchants made interesting exhibits of a varied allied nature, which were well and attractively shown.

COOKING BY ELECTRICITY.

Messrs. Alexander and Miller's display of Electric Cooking ranges, and other allied goods, which occupied a central booth at the Motor Show, received marked attention from visitors, especially ladies accompanied by their husbands. The exhibit was in charge of one of the members of the firm, who intelligently explained the various points of interest in connection with the three different styles of ranges shown. Citizens who have experienced some of the troubles that existed all through the past winter, on account of the shortage of coal and other fuel, have naturally been turning their attention to electricity and other means of oborating a repetition of their trying experiences. With many who can afford it, the question of cost is not going to be allowed to interfere with the adoption of some other means of obviating a repetition for next winter. There has been too much begging and humbugging to get what they are wiling to pay for; and, if a substitute for coal can be found, coal dealers will not be troubled in future. Moffat "Electra" stoves and heaters possess many advantages, and are not only proving excellent cookers, but make handsome pieces of cabinet furniture for the kitchen, with capacity for doing excellent work with clean results.

UNIQUE DISPLAY FROM BANKS' GARAGE.

The biggest garage in the city sent one of the most notable automobile contributions to the Motor Show. It includes the popular Country Club Model the well-known four passenger design which can be fitted with a winter top when needed. Dr. Middleton of this city, enjoys one of these model cars, fitted in this manner. It was admired by many visitors.

The Model 90 Touring Car, of which over 80,000 were sold last year, was also shown. A number of these models are owned in Peterborough by some of our leading citizens.

Model 85-6 Touring car, fully equipped, was exhibited and found a purchaser in Mr. Westbye before leaving the show. This model is fitted with the continental motor, of well known repute.

The 88-4 Willys-Knight Limousine was the feature of the show, and was the cynosure of all motor admirers' eyes, especially the ladies, who are lovers of the artistic in motor cars, as well as in everything else. This modern automobile represents not only efficiency most highly developed, but the tip-top of eleganee in furnishings as well.

"Business is fine, thank you," said Charley Banks, as the visitor left him with a good prospect of becoming the owners of an Overland.

THE GRAY-DORT EXHIBIT.

One of the most interesting automobile exhibits at the Motor Show and one that attracted a great number of visitors, was the Gray-Dort display of cars by Cranfield Bros., their representatives in this district.

Those who are practically acquainted with the qualities of the different makes of cars found the Gray-Dort in a different class fro mthe others. The manufacturers of this car have specialized on their motor and they claim to have installed a motor, which is better, simpler, and sturdier than is used in cars of the Gray-Dort class. These claims are based on the fact that they use the Pingot Motor.

The cars are designed for roominess and comfort.

The starting and lighting troubles are overcome by using the Westinghouse systems.

Fine materials—painstaking workmanship, and correct design have made the Gray-Dort a splendid car.

Mr. F. Bennett, 377 Water street, purchased the handsome Special touring car that was in the Gray-Dort exhibit at the Motor Show. This car drew many specially favourable comments. Mr. Bennett has had considerable experience in automobiles, and his choice of a car was the Gray-Dort —which he considered the best for the price.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength.

This preparation for the removal of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AVERTED BOY IN A RUNAWAY

Mr. James Barry Makes a Spectacular Rescue Near Wilson's Machine Shop

Yesterday afternoon a delivery horse and rig, owned by Mr. John, grocer, was standing at the corner of Dalhousie and Rubidge streets Something frightened the horse and it bolted east down Dalhousie street, almost to the river bank, but swerved back of Wilson's machine shop All this time, a little chap, named W. J. Forsythe, of 186 Reid street, was in the rig, and his frightened cries brought out the men at work at Wilson's machine shop to ascertain the frouble. Mr. James Barry, an employee, seeing the little fellow's danger, rescued him from the back of the rig, the rig going at full speed. Shortly after the horse was stopped by the men. The damage done was a broken axle.

INCREASING THE CITIZEN ARMY

"Austarlia May Yet Have to Fight at Home," Declares Minister of Defence

Special to The Examiner:

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 20.—The Ministry of Defence is planning to increase the citizen force of Australia by enlisting men between 21 and 50, who are unacceptable for atcive service.

"Australia may yet have to fight at home," it was declared.

HELF FOR THE FARM MANY REGISTRATIONS

Make Your Applications For Farm Help to Mr. Gillespie

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., states that he has quite a list of very capable lads up to nineteen years of age who are desirous of going on farms. While a number of farmers have been supplied with help there is still a good list of boys desirous of being located. Any farmer needing help should make application at once to Mr. Gillespie at the Creamery before the supply is exhausted.

Farmers Will Raise Enough For Own Needs

"We will not raise a bushel of wheat, nor a pound of meat, nor a pint of milk more than we need for ourselves. Our farm is paid for, and we can manage to live on our produce. We shall see whether our boys are more needed in the army."

This statement was tinged with both the elements of threat and promise. The woman who uttered it has two sons who have worked the family's farm. One of them is sickly, and of little use when hard, steady work demands vigorous labour. The other is a husky boy who is affected by the new military regulations.

The mother was issuing her bill of independence, to the effect that the state need expect no foodstuffs from her farm. If her son was more needed in the army than on the soil, there was no alternative but to limit the work to their own needs.

Another farmer is loosing his helper. He stated that his fall wheat had been so destroyed by the frost that it was almost valueless as a crop. Hence, without plowing it up he is reseeding it with spring wheat, one bushel to the acre, hoping that from the two he will reap at least one crop.

He added that he would be unable to plant a "hoe crop," and would manifestly have to confine his work to that which could be accomplished with the least demand in labour. He added that his stock had to be milked and cared for, and that even the city people must realize that his farm would produce comparatively little in foodstuffs this summer.

These are but two of eight or ten statements, all of the same tenor, the Examiner heard to-day from farmers whose boys or hired help will be taken.

The Practical Economy of Good Paint

Good paint is never an expense, but a saving. By its use you save your buildings from a steady deterioration in value.

Economy in painting demands the use of Quality Paint—Martin-Senour "100% Pure" Paint—the paint that protects and preserves.

The use of cheap materials is a waste of money—a waste of time.

MARTIN-SENOUR

"100% PURE" PAINT

wears longest, covers the greatest surface (900 sq. feet per gallon) and because of its even texture, takes least time and is easiest to apply. It is absolutely guaranteed—"100% Pure" White Lead, Zinc Oxide and highest quality Linseed Oil. It is admittedly the most economical paint on the market.

Take no chances. Make your investments secure by applying on your buildings, inside and out, protecting coats of Martin-Senour "100% Pure" Paint.

Ask for "Farmer's Color Set" and "Town and Country Homes". Just what you'll need in planning your painting. 120

INSURANCE MEN HELD A DINNER

New Members Added to the Peterborough Organization.

Last evening the Life Underwriters held a dinner at the Empress Hotel. At seven o'clock a meeting was held, with President Sedgewick in the chair. There were about twenty members present. Two very interesting canvasses were put on by Mr. Roberts, of the Metropolitan, and Mr. Allen, of the Prudential. The other canvass was put on by Mr. A. E. Dawson and Mr. McClelland, both of the Imperial Life.

The discussions following these canvasses were instructive to the members present. Several new members were also present. The next meeting will be in the form of an outing to South Beach on the first Saturday in May.

EXEMPTION CLAIM HEARD THIS MORNING.

Thomas Hooper appeared this morning before Judge Huycke to obtain an extension of time for his son, Percy Hooper, whose exemption expired on April 1. Mr. Hooper had not succeeded in making a sale of his business without a sacrifice. He thought it unjust to take his son, which would make it necessary to close his shop and leave the business open to foreigners.

The Judge reminded Mr. Hooper that other boys were taking his son's place at the front.

Judge Huycke held out little hope that the exemption would be extended.

Saturday Morning Session Of The Girls' Conference

At the morning session of the Conference, at which Mrs. McElhiney presided, Miss N. A. Yeomans and Mrs. A. H. Cuttle gave some very helpful ideas on Sunday School organization, speaking from the standpoint of the grouping system. In this system they both suggested that girls in the teen age should be put into two groups of from 13 to 15 years, the other from 15 to 20 years. These two groups could meet the same evening at a mid-week service and hear addresses, one to each group, as the same address would not interest the girls of both. In all groups organization is a splendid incentive to study. Each group should have its own officers and committees, and take up questions amongst themselves, and thus gain a broader and more lasting knowledge.

Training Leaders.

In her address on "Practical Helps in Training Leaders," Miss Taggart spoke of the many channels which are open to leaders and Sunday School teachers. Training schools and conferences, such as that held in the summer at Geneva Lake, are open to the leader or teacher who seeks guidance and ideas.

Incinerator Vestals Complain Of Earth In Rubbish Loads

"We can't burn real estate," said Sanitary Inspector Stapleton this morning, in a complaint that the citizens were sending too much earth to the incinerator. This has been particularly noticeable since Fire Chief Grange reminded the people that rubbish fires were prohibited by a city bylaw. Immediately the lawn and yard rakings were diverted to the garbage colectors' loads, and the incineraor fires were nearly extinguished by the "real estate" which formed a considerable percentage of the new refuse. Mr. Stapleton said that the men threatened to quit and otherwise objected to difficulties created by the dirt banking the fires. Mr. Stapleton pointed out that the combustible rubbish is welcomed at the incinerator and requested the citizens to carefully separate the soil and thereby help maintain harmony among the "vestals."

TAG DAY OF THE VETERANS

Annual Campaign To-day Promises To Be a Success

In spite of the fact that weather conditions were not the most favourable, the tag day of the Great War Veterans to-day in aid of the Relief Fund, promises to be a success, judging by the number of tags in evidence on the streets. The campaign will not be closed until 9 o'clock to-night. Many of the factories were visited this morning, while squads of Veterans went to Lakefield, Keene, Havelock and Norwood. A large number of ladies assisted the Veterans in their effort and the total will likely be a noteworthy one.

De Laval Five Defeat Printers

The Printers suffered their first defeat last night at the Water street alleys in the ten-pin league. The De Laval won two of the three games.

Both teams were away off from their usual form in the first game, but came back in the second when the De Lavals won out by three pins. The last game was an easy win for the De Lavals with 843 against 797 for the Printers. The summary:

Printers: Team pinnage 2379; average pinnage 793; high game, 823; high three games, Anderson 560.

De Laval: Team average, 2388; average pinnage 796; high game, 843; high single, Byers, 213; high 3 games, Byers 527.

AN IDEAL SUMMER OUTING.

The Provincial Government of Ontario earned the gratitude of all lovers of out-of-doors when it set apart, in 1893, nearly two million acres of heavily timbered land starred with beautiful lakes and winding streams, as a preserve for the wild things and a recreation ground for the people. They called it Algonquin Park. Away up in the "Highlands of Ontario," 200 miles north of Toronto, 170 miles west of Ottawa, and two thousand feet above the level of the sea, this lovely region, remains to-day unspoiled, a perfect refuge for the creatures of the forest, and an ideal camping ground for the sportsman and business man. The Grand Trunk operate hotel and log cabin camps which offer first class accommodation in this wild and rugged playground. Illustrated descriptive literature may be had for the asking. Write C. E. TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS MORE FOR THE 57TH BAND

Band Held a Very Successful Rehearsal Last Evening—Treasurer Appointed.

The members of the 57th Regiment Band, at a very successful rehearsal in the Armouries last night, unanimously agreed to the appointment of Mr. Angus MacPherson, of the F. R. J. MacPherson Co., Ltd., as treasurer. Mr. MacPherson's central location and extensive business experience will tend to make this change very beneficial. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the ladies who had charge of the successful military euchre recently held at the Conservatory of Music in aid of the 57th Band. This function netted approximately the handsome sum of $200, and could not, particularly in view of the reorganization now in progress, have been received at a more opportune time. The ladies of the city are certainly taking a deep interest in the band's welfare, and are giving expression to their sentiments in the most practical manner. It is only a few weeks since the Daughters of the Empire voted $100 to this deserving cause, and the members feel that they owe these ladies their sincerest gratitude.

The Committee.

The committee in charge of the military euchre was comprised as follows: Mrs. (Dr.) Gallivan (convener, Mrs. (Col.) Clegg, Mrs. (Dr.) Eastwood, Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron, Mrs (Dr.) Buchanan, Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. Spence, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Sharpe, and Miss Hurley.

SMALL CATCH OF RATS WILL MEAN MUCH DEARER FURS

Muskrat pelts brought $1.25 and $1.27 each, according to Indians from the Hiawatha and Curve Lake reserves, who were conspicuous visitors to the city to-day. The season closes to-morrow, when the traps will be hung up for another year. While the price was exceptionally favourable, the catch was disappointingly small.

"The cold weather cost me hundreds of dollars," said one of the Rice Lake men, who has been known to count nearly one thousand pelts in one season. "I don't think anyone got more than three hundred this year. George Taylor, of Chemong, is said to have taken the most up there, and Alfie Crowe and Madden Howard lead the Rice Lake men in luck."

Jim Howard had a fair catch, and the McCues and others from Chemong did fairly well. But it was a big chance to make a killing, and the weather man stepped on it, as he did on the fall wheat fields.

This year the buyers visited the Indians every day, and bought up the fat hides as soon as they were stretched on the willow gads. Once upon a time, the Indians used to carry their pelts in bags, bending under their burdens that were worth only 21 cents a pelt. But all those conditions have changed. The market was never so brisk as this season, and the comparative shortage will be reflected next winter in the high price of fur raiment in which muskrat is used.

Turbans are built up entirely of draped satin or lacquered ribbon made into stiffened bows and standing a stiff manner above a high coiffure.

Submarine Crews Mutined in The North Sea

Special to the Examiner:

MR. HUYCKE HOME.

Unable to Remain in Chicago on Account of Unsettlement Caused by War.

Mr. Asa Huycke has returned home from Chicago, where, on account of war conditions, aliens receive scant courtesy. To enter the United States he had to get a passport showig that he was going nor Sacerdoti in Chicago, and later when he accepted a position was plainly asked why he did not confine his limited stay to singing, instead of also engaging in work. This statement is similar to that recently reported in the press in which alleged discrimination against Canadian teachers and nurses in Chicago was drawn to the attention of Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, during one of the sessions of Parliament.

THE WAR VETERANS PARADE TO-MORROW TO ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

The magistrate would have sentenced him to two years, but the police asked for leniency.

One Hundred And Fifty Workmen Killed

According to despatches just received from Romanshorn, the fires were caused by aerial attacks, and 150 workmen were killed or injured.

The raiding aeroplanes were seen from the shore of Lake Constance, as they flew northward over the lake after the attack.

The amount of damage is said to have been enormous.

HARDWARE AND METAL MARKETS

The scarcity of ingot tin grows more apparent every week and advices from some sources are to the effect that unless further supplies are available within the next couple of weeks production of some of their manufactured lines will automatically cease. Permits for shipments from England are not being granted freely, and there is no indication that supplies there are equal to present needs. Cable advices indicate another advance of £5 in London market.

Spelter and lead are easier in tone and declines in each have been made, 1-2c per pound on spelter and 1-4c on lead. Supplies are available in large quantities, but the heavy war demand of the past year has been greatly curtailed although a larger movement of lead to Great Britain is now reported.

Linseed oil has registered a decine of 4c per gallon in some quarters. The seed market has undergone a considerable change for the week but with the scarcity of supplies in the east and the uncertainty as to when furher shipments of flax may be expected the tendency has largely been to maintain previous prices.

Turpentine has gone 3c lower per gallon in some sources. The matter of transportation and the uncertainty as to when further shipments will reach desination are factors in upholding the prices in others. The primary markets are firm and though little change over last week is apparent the undertone is comaparatively strong.

Another change in cotton goods has been made and revised prices at considerably higher levels are now being quoted. The lines affected include cotton rope, sash cord, awning cord, clothes lines, seine twine and candlewick. Cotton rope is between 3c and 4c per pound and sash cord 3c per pound with other items proportionately higher.

A big advance has been made in many lines of Joseph Rodgers and Sons cutlery, new prices established ranging from 20 to 25 per cent. above former quotations. The lines affected include butcher knives, skinning knives, sticking knives, table cutlery and carvers in pairs, and steels.

Business generally is reported very good with booked orders on many lines now moving forward freely.—Hardware and Metals.

INTERESTING LETTER RECEIVED FROM A PETERBORO SOLDIER

Former Assistant Boys' Secretary of the Peterboro Y. M.C.A., Has a Lively Time on the Western Front.

Mrs. B. McNeely 451 Stewart street, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Fred McNeeley, who prior to enlisting, was assistant boys' secretary of the local branch of the Y.M.C.A.

France, Easter Sunday.

Dearest Mother.— How long it is since I have heard from you or written, I do not know offhand, but that it was some time up the line last time. Since then it has not been possible for me to write you much though I would have cared to do so. Much of which I may not make mention has come off in these last few weeks and so I have not had the feeling that I could write. It has been move, move, move on the shortest notice, and here, on this beautiful Easter Day, we are "standing to" waiting for whatever may turn up. The rumours are flying thick and fast from every direction, so we may suppose anything may have happened, but above all we know the little old English army is not whipped yet or even likely to be. Doesn't it fill the whole civilized world with admiration when we read of the wonderful stand they have made in the south? Gosh, it makes a fellow feel good to know he can claim comradeship with such as these.

I can't help picturing at this time that Easter service I know is now going on in the old church back there at home. Oh, how a longing fills my whole being, that I might be for a little while away from all this and join in that service, to hear Mr. Rowand preach on the Resurrection, (I have never heard him, but I compare him with Mr. Mitchell), to hear the choir render their Easter music. I can almost hear the prayers that go up to the Almighty for the success of our armies, and then comes the rumble of traffic to stop these reveries and awake a realization of the reality. Really, I believe I am becoming quite sentimental, and as that would never do I had better change off to a new line.

Am enclosing a clipping from an English paper which will explain itself. Believe me old Fritz got a jolt he will not soon forget or forgive, and I had a grand stand view of the first part of the proceedings but 'twas much safer underground for the second. The next day he was just like a whipped child that sulks and has not much to say.

Met Lionel McIntosh to-day and had quite a talk with him. You remember him—he lives on Cedar street, and took that sergeants' course with Fred Walker. By the by, just missed seeing Fred yesterday, but did not get word in time. Have not seen or heard from Dick in some time, but of course that's only natural at this time when everybody is busy.

Received your parcel all O.K. and sure appreciate the candy especially. The wristlets I was obliged to delete during a hurried midnight move but the Balaclava I have retained, and traded my old one off. This new one is first class for wear under my steel helmet. I need some socks shortly if you have any at hand.

Well, mother, news is not very plentiful— that is, the kind I can send—and I think I have just about exhausted my supply for now and will ring off. If you do not hear from me regularly in the next few weeks, don't worry; it is only force of circumstances that prevents writing. Love to all and yourself, from— FRED.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

The Dinner Decorations

CHAPTER XLVII.

The decorations had all been planned before Mrs. Sexton left so that all I had to do was to carry out the directions. Of course they must harmonize with the costumes, so I used my Dresden china dinner set; and the flowers were tiny field flowers, and delicate ferns, tied and bunched with Dresden ribbons. The effect was very dainty and also very fetching.

"It sure do look like a young girl's party, Mrs. Howard," Mary declared —"them posies is that sweet and purty."

"The effect is very good," James said, after looking the table over critically. This from James was very great praise, as he had not been consulted.

I was so excited I could neither sit down or lie down, as Mary and also Celeste urged. But finally I went up stairs and commenced to dress. I was partly dressed when George came in.

"Will this do?" he asked, and showed me a wonderful suit of wine-colored velvet with fine laces for the neck and wrists. Then he produced a dazzling pair of buckles for his shoes.

"You will be the best looking man at the dinner!" I cried jumping up; and paying no attention to Celeste, who was doing my hair, I gave him a quick little kiss and then ran back to my chair.

AN AFFABLE MOOD.

I was a little frightened at my temerity; as I always was when I proferred a caress, but his affable mood of the morning still continued and he said nothing.

When I was dressed in my quaint Dolly Varden costume, I ran in to him to be admired.

"You look very sweet," he said, and sent me away happy because of the tone with which he had voiced his approval.

He had not seen the dining room, and I waited to show it to him before our guests should arrive. But, when he came down, he was so resplendent in his white wig and patches that I was almost afraid of him. But, hiding all such feelings I made him a low courtesy, sweeping out my skirts to their full extent; and said with mock humility:

"If you will give me your arm, Sir Knight!"

He offered it with a smile, and so we went, arm in arm, into the dining room. I dreaded his criticisms. Although I knew that it was well done.

"Very good, indeed, dear. I am glad that you decided to have something simple and appropriate for your guests instead of attempting things of which you are not capable."

Little did he imagine that that simplicity had caused me more anxiety than the most elaborate dinner would have caused some veteran of social affairs. Neither did I intend he should know it.

"Look at the place cards, dear." I had saved my greatest surprise until the very last.

"By Jove! these are clever! Where did you find them?"

"Find them! Why George, don't you see they are hand painted?"

"Of course! and they are exquisitely done. Where did you get them?"

"Merton Gray painted them for me." Then as I saw a puzzled look on my husband's face I hastened to explain:

"He called one day while Mrs. Sexton was here. We spoke of the dinner, and I said we were to have it a sort of costume dinner, and he asked if he might send the place cards. Mrs. Sexton thought it a wonderful compliment."

"Oh, he probably offered because Mrs. Sexton had influence with many of his patrons." George answered carelessly just as our first guests were announced.

RESENTMENT.

I resented my husband's careless speech. Merton Gray had painted the place cards for ME, not because Mrs. Sexton, or anyone else, had a share in them, nor because he expected any return. I wanted to say this to George, but fortunately I recalled what Mrs. Sexton had said to me under the things a married woman should and should not do, and I restrained myself.

When Merton came I whispered to George.

"Don't forget to say something about the cards," and he replied:

"I do not need any coaching as to what I should do."

Again I felt chilled. I had not meant to do anything but remind him of something I feared he might forget. And he had answered me quite sharply. Yet, to my relief, a few moments later heard him thanking Merton most graciously.

Evelyn and Kurts came in then, in a few moments, the rest of my guests. And as we went into the dining room I thought that even so critical a man as George could not possibly see anything to which he could make an objection. Everything was perfect. The women were so dainty —the men so brave in their finery— the table was superb; and I felt sure the dinner would also be all that he could desire. The consequence was that I was calmer, more comfortable in my position as hostess, than I would have dreamed possible.

A True Forecaster

By ETHEL HOLMES

I am a woman of thirty-five. Fifteen years ago when I had just finished my education my father said to me one day:

"Louise, I am going to bring home a guest to dinner today."

I was the housekeeper and this meant that the meal should be served for an extra person.

"Who is it?" I asked.

"Langford is his name; he is twenty-five years old, and—well, you can judge for yourself. He is either a fool or a genius, I am not certain which; you may give me your opinion after you have seen him."

When Mr. Langford came I saw nothing unusual in his appearance. Indeed he was rather plain. He was certainly not up to the ways of society for instead of appearing in evening dress he wore a business suit. He took very little notice of me, addressing his remarks to father. They were chatting when dinner was announced and when the guest was introduced to me he gave me a nod without pausing in what he was saying, evidently more interested in it than in me. The subject on his mind was engines, about which I was absolutely ignorant.

During the dinner he hopped about from one subject to another like a bird in a tree. At one moment it was "heavier than air," the next something that would go a hundred miles an hour, and the next—heaven knows what. I think it was about gas bags. I don't believe father understood half of what he said and I didn't take in a word of it. I was certainly very much bored and glad when the dinner was over. As father rose he said to me:

"Louise, I shall have to ask you to entertain Mr. Langford for awhile; I have some letters to write that can't be put off."

Great heavens! I entertain Mr. Langford, with his "gas bags" and "heavier then air" talk. I gave father an annihilating look, but it produced no effect. He went upstairs to his den and I led Mr. Langford into the drawing room. He came down from his gas bags and became for a few minutes a very different person.

"I must apologize," he said, "for talking about matters that you cannot be expected to understand."

"What in the world were you talking about anyway?" I asked.

"Navigating the air; I expect to see the day when a man will fly like a bird."

I made up my mind at once that if he was either a fool or a genius, he was a fool.

"I am looking forward," he continued, "to the day when a man will fly from New York to Chicago in much less time then would be required by a railroad train. He will soar over mountains. In war there will be no need for scouts to report on the position and strength of an enemy. Men will go up in flying machines and take photographs of a whole battlefield. Of course, there will be men on both sides, and they will fight to drive each other away."

There was a far-away look in his eye when he said this and I began to suspect that he was insane.

"I can see," he went on, "thousands of these flying machines pitted against thousands on the other side firing at one another, now and again one dropping to the earth, some of them making gradual descents either on a slant or in circles. These battles above the clouds—"

"Will you excuse me a moment, Mr. Langford," I interrupted, "I wish to speak with my father."

I fled from him upstairs to father.

"Papa," I said, out of breath, "I dare not stay one moment longer alone with that man. He is a lunatic."

"Why do you think that?" asked father.

I told papa what the man had said about men fighting up in the air.

"He is an enthusiast, my dear; I don't think his mind is affected."

"I am not going back without you, papa; when he was talking about those battles in the clouds he frightened me."

"Dell, go down again; when I finish this letter I'll join you."

I returned to the drawing room. I fancied Mr. Langford had surmised that he had gone too far with his nonsense about going up in the air. At any rate he talked to me delightfully on other subjects. I forgot his weak spot and enjoyed the rest of the time I spent with him immensely. That night I went to bed with my brain in a whirl and dreamed that I was flitting about up in the sky.

All this happened, as I have said, years ago. I was recently invited to an aeronautic exhibition and was introduced to a man who had been prominent in airplane inventions and had fought in the air on the Belgian battle front. I did not hear his name when he was presented to me, but there was something about him that was familiar to me. He was very enthusiastic about airplanes and had brought down many Germans.

"Before the navigation of the air had become an accomplished fact," he said looking at me quizzically, "I met a young lady to whom I imparted my expectations, and I am quite sure I convinced her that I was a lunatic."

"You are—"

"George Langford."

He doesn't bring down any more Germans. I don't let him. We are engaged.

World's Rubber Production.

Early in the war England established an embargo on crude rubber, and through her control of the far Eastern rubber plantations was able to make it effective. Rubber manufacturers later were permitted to obtain crude rubber on their written agreement to withhold shipments of rubber or rubber products from the central powers and certain neutrals. The shipments of crude rubber to this country is still contingent upon the observance of this agreement.

The world's rubber production for this year is placed at 250,000 tons—about double the production at the beginning of the war. About 60 per cent is used in the United States.

Fish for the Clam With Dynamite.

A clam cannot come out of its shell. Its home is on the low sandstone ledges into which it bores by means of its sharp shell, to a depth of six or eight inches.

The little pholas or boring clam is a great delicacy on the Pacific coast. Its meat is juicy and tender and is excellent in chowder. Consequently, fishermen are not content to dislodge the clams slowly with pick and crowbar. They use dynamite, one blast of which dislodges hundreds of clams.—Popular Science Monthly.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Called the Bluff

By F. A. MITCHELL

When a nation becomes notable for any intellectual achievement the faculty that achieves seems to be inborn in the race. The German race is remarkable for scientific development. This story shows how an uneducated German was willing to suffer imprisonment to test the efficacy of a scientific device.

Herman Gotlieb was suspected of stealing corn from a neighbor's garden. Whether he was really guilty the owner of the garden did not know, but Gotlieb lived near his property and was the only person who did live near it. Besides he was very poor and found it difficult to feed eight or nine children with capacious stomachs. The depredations on the garden continued and the owner decided to make an example of some one, so he pounced upon Gotlieb, had him arrested under the specific charge of stealing a number of ears of corn before daylight on the morning of the arrest. That the prisoner might not be unjustly detained, the trial was set for ten o'clock the day of the arrest.

After the preliminary questions had been put the prosecuting attorney made several attempts to trick the accused man into incriminating himself, but without success. Finally the prosecutor undertook to catch him in a scientific trap.

"Did you ever hear of the X-ray?" he asked Gotlieb.

"No, I neffer heard about dot; what iss dot?"

The prosecutor was taken flat aback. How to tell an ignorant man the nature of the X-ray was a poser. The judge, seeing his discomfiture, smiled.

"The X-ray is a very bright light—so bright that it enables one to look inside of a man. The machine, or we call it lamp, that emits the ray was invented by a countryman of yours."

"A Sherman?" asked the prisoner.

"Yes, a German. His name was Roentgen. The X-ray is sometimes called the Roentgen ray."

Herman seemed interested. The lawyer proceeded.

"This machine is now used by surgeons to locate a bullet that is lodged inside a man. If you had swallowed a nail it could be seen in your stomach by means of this instrument."

"Got in Himmel! Dot machine vas invented in Shermany?"

"Yes, it was made in Germany; but I'm going to use it in America. I'm going to bring one of them into the court and look into your stomach with it."

"Vot you do dat for?"

"To prove that you ate corn for breakfast this morning."

'Vill dat machine show corn in my stomick?" asked the prisoner, seemingly more interested in the machine than that it might prove him guilty.

"If you robbed the cornfield as charged, you undoubtedly ate the fruits of your robbery for breakfast and the Roentgen lamp will show it in your stomach."

"Mein Gott; vot a machine!"

"Now, Gotlieb, if you will plead guilty I will ask his honor to give you a light sentence."

The prisoner appeared to be lost in thought. The prosecutor, thinking that he had not heard the question, repeated it. Then suddenly Gotlieb called the bluff.

"Bring on dot machine."

By this time the judge, the court and the spectators were on the tiptoe of expectation of an amusing scene. The prosecutor assumed a severe air and, calling an attendant, sent him for an electric lamp. The prisoner was so intent upon it that he did not see the smiles of those present.

"Prisoner," said the prosecuting attorney with great severity, "will you plead guilty and take a light sentence or suffer the full penalty of the law if I find corn in your stomach?"

Herman's face assumed an expression of a struggle within him. The court was led to believe that he dreaded exposure from the Roentgen ray but doubted its efficacy. Finally he turned to the judge and said:

"Vat bunishment you gif me if he find dot corn in my stomick?"

"Ten days in jail."

The prisoner looked again at the electric lamp, which the prosecutor was flashing for the purpose of terrifying him.

"Ferry well, I go to shail; but I won't confess dat I vas guilty."

There was nothing for the attorney to do but carry out his purpose; he flashed the lamp against the prisoner's stomach and feigned to examine it with a reading glass.

"There it is," he said. "You must have eaten a dozen ears." Then turning to the judge, he added: "Having proved the prisoner guilty, your honor, it remains for you to pass sentence upon him. And on account of his persistence in denying his guilt I urge that you make it all that the law allows."

Repressing his laughter, the judge said:

"Prisoner stand up."

The prisoner rose.

"Have you anything to say why I should not pass sentence upon you?"

"Yes, jutch. Dot machine vas neffer made in Shermany in de world. It is a humbug and don't tell de truth. All I had for breakfast dis morning vas a dish of sauerkraut."

There was an explosion in the courtroom, the only official word spoken being, "Case dismissed."

Out West.

Americans in thousands are planning an invasion of Western Canada —Saskatchewan particularly—in the coming spring and summer. It is a peaceful invasion they plan, and Canada should welcome them with open arms. The materials of war they will bring will be batteries of ploughs and harrows and binders. We want American settlers. We need their experience, their energy and their equipment. We want their aid in production. Saskatchewan has the rich but untilled soil. They have the energy and the experience to apply to it. The fear of conscription, insidiously instilled, has kept many back in the last three years. Settlers approaching the border were handed pamphlets bearing the title, "In the Clutches of the English King." Now conscription is in force in both countries. The democracy of it has won over the fearful. — Saskatchewan Star.

Getting Even.

Because the newly-commissioned major on the way to Toronto looked like ready money the porter had been very active in his attentions. His movements were of the "hot-foot" variety whenever the officer appeared to require service. Also he was careful to address the major as "gin'ral." And when the train neared the Union Depot and, following the assiduous use of the brush, the sable servitor discovered himself in the possession of a dime, he was equal to the emergency. He clicked his heels together, saluted and remarked, "Corp'ral, Ah t'ank yo', sah."

Cow Ate Dynamite.

A more than usually interesting case came before the County Court at Grand Forks when a citizen sued the owners of a quarry for payment for a cow which he claimed had died from eating dynamite that had been left lying around loose by the operators of the quarry.

The Best Habit In The World is the habit of health. The way to get it is to train your bowels, through the liver, to act naturally, at a fixed time, every day.

Take one pill regularly (more only if necessary) until you succeed. Then you can stop taking them, without trouble or annoyance.

This has been the good-health-rule for 50 years.

MRS. DOOLEY'S ADVICE TO WORKING GIRLS

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I wish all girls who work and suffer from functional disorders would profit by my advice and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I was married, when I came home from work at night, I would be just worn out with pains which dragged me down. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel like a new woman. I can work from morning until night and it does not bother me, and I wish all girls who suffer as I did would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. H. DOOLEY, 1135 25th Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Working girls everywhere should profit by Mrs. Dooley's experience, and instead of dragging along from day to day with life a burden, give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It has overcome just such conditions for thousands of others, and why not for you? For special advice, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years experience is at your service.

Guineas Get Ride.

Any of the young blood of Indianapolis will testify that "chickens" (in one of the later acceptances of the word) are very fond of street car and automobile riding, observes the Indianapolis News, but it is not often that four guineas of the common or garden digging variety have an opportunity to disport themselves in or on a city street car.

Amid a chorus of squawks from about 100 coops of turkeys and other fowls in front of William Locks' fish and poultry place at 1027 Virginia avenue, the other day, four guineas escaped from a coop, and a series of hops, flops and flights landed them on the trolley pole of a street car headed for Washington street, where they evidently regarded it policy to sit tight. At any rate they were not tempted from their perch by downtown window displays or moving picture theaters. On the back trip the street car stopped in front of Locks', and the motorman shouted: "Here are your guineas." Eager hands helped them to alight and they were taken back home.

Danish Statistics.

Very few European countries only were in a position to proceed, since August 1, 1914, with their normal quinquennial census. Denmark is one of the exceptions, says an exchange. On February 1, 1916, the little kingdom counted 2,920,000 inhabitants, i. e., an increase of 163,000 souls over the census of 1911.

The distribution ratio is 75 inhabitants to the square kilometre. The Copenhagen Frederiksberg county contains 605,000 inhabitants, i. e., more than one-fifth of the total population. The 74 other cities number 604,000 people. Rustic population, 1,711,000.

The three principal cities, besides Copenhagen, are: Aarhus, 66,000; Odense, 45,000, and Aalborg, 38,000. The present war increased the importance of the seaport town of Esbjerg (19,000 inhabitants), which hardly existed 50 years ago.

Palpaitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles

WERE CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat, remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

Oriental Ruby.

The oriental ruby consists of nearly pure alumina—i. e., oxide of aluminum—in a crystalline form, containing but 1 per cent of oxide of iron and one-half of 1 per cent of any other substance. The specific gravity of this precious stone is higher than that of many other gems, ranging from 3.9 to 4.2. Aluminum, the metal, has, when cast, a density of 2.56; when forged, of 2.67, or only one-third of that of forged steel or a fourth of that of silver. The melting point is about 1,300 degrees Fahrenheit.

Human Friends.

Do you idealize your friends? Sometimes a person who has worshiped at the shrine of a teacher or schoolmate is shocked into cynicism by the discovery of a flaw in the one who was fancied perfection embodied. Human nature is faulty, and it is always dangerous to identify the virtues which demand our fealty with any human being. Keep on loving and honoring truth and kindness, even though you detect some acquaintance in a falsehood, or are treated unkindly by a friend."

IN NO MAN'S LAND.

Vivid Description Given by Soldier at the Front.

Lieut. Congsby Dawson, who is serving with the Canadian Overseas Forces, tells the following personal experience in "No Man's Land," in Good Housekeeping:

"My major told me that I was to be ready at three-thirty next morning to accompanying him up front to register the guns. In registering guns you take a telephonist and linesman with you. They lay in a line from the battery to any point you may select as the best from which to observe the enemy's country. This point may be two miles or more in advance of your battery. Your battery is always hidden and out of sight, for fear the enemy should see the flash of the firing; consequently the officer in charge of the battery lays the guns mathematically, but cannot observe the effect of his shots. The officer who goes forward can see the target; by telephoning back his corrections, he makes himself the eyes of the officer at the guns.

"It had been raining when we crept out of our kennels to go forward. Everything was dim, and spectral. At the hour of dawn one isn't at his bravest.

"We entered a trench. Holes were scooped out in the side of it just large enough to shelter a man crouching. Each hole contained a sleeping soldier who looked as dead as the occupant of a catacomb.

"Some of the holes had been blown in; all you saw of the last occupant was a protruding arm or leg. At best there was a horrid similarity between the dead and the living. It seemed that the walls of the trenches had been built out of corpses, for one recognized the uniforms of Frenchmen and Huns. They were built out of them, though whether by design or accident it was impossible to tell. We came to a group of men, doing some repairing; that part of the trench had evidently been strafed last night. They didn't know where they were, or how far it was to the front line. We wandered on, still laying in our wire. The colonel of our brigade joined us, and we waded on together.

"The enemy shelling was growing more intense, as was always the way on the Somme when we were bringing out our wounded. A good many of our trenches were directly enfiladed; shells burst just behind the parapet, when they didn't burst on it. It was at about this point in my breaking-in that I received a blow on the head—and thanked God for the man who invented the steel helmet.

"All of a sudden we halted, making ourselves as small as could be. In the rapidly thinning mist ahead of us men were moving. They were stretcher-bearers. The odd thing was that they were carrying their wounded away from, instead of toward us. Then it flashed on us that they were Huns. Almost at that moment we must have been spotted, for shells commenced falling at the end of the trench by which we had entered. Spreading out, so as not to attract attention, we commenced to crawl toward the other end. Instantly that also was closed to us, and a curtain of shells started dropping behind us. We were trapped. With perfect coolness—a coolness which, whatever I looked, I did not share — we went through the corpses and shell-holes in the direction of where our front line ought to be. After what seemed an age, we got back. Later we registered the guns, and one of our officers, who had been laying in wire, was killed in the process.

"On the way out, when we had come to a part of our journey where the tension was relaxed and we could be less cautious, I saw a signalling officer lying asleep under a blackened tree. I called my major's attention to him, saying: 'Look at that silly ass, sir. He'll get something that he doesn't want if he lies there much longer.'

"My major turned his head, and said briefly, 'Poor chap, he's got it.'

"Then I saw that his shoulder-blade had burst through his tunic and was protuding. He'd been coming out walking freely and feeling that the danger was over, just as we were, when the unlucky shell had caught him. 'His name must have been written on it,' our men say when that happens."

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

To Repair Frayed Shoelaces.

When the tag or end fastening comes off a shoelace, take a little black sealing wax and press it carefully around the end of the lace and shape it to a point. This will last a long time and does away with the annoyance of frayed lace ends.

Testing the Taffy.

Pat's grandmother was making him some old-fashioned molasses candy. She let him taste it from the cold water cup to see if it was done. Each time she would ask: "Is it hard enough?" and he would answer: "It's pretty easy yet."

Value of Nation's Own History.

There is nothing that solidifies and strengthens a nation like reading of the nation's own history, whether that history is recorded in books or embodied in customs, institutions and monuments.

HISTORIC HALIFAX.

A Former Stronghold of the Indian Tribesmen.

Long before the coming of the white man the site of Halifax, Nova Scotia, had been occupied by an Indian settlement. The spot was called Chebucto ("greatest of havens") by the Indians because they recognized the almost impregnable position of the harbor and inner bay. It was first used as a base of supplies by the French admiral, Duke d'Anville, in 1745, when he attempted to recapture Louisburg, taken from the French by a band of New England colonists.

The real story of Halifax, however, begins in 1749, when it was settled by Earl Edward Cornwallis and 2,576 British soldier-colonists. The city was named in honor of the Earl of Halifax.

Cornwallis and his band cleaned away part of the dense forest which extended to the water's edge, established block-houses for protection from the Indians and laid out the town in rigid, rectangular style.

The soldiers who came with Cornwallis sent for their families and encouraged other settlers to cross the ocean. In 1750, one year after its birth, the place was made seat of the Government of Acadia. During the next forty years the population doubled, and in 1827 the colony had grown to 14,439. In 1881 there were 36,000 inhabitants. Another twenty years added 5,000, and the present population was estimated at 55,000 by the Halifax Board of Trade.

Situated, as it is, with one of the finest harbors in the world and with the remarkable advantage of being the seaport nearest England on the North American continent, the city from its founding was recognized as an important military factor.

As it grew the principal blockhouse was built on a hill, 255 feet above the sea, which came to a point a mile back from the water front and commanded the outer and inner harbors. From that day to this the height has been the base of fortresses. Recently a new stone citadel was finished on the site, equipped with powerful guns of the latest type to protect the harbor and city.

Halifax is on a triangular promontory which juts out into the Atlantic ocean in the exact middle of the Nova Scotia peninsula.

To the north is the harbor. Directly across from the centre of the city, which faces upon the harbor, the channel narrows suddenly and farther in widens again to form Bedford Basin. Until recently this basin was practically unused.

On the completion of new terminal and docks, part of a scheme of improvement which cost the city $7,000,000, and which, it was estimated, would cost approximately $25,000,000 more before it was finished, Bedford Basin and the town of Rockingham, on the west shore, became extremely important.

Because the harbor furnished better protection from submarine and warship attack than the outer harbor, Bedford Basin with its new railroad terminals was taken over by the Canadian Government for munition loading. Rockingham, within three years, became the home of thousands of laborers, who, in many cases, lived in hastily constructed homes bordering on the bay and extending to the city of Halifax.

Little Angel Present.

A primary teacher, admonishing little Ann, who usually was a model child, for misconduct, said: "I thought I had a little angel in the room. Now where is she?" Little Betty, on the other side of the room, stood up meekly and shyly answered: "Here I is."

Who Gets the Kiss?

"Since you worked your examples so nicely," said the pretty teacher, "I shall give you a kiss." "Teacher, I didn't know there was to be a reward," responded the honest urchin. "It's only fair to tell you that my big brother did them sums."

Ever-Faithful Horse.

It is the horse that has fought the wars of the world and won our human liberty. Besides this, he has broken our prairies, sown and harvested our grain, and delivered it to the markets of the world. He has carried messages of victory and of sorrow, and down to the time of Washington he constituted the fastest mode of communication known, if we except only the carrier pigeon.

"The American Addison."

"The American Addison" was a complimentary nickname conferred on Joseph Dennis, a newspaper man born at Boston in 1768, who won reputation as "Oliver Oldschool." Under that pseudonym he established and for several years conducted a periodical called the Portfolio, which, from all accounts, was popular in its day. He died at Philadelphia in 1812.

"Peat Cotton."

A material known as "peat cotton" is either made into cushions on which to rest injured limbs, or as filling for bandages. One difficulty about using peat cotton is that it must be kept moist. When dry it crumbles into dust and becomes useless. A trace of tar in the make-up renders peat cottou a valuable disinfectant.

Slight Stroke Of Paralysis

Down Left Side—Stomach and Heart Affected—Case Baffled Doctors For Three Years

TRENTON, Ont., March 11.—A very interesting report has been received from Mrs. Pringle in regard to her recovery from partial paralysis. This was a most extreme case, for doctors had been trying for three years to find something which would restore the depleted nerve force.

One can scarcely imagine stronger evidence of the restorative influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. C. Pringle, Queen street, Trenton, Ont., writes:

"About five years ago I was troubled with my stomach, there was a sort of paralyzed feeling across it and up my left side, and my heart seemed almost to stop beating. I called in the Doctor, and he thought it was symptoms of a stroke. My stomach kept getting worse. At times the pounding would be intense, almost unbearable, and I thought I would go wild. Sleep was out of the question. I tried different Doctors, giving each one a fair trial, and doctoring nearly three years. My case seemed to baffle them. It was a nervous breakdown caused by overwork and worry. During all this time I could not do any work, and my friends thought it was a matter of time, how long I would live. Some one advised me to try something to build up my system, and I tried different medicines. Finally I thought I would try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and see if they would do me any good. A famous Doctor sanctioned my using these pills, and told me they would be good for me. They seemed to be just what I required, as I soon saw an improvement. I took about fifteen boxes, and the results have been very gratifying. I am now enjoying splendid health, and able to do all my work, eating anything I wish, and can go to bed and get a good night's rest. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends, who have also secured good results from this treatment."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Belgian Families Flee Before Huns Homes Abandoned

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 20.—It is difficult for one in the British war zone to adjust himself to the new conditions here. It all seems like a horrid dream—this spreading German blight across the cultivated plains of Flanders, with their ancient picturesque villages.

It is but a little more than a week since one was free to motor quietly along highways leading through Merville, Bailleul, and a score of other nearby places which never lost their charms. Then, peaceful farmlands lay freshly turned ready for the spring crops. The battle lines were not far to the eastward, but death and destruction seemed remote, with walls of khaki-clad men guarding the land. Little lads stood at attention by the roadside and saluted as the motors passed, and old men and women beamed welcome from the doors of the cottages.

Within a few days all this has been changed. By day a bank of grim gray smoke from burning hamlets and from myriad belching guns marks the zone along which are struggling the splendid British soldiers in their efforts to block further inroads of the enemy. By night the skyline is ablaze as consuming flames leap up from a hundred homes and great cannon vomit fire.

The correspondent found a little family group crouching beneath huge British howitzers held in reserve. Their eyes were fastened on the mounting columns of smoke which rose from the village whence they came. There were no tears and no words, but the expression on their faces was like that of one just condemned to die.

Why they stopped behind the great guns was unexplained. Possibly it was because they gave them a sense of protection from dangers out beyond. Many of the refugees know only in a general way whither they go. They are following the lead of a military guide like sheep fleeing from a storm. A few cherished belongings are all they carry with them, and they cling to these desperately as their last remaining positions.

Hundreds of Flemish homes have been shorn of their protectors who have been called to the French colours, and for these this has been a time of double terror. Some of the peasants, indeed, cling to cottages amid the crashing of shells until British soldiers led them away. Some have died by their own hearths before they could be removed. A host of these people must have realized their danger, but many refused to be dragged from the homes which they had been keeping so patiently, awaiting the return of husbands or brothers from the war. There were many pitiful cases of homes, in which there were bed-ridden invalids, whom their friends had no means of removing without the help from the soldiers.

It was only yesterday that a British official photographer discovered a helpless paralytic lying in a house which had already been partly wrecked by shells. The invalid had no relatives and his friends, who had looked after him, were dead or cut off from him. So the photographer, with the help of a soldier, carried the man to safety, though their road lay through what might have been a horrible death at any moment. This is one instance among many.

The correspondent spent a night recently at a small hotel in a hamlet whose doom seemed sealed. The gray-haired matron who presided over the destinies of the inn was getting ready to leave. The correspondent found her at one time gazing at a piece of ancient Oriental embroidery, which had been intricately framed and hung on the wall.

"Have you a knife?" she asked suddenly, as she reached up and removed the treasure.

The knife was produced. She stood the frame before the correspondent, and said: "Cut it, please. I will not leave this for the Boche." And so the silken fabric was slashed from the frame. The embroidery and a few more valuables were the only things which could be removed from this combined inn and residence of one of the most prominent families in that part of the coutry.

Don't Diet Yourself TO CURE DYSPEPSIA IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but is thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

Bird Organs.

The German peasants in the Harz mountains teach their birds to sing by a unique instrument known as a bird organ. It consists of two round sheet iron cylinders, one inside of the other. The lower one contains water. The upper one is manipulated by a series of small weights and pulleys, which cause it to settle slowly downward, the air being expelled through a whistle, which has several modifiers to give variety to its tones. When the upper cylinder has come down the required distance a spring operates the weights that raise it again to repeat the sound.

Starting Trouble.

"It's going to be war to the knife," declared the suburban man, who was feeding his chickens.

"What now?" asked his friend.

"Why, Banks sent me a box of axle grease and advised me to use it on my lawn mower."

"Well?"

"Well, I sent it back and told him to use it on his daughter's voice."—London Mail.

A Patriotic Brave.

The following letter from Pte. Mike Mountain Horse, a Blood Indian, whose home is on the reserve in Southwestern Alberta, to his father, will be read with interest by all who have taken an interest in the Canadian Indians who are fighting overseas for King and country. He has evidently been acting as a sniper and has done good work. The letter reflects courage, cheerfulness and a determination to stay with the fighting while there is any fighting to do and he is capable of helping. He was recently wounded, and as a coincidence it may be mentioned that he was found lying in No Man's Land by W. B. Turner, a former member of the Northwest Mounted Police, who served for a long time in the district where the Blood Indian reserve is located. Mountain Horse has lost one brother in the war, and another is with him in France. His filial letter follows:

"My Dear Father,—I received your letter from France. My brother sent it to me. I was very glad to hear from you. I am very glad to tell you that I am very well. I was 14 days away from here shooting. I just got back. I am going to France again in a few days. Don't worry about me. We have all got to die some day, but I might pull through all right, again; then I am going home to Canada, not before. When I got hit first I was four days lying out in No Man's Land. I was hit in the leg but I am all right now. I got about fifteen Germans with my rifle, and I think I did not do so bad. I do not want to go home just yet. I have been treated very good since coming back to England, where I was in the hospital. I got the best of everything. Will say good-bye, hoping to hear from you again."

Sheep on Golf Links.

An interesting action at the meeting of the Stratford County Club was the power given to the directors to graze sheep on the golf grounds this year, if it should prove practicable. It was pointed out that this is done extensively in the Old Country as well as on some links in Canada. The sheep do away with the need of mowing the grass and as well the project would assist in production.

American Troops In Sarnia.

For the first time in history, armed American soldiers paraded the streets of Sarnia on March 22nd. One hundred men of Company F, 338th Infantry, of Michigan, headed by a band, 30 strong, were wildly cheered as they marched from the dock by way of Christian street to the City Hall, where a civic address of welcome was read by the mayor.

Wonderful For The Blood

Cures Sallow Skin, Headache, Languor and Tiredness

You don't need to be told how you feel,—blue, sort of sickish, poor appetite, vague pains, tired in the morning. This condition is common at this season.

Fortunately there is prompt relief in Dr. Hamilton's Pills which immediately relieve the system of all poisons and disease-producing matter.

Thousands have been so utterly depressed, so worn out as to be despondent, but Dr. Hamilton's Pills always cured them. "I can speak feelingly on the power of Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes C. T. Fearman, of Kingston. "Last spring my blood was thin and weak. I was terribly run down, had awful headaches and a knawing, empty feeling about my stomach. I couldn't sleep or work until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills,—they did me a world of good." At all dealers in 25c. boxes.

Isolation of French-Canadians.

The phenomenon of all most striking, it may again be repeated, is that the French-Canadian, whether the almost illiterate peasant or the man of education, has no passionate attachment for France and no burning fervor for Canada. By choice he has isolated himself from his English-speaking neighbors and withdrawn from spiritual contact with them. If he has any pride it is a stubborn pride in not speaking English and in encouraging his children to scorn English, who hearing only French spoken in the home, the school and the church, have naturally little inclination and less opportunity to learn any other language. If France to the French-Canadian were home, as England was to the Puritan, driven into exile but still united to the land of his birth by the ties of sentiment, one could understand why the French-Canadian keeps aloof from the English; or if French-Canadians were only biding their time when Canada from Labrador to British Columbia is to be dominated by the sons of France. Latin culture is to take the place of Saxon, and in the western hemisphere is to be planted a new France that shall redound to the glory of the Old, then the attitude of the French-Canadian would be easily comprehensible. But there is no evidence that any such thought goes through his mind. He accepts the British flag and British rule, but he remains a French-Canadian instead of a Canadian of Canada.—American Review of Reviews.

Other Times, Other Measures.

Early in the week a visitor to one of the minor officers of a leading railroad company noticed that his friend was using a scratch pad composed of old envelopes that had been salvaged after the removal of the mail; also that he was using quite an ordinary lead pencil, and his curosity became aroused.

"Has the Save-Everything Administration taken charge here, too?" he inquired. "When I was here last you had a pad of fine linen paper, and a Koh-i-nor pencil."

"We have learned," explained the official, "that our men give efficient work on such scrap and with such pencils, just as they formerly did with gold printed pencils and bond paper. We are keeping step with the times."

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Protects Cheque From Forger.

A cheque book cover provided with a protecting device which makes it impossible for a man to raise a cheque, has been placed on the market. Various amounts up to one thousand dollars are stamped on the cheque near the row of perforations where it is detached from the stub. The protector is permanently attached to the leather cover of the cheque book, and it can be quickly adjusted for any of the three columns of figures. A sliding straight-edge is moved either up or down to the correct figure. The protector is pressed fast and the cheque torn from its stub.—Popular Science Monthly.

Acids Endanger Ships.

Shipmasters dislike carrying drums of acid where they cannot be reached readily. A Chilean ship, the Japan Advertiser says, recently put in at the Falkland Islands leaking badly. Her cargo was made up of drums of acid and chalk. The acid had leaked from the drums and mixed with the chalk, forming carbonic acid gas in the hold. This gas is deadly and the crew could not make repairs. Meantime the acid had gathered at the bottom of the hold and eaten away the iron frames of the ship.

Courtesy and Appreciation.

To make courtesy popular it must be shown that it pays, pays in dollars and cents as well as in happiness, an exchange says. Appreciation makes for greater effort and creates one of the most valuable assets and builds up a spirit of team work. Much good always results when people think more about their obligations and less about rights. There are many discouraged hearts everywhere that would be helped wonderfully by a word of appreciation.

Three Hands.

One of our famous lecturers used to say some people had three hands, a right hand and a left hand and a little behindhand. The fifth wheel to a cart is frequently mentioned as an example of uselessness, but the third hand is worse than useless, it is a serious handicap, observes a writer. All of us need to keep our right hand busy, and most need to teach the left hand to do its share, but a little behindhand should be promptly amputated.

THE ORIGINAL AMERICANS.

Facts About the Strong Women of the North.

The original Americans of the far north are brown instead of red and are not Indians. Their name Eskimos—which they dislike—means "eaters of raw fish." But they haven't been driven yet to change their name by cooking the fish.

The Eskimo woman could easily put forth a good excuse for not cooking all the food her family eats, because she has so many other things to do.

After she has helped build the igloo, she takes her place beside her husband in fishing. This means going out and chopping a hole in the frozen ocean and keeping it open by swishing around a reindeer horn ladle with one hand while holding a line baited with red flannel with the other.

When the family wants a change of diet or some new clothes, she goes out to help hunt seal, walrus, whales, deer and caribou.

She may be physically stronger than her modern American sisters, but she has the same love of adornment and wears over her fur parka or coat a bright calico protecting shirt often decorated with fancy patchwork borders.

When she joins the polar bear hunt, however, she must wear white—white drill trousers over the fur ones that both men and women wear, and white snow shirts to match the landscape and the sky.

But the Eskimo woman's chief adornments are half-chewed-down teeth which she gains in this fashion: When she has come in from a day's hunt and crawled through the various doorways of her igloo, each made smaller than the one outside to keep out as much cold air as possible, and cooked her family a dinner and put the baby and any stray orphans that may have elected her house as a home, to bed on the shelf that makes the igloos upstairs, she sits down by the light of the seal oil lamp and chews leather to make boot soles turn back over the foot so the top can be sewed on. The more the women chew, the further down their teeth are worn and the more beautiful they become in the sight of Eskimo society.

There is no suffrage question among the Eskimo—the women owns the igloo with the man and has equal voice in the council meetings.

And there are no vexatious questions about property rights to settle, because besides the igloo and personal belongings there is no property. The Eskimos cannot conceive of land as belonging to any one person. When told how it is held as private property in other parts of Canada they showed great surprise, and one old man asked if the white men also divided the oceans in the same way. —World Outlook.

Stuffy Feeling About The Nose Relieved At Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have a stuffed-up feeling in the nostrils — to be scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets in to the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Wassan, of Blair, N.B., writes: — "About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrh set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Catarrhozone is the greatest remedy for colds, etc., since people began to have colds. Get the dollar package and let the whole family use it. Medium size 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

EXPEDITING BUSINESS

Government Aims at the Prorogation of Parliament Before May 24th

RENEWAL OF BUSINESS

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, April 22. —The prorogation of parliament before May 24th is now aimed at, and the government is expediting the business before the House, with that end in view. It is not expected that the Opposition will attempt seriously to block the progress of the government measures. Hon. A. K. MacLean will deliver the budget speech on Thursday and, it is expected will announce the renewal of business, but so far as known, no other drastic changes have been decided on. Very heavy sums must be raised by the Dominion for war purposes, and the budget debate will probably be important.

A Big Budget.

OTTAWA, April 22.— The budget, which will be brought down in the Commons on Thursday next, will be the most portentious in Canada's history. It will tell of expenditures incurred during the past fiscal year, which almost trebled these of any fiscal year before the war and of the proposal for the raising of sums during the coming fiscal year, which in prewar times it would have been considered utterly impossible to raise, especially on this side of the water and mostly in Canada. It will show preposterously high figures of trade and extraordinary revenues for a country of seven and a half millions of people.

"Luxury Tax" To Be Increased

Bonar Law Will Introduce Budget This Afternoon

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 22.—Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was scheduled to introduce a budget in the Commons this afternoon, slightly increasing the tax on larger incomes, increasing the tax on tobacco, beer and spirits, and increasing the 'luxury tax' on expensive clothes, jewelry and furs, etc.

Later Despatcr Says.

LONDON, April 22. — Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer presented a record-breaking budget to the House of Commons this afternoon.

Canadian Press Despatch:

3.30 Despatch:

LONDON, April 22. — Chancellor Bonar Law, introducing the Budget in the House of Commons to-day, announced that in the last year Great Britain had advanced two and a half billion dollars to its allies, and that the United States had advanced four and a half billion dollars to the Entente. Britain's national debt is about thirty billion dollars, Bonar Law said. Heavy new taxation proposals were announced. "It is only necessary for us," he said, "to lean on the United States to the amount the other allies lean on us. In other words, we are self-supporting." The Chancellor said he had made certain suggestions regarding advances to the allies, which if adopted, would lessen Great Britain's burden considerably without in any way increasing the total obligations of the United States.

Officers Of 2nd Battalion Observed Ypres Anniversary

Fourteen officers of tre old Second Battalion commemorated the second battle of Ypres at a dinner held in Belleville on Saturday night. Peterborough was repesented by Lt.-Col. Ackerman, Col. Everett Birdsall and Lieut. Bruce Mills. This was the third aniversary of Langemarck, as it is geneally known, the first big engagement in which the Canadians stopped the Germans. Original officers renewed the unfading friendships that were established in the first months and years of the war. Next year's annual dinner will be held in this city.

British Lines Slightly Advance Last Evening

A Number of Successful Raids Were Carried Out by the British Resulting in the Capture of Prisoners and Machine Guns--Artillery Activity on Both Sides.

BRITISH OFFICIAL REPORT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 22.—The British advanced their lines slightly last night in local operations on both of the principal battle fronts, the War Office announces.

Gains were made near Villers, Bretonneux and Albert, on the Somme front and Robecq at the tip of the Flanders salient.

A strong local attack by the Germans on the front north of Albert was repulsed after the enemy had captured one of the British advanced positions:

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

We improved our positions slightly during the night in Villers, Bretonneux, Albert and Aobecq sectors. A number of successful raids were carried out by us at different points south and nort hof Lens, resulting in the capture of prisoners and machine guns.

There has been considerable artillery activity on both sides on different sectors of the British front. The enemy's shelling has been directed chiefly against our positions astride the Somme and Ancre rivers in the Lens sector, in the neighbourhood of Festubert and in the Nieppe Forest.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, April 22.—To-day's official says: A German raid last night east of Avre in the region of Thennes was repulsed. We took prisoners. Another German aid east of Rheims gained no greater success. Active artillery fighting continued at different points on the front.

GERMAN ATROCITIES ARE REVEALED BY AMERICAN MINISTER TO BELGIUM

Rows of Crosses Bear the Sinister Date of August 22, 1914—Ninety Civilians of All Ages Massed Together and Shot by a German Platoon—Prussian Horrors Conducted With Prussian Efficiency

WOMEN AND CHILDREN SUFFER

(Special to The Examiner.)

NEW YORK, April 22.—Describing hitherto unrevealed German atrocities, Brand Whitlock, United States Minister to Belgium, indicates that Prussian horrors were conducted with Prussian efficiency as part of the plan of campaign. Whitlock was in Belgium when kultur overwhelmed the land. Writing in Everybody's Magazine for May, which appears tomorrow, he tells how carefully organized barbarities followed in the wake of the German drive, being especially cruel after each German defeat.

PEOPLE HELD AS A FIRE SCREEN.

Picturing what occurred when the French resisted a German attempt to bridge the Meuse, August 23, 1914, Whitlock says:

"People were held there, evidently as a sort of screen, while the Germans began to construct a temporary bridge over the river. The Germans sent a citizen of Dinant, one of the prisoners in a boat across the river to inform the Fench that unless they ceased fiing, the civilians would be shot. But a few stray bullets still sped across the river. The prisoners were massed together, nearly ninety of them, old men and young, girls and boys, little children and babies in their mothers' arms. A platoon was called up, the colonel in command gave the word to fire and the gray soldiers in cold blood shot down those ninety persons as they stood huddled there together. Among them were twelve children under the age of six years. Six of them were little babies whose mothers as they stood up to face their pitiless murderers, held them in their arms."

CIVILIANS WERE SHOT DOWN.

The fate of the Town of Anderme, (before the war a place of 7,800 persons), is cited by Whitlock as an example of what happened when the Germans were thrown back in an attempt to cross the Meuse on a temporary bridge.

"All night the killing and pillaging went on," he says. "The crowd was ordered to walk toward the Place Des Tilleuls. Those who did not walk fast enough were shot down. A Flemish clock maker came out of his dwelling supporting his aged father-in-law. He was ordered to hold up his hands but he could not do so without letting the old man fall, so a soldier struck him in the neck with an axe. Arrived at the Place Des Hilleuls, the women and children were separated from the men and haphazard the soldiers picked out forty or fifty men and shot them down in cold blood. And all the while, day and night in the flaming streets, the pillage and murder went on. The men who described it all to me said a vivid memory of a tall, red-headed soldier who was particularly conspicuous by the ferocity with which he weilded the axe and maltreated his victim, a baby among them, in the arms of its mother."

CHILDREN WITNESSED THE MURDERS.

Speaking of the destruction of Boortmeerbeek, near Malines, Whitlock says that every time a German army was thrown back upon it, they burned forty houses.

At Dinant, Whitlock declares: "Women and children were forced to stand by and witness the murder of husbands and fathers. One woman, Madame Alnin, who had given birth to a child three days before, was borne forth on a mattress by a German soldier who said they would compel her to look on while they shot her husband. But her cries and supplications finally moved the soldiers to spare her husband's life.

"In the litle grave yard beside the church at Tamines there are hundreds of new-made gaves," writes Whitlock. "The crosses stand in seried rows. They are all new, of painted wood, alike except for the names and ages —from 13 to 84. But they all bore the same cinister date, August 22, 1914.

THE VICTIMS LINED UP AND SHOT.

"About six hundred men were massed in St. Martin's Square, by the river bank, and thewomen folk, their wives, mothers, daughters, were assembled to witness the scene."

Quoting an eye witness, Writlock describes how the Germans lined up the victims, then tumbled 150 of them backward into the river, pushing back with bayonets those who tried to swim ashore. After this the machine guns were then turned on the remaining lines, and all but twenty swept away by the bullets. After dark the German soldiers, with pocket flash lights, went among the bodies, killing the wounded.

FAMOUS GERMAN AVIATOR WAS KILLED IN SOMME VALLEY

Capt. Baron Von Richthofen Was Credited With Nearly One Hundred Allied Aeroplanes.

FUNERAL TO-DAY

(United Press).

(By William Philip Simms).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 22.—Baron Rittmeister Von Richthofen, the famous German aviator, was killed on Sunday in the Somme Valley, it was announced to-day.

At his funeral to-day he will be given the same honours as a British flight officer.

Richthofen was the greatest of the German flight commanders. His squadron, known among the British airmen as "Richthofen's Circus," has been mentioned in numerous German communiques, and has figured in many works of fiction on the war.

Richthofen was last mentioned in the German War Office statemen of April 8, when it was announced that he had achieved his 77th victory.

Richthofen was killed behind the British lines. There are no details of his death yet available. British airmen speak highly of him.

Just north of Albert during the night, after heavy cannonading, there was local fighting in the mists until after midnight. The British lost one post, but gained ground elsewhere.

The fighting was resumed at 4.30 this morning. At the time of cabling the results cannot be given.

Confirmed in London.

Germans Are Preparing For Another Offensive

By Constantly Extending Their Drives Into New Sectors the Germans Hope to Exhaust the French Reserves Which Are Sustaining the British Army Clear to the North Sea

AMERICA MUST RUSH TROOPS

(By Henry Wood.)
(United Press Service.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, April 22.—By constantly extending their drives into new sectors the Germans unquestionably hope to exhaust the French reserves which already are sustaining the British armies clear to the North Sea.

These tactics make it imperative that America rush troops as fast as possible.

A FRESH DRIVE.

There are numerous indications that the Germans are preparing for a fresh drive between Amiens and Arras, harmonizing with their system of exploiting drives when successful and advancing these where the enemy successfully resists. This, the German avoid useless sacrifice, but they mainstrategists believe, permits them to tain their temporarily abandoned droves in a condition permitting immediate resumption of the offensive.

From the Ailette River to the North Sea, only two offensive sectors remain, between Amiens and Arras, and between Nieuport of Ypres.

Irish Railways Are Taken Over

Arms and Ammunition Removed From All Stores—Precautionary Measures

CONSCRIPTION DENOUNCED

(Canadian Press.)

London, April 22. — The military authorities have taken over the control of the Irish railways, the post offices and the telephone exchanges. The police on Saturday removed all the arms and ammunition from gunsmith shops in Dublin where it is reported that similar action will be taken throughout Ireland.

Nowhere does any disturbance or even excitement seem to have occurred, either at the pledge taking meetings or at the numerous political gatherings throughout Ireland on Sunday, at which conscription was denounced in strong terms.

OPPOSITION CRYSTALLIZED.

Dublin, April 22. — Opposition to conscription has crystallized over the week end into a semblance of organization. The authorities are correspondingly alert to prevent a repetition of their Easter rebellion.

A large section of the Irish people must be regarded as solemnly pledged to fight against the enforcement of conscription. Great numbers accepted the now familiar pledge from the priests at Sunday's services.

The majority of the colleges and universities probably will declare a recess soon and the students will return home.

POSITIONS FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS.

A position as clerk, (assistant in figure, work, etc.) in an office is open. Not necessarily need to be a trained man. One with adaptability and common sense would about fill the bill. Apply for address at the office of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, City Buildings.

The Agent of the Commission at Toronto, says he has now many calls for help. A number are wanted at Orillia, Ont. These include moulders, coremakers, blacksmith and machine hands, bench hands, tire setters and handy men. Surely no man should remain out of work.

If any who wish to enquire will write to the Soldiers' Aid Commission, 16 College Street, Toronto, they will get a prompt reply. State age, condition in, married or single, what family they have, occupation prior to service, and experience in the occupation followed. Those who wish to answer should do so promptly.

Frank Jenne Says:

Who was it said that in Canada every one has the chance of starting with a clean slate? We do know who says every Canadian can now start the Spring right with a bright, new thoroughly reliable hat or cap. At my store there are "Borsalina" and "Knox" hats. Caps in great variety. There is just the style and colour you are looking for. The prices are right. "Come to me."

There are two kinds of tea: ordinary tea and Salada. Salada is more economical since it takes so much less to make a satisfying infusion.

Estimate of The German Losses

German Writers Estimate the Grand Total German Casualties Since Outbreak of War at 5,000,000

INCLUDES THE NAVY

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, April 22.—Carl Bleistreu, a German military writer in the Neueuropa, describes the German losses on the Western front, between August, 1914, and August, 1917, totalled 2,604,961 in killed and prisoners. On the Eastern front, he said, the total killed and prisoners were 1,484,550.

German writers estimate the German losses between August, 1917, and Jan. 31, 1918, as 367,450 killed and taken prisoner on "both fronts."

German writers estimate the grand total of Germans killed and prisoners, adding those dying of illness and wounds and the casualties in Colonial and naval fighting, etc., at five million.

GRANT AND THORPE AT THE MOTOR SHOW

A Comprehensive Display of Electrical Appliances and Allied Supplies

Pep! Power! Themendous power —steady, unfaltering—that makes any motor a better motor, that makes any motorist a happier motorist — this is what Grant and Thorpe's Willard Storage Battery Station makes a leading specialty of. Whatever car you drive—Ford, McLaughlin, Overland, Maxwell—or any make of auto, Mr. Fisher, who is the expert in this department, will give it a new impetus, new vigor. Your can becomes downright spunky, uphills are turned into downhills, level stretches become as the free, unobstructed air to the wrirving aeroplane. Increased mileage and up-keep are a matter of course.

Car owners at the Motor Show last week were specially interested in the exhibit of storage batteries and automobile accessories made by Messrs. Grant and Thorpe. This fine representation of electric supplies was complete, and courteous attendants cheerfully explained the merits of the various accessories displayed. There was also a full line of the popular Ever-Ready Daylo Products, (the light that cannot blow out), including dry batteries, flashlights, storage batteries, reneal batteries, electic lanterns and Mayda Auto Lamps, all of which Grant and Thorpe can supply jobbers at wholesale prices. The Macbeth Lenses were shown which convert a headlight into one in accordance with the new government safety regulations.

Grant and Thorpe's Willard service station has filled a want that motor men have been quick to appreciate. Any trouble with one's car can be adjusted in quick time. At this station there is carried a complete stock of new Willard Batteries and repair parts for instant service.

RUSSIA PROTESTS

Authorities Feel Indignant at Action of German Troops In Firing on Russian Towns and Shooting Populace

ASKS ASSURANCE

MOSCOW, April 22. — Foreign Minister Tchitcherin to-day sent the following wireless message to the German Foreign Office: "I have authoritative information that German troops are firing on Russian towns and shooting the populace.

"At Lepet, German troops exterminated an entire family, including the women.

Peasants Resisted.

"At Novo-Selki, peasants resisted seizures, killing a German officer. German troops fireh on the town with machine guns, exterminating the populace.

"We feel the deepest indignation, and are protesting, asking assurance against any repetition and punishment of those guilty."

NEW G. T. R. BRIDGE AT CAMPBELLFORD NEARLY COMPLETED

The new high level G.T.R. bridge at Campbellford is almost completed, and is expected to be completed in time for the opening of navigation. The company has pushed the work as rapidly as possible. The big concrete abutments, and iron spans are reported to be in position, and only the filling of the appoaches remains. The station has also to be raised to the new bridge level, and there are other incidental details to be cleaned up. In the main, however, the work is nearing completion and will soon offer an unobstructed passage to the boats that are expected to ply up and down the Trent this summer. This will be welcome information to the citizens who have been lead to expect that the canal will bring business advantages about which other persons have been openly skeptical.

Train Service Will Not Be Restored Here Next Sunday

The restoration of the regular service which was reported some time ago to become effective through the G.T.R. service on April 28th, will not apply here, it was learned to-day, and for the present there is no definite information as to when the old schedule on the local sections will be resumed. It is expected that the Lakefield time table for summer will be issued before May 24th, but there is no explicit instructions yet from the G.T.R. headquarters. Mr. Frank Young is taking up this question with the company, in order that the Stoney Lake navigation routes mayy not be held up.

BANDSMEN, ATTENTION

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, APRIL 22, 1918.

WHERE ARE THE FLAGS?

To-day is the anniversary of the beginning of the second Battle of Ypres. Three years ago to-night the gallant first Canadian Division threw themselves as a living barrier across the breach that the enemy had made in the line near Ypres, and at a cost of 6,000 casualties, saved the channel ports. That battle, although necessarily ending in a falling back of the lines, was a great Canadian victory. To-day every flag pole in the city should have its flag proudly flying in honour of the gallantry of Canada's sons three years ago. Unfortunately few flags are to be seen. Is it possible that in thirty-six months the glory of April 22 has been forgotten?

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

Peterborough will extend a hearty welcome to His Grace the Archbishop of Algoma, on his first visit to this city. It is indeed fortunate that he should be here to-morrow to take part in the celebration of St. George's Day, a day that should be more generally observed in Peterborough than has been the case. To-morrow is England's day, and our citizens generally never had greater love and admiration in their hearts for the Mother country than at the present moment. We people in Canada have just begun to realize the extent of England's sacrifices in this war—we can hardly yet realize that of that huge army of the Union Jack that has grown up since 1914, seventy per cent. are English. The cables have been telling us during the past few weeks of how gloriously these English soldiers have fought and died, fought for days until they were so tired that they staggered like drunken men, outnumbered four and five, sometimes ten, to one, but taking a deadly toll from the enemy as they doggedly resisted every foot of his advance. Let us remember these things to-morrow, St. George's Day.

A SPLENDID RESPONSE.

The splendid total of about $1,500 secured by the Great War Veterans in their second annual tag day on Saturday must have been exceedingly gratifying to the officers and members of the Association inasmuch as it revealed to them that their fellow citizens were ready to support them in any legitimate enterprise undertaken by the organization. The response to the appeal of the Veterans was a ready one, and the fine showing made in Lakefield, Norwood, Havelock and Keene, which four villages contributed nearly $300 of the total, showed that the people of the outlying sections of Peterborough County are in accord with the citizens of Peterborough in supporting the work of the Great War Veterans' Association. The people of Lakefield are to be especially congratulated upon their contribution of $150 to the day's receipts. As a result of Saturday's effort the Veterans' relief fund is in splendid shape for another year's work and those who subscribed on Saturday will have the satisfaction of knowing that the G.W.V.A. are now in such condition as regards finances, that they should be able to see that no legitimate case of distress among the families of veterans or of soldiers who are still overseas, goes unrelieved.

GOOD ADVICE.

Mr. W. J. Smith, chairman of the Ontario Baseball Commission laid down a principle at the annual meeting of the Toronto Amateur Baseball Association the other night that points the way for Canadian citizens every-where. Mr. Smith called attention to the tendency shown by some organizations to use the extra hour of daylight provided by the Daylight Savings Measure, to increase athletic activity.

"This bill was passed mainly for the purpose of giving extra daylight in order to help in the all important matter of food producton," he remarked. "We should live up to the spirit as well as to the letter of the law."

There is a lesson in these few sentences for us all. If the hour of daylight gained by moving on the clock is only going to be used in driving a golf ball around the links, in buzzing over the countryside in a motor car, lolling around in a canoe down the river, or frittered away in some other amusement, then all the purpose of the government in passing the measure has been defeated, and the arguments used by the rural sections that the bill was only favoured by city people because it gave them more time for recreation, have been justified.

The extra six hours of daylight every week can be made golden ones if they are used in the greater production campaign. Back yard and vacant lot gardens should flourish everywhere under the new scheme, and the splendid results secured last year should be left far behind by this year's effort if people will live up to Mr. Smith's advice and also live up to the spirit of the Daylight Saving Measure.

WHY NOT WOOD?

Although it may seem to be harping too much on one string, the Examiner feels once again constrained to point out to the City Council the necessity of considering carefully the fuel question, especially with a view of securing an adequate substitute for coal. A large supply of wood in the Municipal Fuel Yard would leave this city in shape to face a shortage in coal—a shortage that seems imminent in view of the statements of the Fuel Controller of Ontario. Mr. R. C. Harris, who after referring to the exceeding gravity of the fuel situation, points out that he can not too strongly impress on the people of Ontario the need for conserving coal and using substitutes:

"The entire coal production of the United States from April 1, 1918, to March 31, 1919, will not be sufficient to meet the needs of Canada and the United States," says Mr. Harris. "Therefore it is necessary that every fuel consumer shall use every effort from now on to conserve fuel, secure substitutes for coal, and save fuel wherever possible.

"I say to you that during the winter of 1918 and 1919 you are not going to get sufficient coal to keep your homes as comfortable as during the winter of 1917 and 1918. It will not be possible to heat the entire house or maintain high temperatures. Comfort cannot be considered. The best the United States can do for us is to keep us from actual hardship."

"If we get enough fuel during the winter of 1918-1919 to keep us from actual hardship we are getting our full share," the Commissioner concluded.

In view of these facts this need of action on the part of the local council is readily apparent. Now is the time. Next winter will be too late.

EMPLOYMENT FOR VETERANS.

The problem of finding suitable employment for the returned soldier which, first of all, should be a Federal matter, as the Examiner has pointed out several times, but towards which there is a provincial and municipal responsibility as well, is making itself more and more felt throughout Canada, and in the matter of all our war efforts, should not be neglected. The Toronto Globe effectively points out the necessity for action in the following editorial:

"That there are many problems yet to be solved in connection with the employment of soldiers who have, because of wounds, shell shock, or illness, been relieved of further service in the field and returned to civil life, is becoming increasingly apparent.

In view of the general scarcity of labour in Canada the principal difficulty is obviously not that of finding employment for the men. It is in finding employment of a character that will conform to their peculiar physical condition.

Experience is bringing home the fact that many of these men are more willing than capable of resuming ordinary civil vocations. Fortunately it does not apply to all cases, but unfortunately it does in altogether too many. Even men who physically and mentally appear to be equal to the performance of almost any ordinary task break down, often under the slightest strain, and are compelled to throw up their job. This occurs in both physical and mental vocations.

As time goes on the health of a large proportion of this class of men will probably gradually return, approximately at least, to its normal, pre-war condition, but in the meantime their case demands sympathetic and practical consideration from the Government as well as from employers.

Every returned man who has "done his bit" in the trenches has been making a vicarious sacrifice on behalf of those of us remaining at home. It is therefore ours to "do our bit" for him. And the best way we can do it is to assist him in finding the particular niche in the industrial life of the country which he is, under the circumstances, best able to fill. This is both a privilege and a duty.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"With me the Military Service Act, as it is now enforced, is a splendid exemption act, but a very poor conscription act. It has produced something like 200,000 exemptions and about 30,000 soldiers."— Hon. F. B. Carvell.

The power to come back as evidenced by the Americans' first big clash with the enemy will convince the Germans that the more of these fine fighters come over the Atlantic the less the chance of a Teuton victory.

The third German attempt to roll up the British army seems to have wound up in a failure. The part of the line held by the Canadians may be the scene of the next smash.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

IT LASTS BETTER.

(Toronto Star.)

Yesterday we quoted the saying of Napoleon that "the British seldom win any battle but the last one," and to this we should have added the reply of Wellington to the question as to whether he considered the British troops braver than any others: "I do not know that they are any braver, but they stay brave five minutes longer."

KAMARAD!

(New York Herald.)

Karlsruhe doesn't like it. Being bombed from the air gets on the nerves. Karlsruhe begs Berlin to make an agreement that this bombing from the air shall cease. Nothing doing! "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," and anyway Karlsruhe is an important military centre. It is useless to appeal to Berlin, for soon Berlin will be crying for help. We have just begun to fight!

MORE THAN THEY BARGAINED

(Buffalo Express.)

German newspapers are beginning to discuss seriously the financial burdes which the Germans will have to assume if they are defeated. They will have to assume much more than they have begun to consider yet. The indemnities which they have levied and the plunder which they have taken from Belgium and France will have to be restored, ad the wanton destruction made good.

SHOULD BUTTERFLIES TOIL?

(Vancouver Sun.)

There are large numbers of girls of the kind who consider themselves "society," who are not raised with any idea that they have any duties to perform in the world. They and their mothers do nothing but set a bad example by living in luxurious idleness.

It is this sort of people who ought to receive some special attention from Parliament. Cannot some way be devised of making them do something to justify their existence?

PETTY TACTICS.

(Kingston Whig.)

Mr. O'Connor's enforced resignation leads to but one conclusion; Sir Joseph Flavelle had more friends in the government than O'Connor. The Union government cannot afford to stop t such petty tactics. It was entrusted by the people of Canada to carry on the war, not to punish a civil servant who dared to do his duty. The public will never consent to allow this matter to rest where it is.

A FELLOW FEELING.

(Toronto Globe.)

Sir Sam Hughes in defending Armand Lavergne described him as "an impulsive young man who perhaps lacked balance." Perhaps a fellow-feeling accounts for Sam's kindness.

THE LAST BATTLE.

(Montreal Star.)

The last great battle of the war is not yet, but when it comes it will be won by the side which is able to throw the greatest number of battalions into the line, the side which can command the greatest resources, not of invaded territory, but of men. And it will be then (and only then) that the full significance of the price in man-power Germany has paid in the last month will be fully understood and appreciated.

IRELAND'S OPPORTUNITY.

(Baltimore Sun.)

The lamentable feature about this situation is the wrong and the loss which Ireland is inflicting upon herself—the blindness which keeps her from seeing the greatness of her opportunity, the hate which causes her to strike at the very things that the Irish heart generally revers. If this battle for right and humanity is lost, Ireland loses the hope for the realization of which she has struggled through many years of storm and gloom. If it is won without her aid (and won it surely will be) she may be given home rule, but can she ever recover her self respect? It is not to curse, but to weep, that Ireland—of all countries—should be missing on such a glorious battle line as this. Oh, if American Irishmen could only carry their message to the heart and brain of Ireland!

REV. BEVERLS SMITH PREACHED YESTERDAY

Representative for Bible Society Preached in St. Luke's and All Saints' Churches.

Rev. R. Beverly Smith, B.A., secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, occupied the pulpit at All Saints' Church on Sunday morning. He enlarged upon the work of the society, which has closed a very successful year. During the last year it had distributed ten million copies of the Bible. Seven million had been distributed to the soldiers, with four hundred thousnand to our own Canadian boys. In the evening Rev. R. Beverly Smith spoke at St. Luke's Church.

A service of intercession was held in the evening at All Saints' Church for the success of the Allied troops and the men at the front.

The service was very largely attended.

CANADIAN SHIPS WILL ARM AGAINST THE SUB.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 22.—By virtue of an order-in-Council dated April 18th, the Minister of the Naval Service is empowered to give directions that any British ship, registered in Canada shall be equipped with such apparatus for protecting it against operations of the enemy as may be specified, and the crew of the ship shall be properly instructed in the use of such apparatus.

It is also provided that every vessel built in Canada, which is completed after April 1st, 1918, shall be fitted for such defensive armament as the Minister shall direct, and every vessel built in Canada and completed before that date shall be fitted with such defensive armament as the Minister may direct before the vessel leaves Canada on any voyage for for which the armament is necessary.

ESCAPES U. S. PRISON, SERVES WITH CANUCKS.

Lansing, Mich., April 22. — Edward Putnam, alias William Brennan, who escaped from the Jackson prison while he was serving a sentence for larceny, and enlisted in 1915, in the Canadian army, was graned an absolute pardon on Saturday.

Putnam served at Vimy Ridge and was so badly wounded that he is virtually helpless. On being discharged he came back to Michigan and was recognized and returned to prison. He will be taken to London, Ont., where he will be cared for at the expense of the Canadian government.

HEBREWS RETURN TO PALESTINE

World Wide Events to be Discussed at Conference to be Held in St. Paul's Church.

So great is the interest taken all over the world in the movement to restore Palestine to the Jews, a great demand has sprung up for information concerning the significance of the event. It will be interesting to many in Peterborough, therefore, to know that the whole subject is to be dealt with fully at the approaching conference for the deepening of spiritual life and the study of prophetic truth, which will open in St. Paul's Church, April 28th, and last for most of a week, with two sessions a day. At the evening sessions, the speaker, Rev. Lewis Sperry Chafer, of East Orange, New Jersey, purposes delivering a series of addresses, lasting probably five nights, which will deal with the subject at length.

WORLD-WIDE EVENTS.

In the book of Genesis, God made a covenant with Abraham and his seed after him, that the land of Palestine would be given to them forever. Later God told the Jews that though all nations might perish, yet he would never make a complete end of Jews. Prophesy foretold, however, that through the sin of the Jews, they would be dispossessed of their land on three occasions, and also regathered three times. They lost it the first time when they were made captive in Egypt; they lost it the second time during the Babylonian captivity, and they are now in their third dispersion. But just as prophesy foretold all these events, it has even more clearly foretold that they are to be gathered for the third and last time, and that this re-gathering will take place in connection with world-wide events of great importance. This is what is taking place now.

FINE ADDRESSES.

In the five address which Rev. Mr. Chafer, who is one of the most noted Bible teachers on the Continent, will deliver on this subject, the full significance of present world-wide events will be dealt with. Although comparatively few people realize it, the Bible has foretold the present world situation in a most compelling way. The conference is to be open to the public in order that the speaker's messages may reach a large number. Recently, Mr. Chafer addressed a series of business men's luncheons, at one of the leading hotels in Toronto. The suggestion has been made that arrangements might be made for him to address a luncheon of representative business men during his stay in Peterborough.

All Men Must Find Employment

Chief of Police Thompson is Going to Give This City Some Attention

Chief of Police Thompson is looking over the local situation with a view of weeding out all the males who refuse to work, whether they have means or not. Even in a city the size of Peterborough there are a few who have nothing more to do than ride around in a motor car, a sthe Chief of Police of Toronto puts it.

"We have already received the names of a number of people of means who have no useful occupation," stated Col. Grasett, head of the Toronto police force, "and unless they obtain employment at once they will be prosecuted. No one between those ages can live on their means. Some people have no more useful occupation than riding around in a motor car. Well, this is going to stop."

Col. Grasett intimated that officers were already engaged in making investigations, that those not engaged in useful work would indeed be well advised in obtaining employment immediately.

Arrested in Stratford.

The first to be arrested at Stratford under the new order providing that men must engaged in useful work, Thomas Gallagher, Harold Gowing and Frank Lince were fined $2.

LETTER TO PETERBORO . . . KITCHENER LEAGUE.

The following letter has been received by the Kitchener League of Peterboro:

France, April 2, 1918.

In the absence of Captain H. C. Cross, who is now in England, the parcel of socks from the Kitchener League were sent to me for disposal, since I am at present in charge of our forward work in this area. I just wanted you to know that they arrived safely, are splendid socks, and are being given out by me up in the trenches to the boys who need them, and I can assure you they are greatly appreciated. We have had some wet weather, so they arrived at an opportune time. Some have already been given out and the rest will follow very soon.

Captain Cross left for England about three weeks ago. I don't know how badly he may be needing socks in his work there but if your Club see fit to send any more to France, and wish to address them to me I shall do my best to see that they are given out where most needed.

When I saw the parcel came from Peterboro, I was interested, since my home is at Tweed, not very far from there. Thanking you and the Club again, I am, yours very sincerely.

—the Best Solution of the Store-Clerk Problem

Canada's merchants are face to face with a new problem—

—the scarcity, higher cost and lower grade of saleshelp.

Because clerks are fewer store needs demand that they be better clerks.

Because clerk-hire is more costly, the merchant must expect each clerk to attend more customers, make more sales.

The merchant who finds the scarcity and high cost of clerk-hire a serious handicap should investigate the advantages of the National Cash Register and N. C. R. methods.

This infallible machine prevents clerks from making mistakes, checks each clerk's sales, imbues them with a sense of responsibility, helps them to make more sales and quicker sales.

So it reduces the number of clerks required and increases the efficiency of each clerk.

By relieving the merchant of much detail-worry, it gives him more time to spend with customers.

It performs each of these important functions automatically. The literature we send free on request will show you that in 6 to 7 months the National Cash Register pays for itself in the clerk-hire it saves.

PETERBOROUGH MAN OBTAINS EXEMPTION

Guy Nimmo Was Exempted Until June 1st

In a report covering a number of cases decided by Mr. Justice Duff, Central Appeal Judge, appears the name of Guy Nimmo, who until a few months ago was foreman of the tool-room of the Metal Products Company of this city. His claim for exemption was disallowed by the Appeal Tribunal in Peterborough.

Report o fthe Case.

A report of the case follows:

Re Guy Nimmo (Serial 929621 P.C.)

A foreman tool-maker and marine engine fitter granted temporary exemption, which is only to be extended on proof of continuous employment in such calling.

March 19, 1918.

The facts affecting this application sufficiently appear in the judgment of the Central Appeal Judge.

The Central Appeal Judge: Before the Local Tribunal at Petermorough the evidence was largely directed to family matters, but it appeared that the subject of the application was foreman of the tool-room with the Metal Products Company.

Exemption was disallowed.

On the 27th of December exemption was disallowed by the Appeal Tribunal at Peterborough.

Meanwhile on the 20th of December, Canadian Vickers, Ltd., wrote from Montreal to the Registrar at Montreal: "We beg to inform you that this man is now in our employment, and we would endorse his application for exemption on this account. We shall be much obliged if you will instruct Nimmo as to the course to pursue to obtain exemption," and on the 29th of December, Canadian Vickers telegraphed the Registrar at Kingston to this effect: "This man is employed in our engine shops on marine engine building, on cargo ship for Imperial Government, and cannot be spared by us. Notice of hearing of appeal requiring him to attend before the Appeal Tribunal at Peterborough on 26th December, at one o'clock, was not received until that date, rendering his attendance impossible. Will greatly appreciate if you will advise as what action should be taken by him in order to obtain exemption which is being granted to those employed in the shipbuilding industry."

On the 26th of January, 1918, the Appeal Tribunal gave leave to appeal saying: "Nimmo did not appear before me at Peterborough. I read over the pencil memo of his testimony before the Local Tribunal—No. 276. He was then working for the Metal Products, Montreal. On the material before me I affirm the decision of the Local Tribunal. I grant leave to appeal to the Central Appeal Judge that his relation to the Canadian Vickers, Ltd., may be investigated and passed upon."

It appears from the applicant's affidavit, sworn the 6th of February, 1918, now before the Central Appeal Judge, that he was employed by Canadian Vickers, Limited, for a period of months during the summer of 1917, as machinist, then went to Peterborough, Ontario, as foreman toolmaker in the Metal Products Co., for shell work, and is employed by Canadian Vickers, Ltd., for the past two months as marine engine fitter in the engine shop, on the cargo ships now being built for the Imperial Government.

In the foregoing circumstances exemption is granted until the 1st of June, 1918; but, if, and so long only as the applicant continues to be employed as a marine engine fitter or toolmaker.

On any application for a further extension of the exemption period, the applicant will be expected to satisfy the tribimal that he has continuously been employed as indicated in his affidavit; producing, if necessary, his time sheets for the intervening period.

TWO AND A QUARTER MILLIONS.

The Canadian Y.M.C.A. is asking for $2,250,000 to enable it to "carry on" for another year. This will mean that every one of the boys in camp in Canada, in England, and in France, will be given something of the joys of home for the nominal sum of between five and six dollars per man. Looked at in this light, the Y.M.C.A. budget appears modest in the extreme. Candidly, we should like to know of any other institution that gives the same value for the money.

Many a mother, if she had it, would gladly donate the two and a quarter millions asked for to continue and extend this work, if thereby she could secure for her son the comforts, the solace, and the close, intimate touch with home that the Y.M.C.A. provides.

Till the boys come home, the Red Triangle takes home to the boys. What every man and woman of us would do for the boys "over there" had we but the chance, the Y.M.C.A. can do and is doing for us. Its system of work is a triumph of organization. Not only does it reach every man, but it ministers to every side of each man. As the flaming red three-sided symbol indicates, body, mind and spirit are catered to. Tired bodies, minds made soggy by the monotony of camp life, souls distressed and torn by loneliness and temptation, are strengthened and renewed by this ministry.

NEARLY BRINGS OFF A SECOND LYNCHING

COLLINSVILLE, Okla., April 22.—Henry Rheimer, suspected of disloyalty, was hanged by a crowd of fifty men here Friday night, but after he had swung until he had become semi-conscious the police persuaded the would-be executioners to cut him down on the promise that he would be given a fair trial by the County Council of Defence today.

It was in Collinsville that an alleged pro-German was lynched about two weeks ago. The first event of its kind in the United States.

Will Treat Canada As A State Of The Union

U. S. Promises Supply of Coal to Both Ontario and Quebec —Railways Make Promises to Haul if Miners Begin to Work Early.

WEST IS RESTRICTED

OTTAWA, April 22—At the close of the conference held here this week of coal operators, labour delegates and transportation representatveis, with Mr. Neale, representing the United States Fuel Administration and Mr. C. A. Magrath, Dominion Fuel Conroller. A statement was handed out as follows:

1. That anthracite coal supplies to points in Western Canada will be very materially restricted during the present coal year.

2. Under the circumstances, it is safe to predict that no American anthracite coal will be available for shipment to points west of Winnipeg.

3. It is also proposed to restrict shipments of anthracite to Canadian lake ports during the early part of the present season.

4. That the public, both east and west, must be given to understand distinctly, that conservation of coal must be practised to the utmost extent by all classes of consumers.

SAME AS STATES OF U. S.

Mr. Magrath's memorandum said that Sir Geo. Foster had been able to announce that the attitude of the United States Fuel Administrator was that Canada would receive precisely the same treatment as the various States of the Union. The Western States had been given to understand that they must use the softer coal of the West and that the available anthracite would have to be conserved for the purpose of supplying the eastern part of the Union and the Province of Ontario and Quebec.

THE CHANCES FOR OUTPUT.

The Western coal operators stated the ability to increase the production of butuminous coal by 1,280,000 tons and of lignite coal by 1,225,000 tons. The operators urged that dealers and the public take a large portion of their supply during the summer months when the railroads are in a position to handle it.

The memorandum of the Nova Scotia operators stated that the production in Nova Scotia mines had been estimated at 5,950,000 tons, but the production actually attained was 5,660,000 tons.

WANT WATTERS TO APPEAL.

The suggestion was made that the Government should ask Mr. J. C. Watters, President of the Dominion Trades and Labour Council, to visit the mining centres of Nova Scotia, and appeal to the workmken for the greatest possible production. It is estimated that the production in 1918 will be 230,000 tons lees than the production of 1917.

Peterboro' Musician Delights Audience In London, Ont.

Miss Agnes Logan, Aged Twelve Years, Gave a Wonderful Exhibition in the Western City

One of the most remarkable recitals ever given under the auspices of the Women's Music Club marked the closing of the season on Wednesday night in the Normal school, remarkable from the fact that the artiste who provided the major portion of the programme was a child pianist, who already in her brief years has travelled far in the direction of high achievement, and who undoubtedly is destined to a successful career.

Little Agnes Logan, of Peterboro, is 12 years old, but small for her age, looks even younger. She is a pupil of the Peterboro Conservatory of Music. Notwithstanding the fact that famous pianists have predicted for her a brilliant career, she is an unassuming little girl, with quaint pigtails, white frock and blue ribbons —happy over her ability to play, but evidently quite unconscious that she is able to do anything out of the ordinary. Heralded as a "child wonder" much was expected of her, and expectations were much more than realised.

MUSICAL PRODIGY.

Possessed of a command of technique that other even quite talented people might take a lifetime to achieve, the playing of this young girl is marked by a gratifying cleanness, the absolute ease which comes from entire muscular control and flexibility, and a beautifully brilliant, yet liquid tone.

Richly endowed with artistic temperament, the maturity of her intellectual and artistic grasp of the content of her numbers can only be explained by the fact that the child is a musical prodigy.

Not the least remarkable feature of her musicianship is the absolute reliability of her memory. As every real artiste should, she played her entire programme last night from memory, including the brilliant Weber concerto, which proved a dramatic climax for the evening.

Little Miss Logan has been as fortunate in having Miss Jeanette Kilmaster of Toronto for a teacher as the teacher has been fortunate in having so talented a pupil.

Miss Kilmaster who has frequently been heard in recital here, came up from Toronto with her pupil, and not only played the second piano part of the Weber concerto, but presented another phase of her own talent, singing a couple of groups of numbers.

DISPLAYS FINE ART.

To return to Agnes Logan: She made her bow in Schubert's "impromptu in B flat played with style, finish and authority. A couple of Chopin Etudes were next given with delicacy and poetic charm, combined with a Rameau number. Rippling, bubbling, sparkling, came the "Dance of the Elves," by Sapellnikoff, with here and there bits of finely sustained left-hand melody to a graceful running accompaniment in the right hand. Finally there was the brilliant Weber cocerto in F minor, with its martial passages and ecstatic climax. The delighted audience insisted on an encore after each appearance. — London Advertiser.

REV. DR. WALLACE AT TRINITY CHURCH

Former Pastor of Charlotte Street Church Preached at Both Services

Rev. Dr. F. H. Wallace, dean of the Faculty of the University of Toronto, preached at both services in Trinity Methodist church yesterday. Rev. Mr. Walace was at one time pastor of the old Charlotte street Methodist church, and is well known throughout the city and district.

His text at the evening service was taken from Matthew 6:10: "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done." In his exposition of his text the speaker referred to a present kingdom which was taught by Christ. The kingdom of God is ever present with Christ and Christ-like men, said the Rev. Mr. Wallace. The time when Chirst's kingdom will be established on this earth is not for us to know. The victory of our faith is to hold fast in the midst of the present world chaos. We have Christ's guarantee for the final perfection and consummation of the final kingdom of God.

No man prays for anything, and accomplishes anything, who does not help to fulfill his own prayer, said the speaker.

ALLIED PRISONERS ESCAPE.

German Guards Reduced to Supply Men for Big Drive.

GENEVA, April 22.— Guardians in prison camps in the Rhine towns have been so reduced, because every German is wanted in the West, that escapes across the Rhine into Switzerland are becoming more frequent daily.

One American and three British soldiers who escaped from German camps this week have arrived at Berne, and yesterday nineteeen Frenchmen, former prisoners, joyously marched through the streets of Geneva.

All the former captives say the Germans are hiding their losses in the offensive on the Western front, and that Germany is on the verge of starvatio. Chocolate, they say, costs £2 a kilogram, while soap brings 30 francs a pound.

PILES ENTIRELY CURED.

Mr. Wm. Woodell, 107 St. John St., Carleton, St. John, N.B., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching, bleeding piles, and as a result have been entirely cured. For years I was a great sufferer from this distressing ailment and can say that three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. You may use this letter for the benefit of others.

1,385 Rat Pelts Sold For $1,800.50

Top Prices Were Paid at Closing Sales on Saturday

Musk rats skins took a jump in price during the past week of 5c a skin, and on Saturday afternoon a big deal was put through when over $3000 changed hands at Perry's Hotel for skins brought in from the north country.

BOUGHT 1385 SKINS AT $1.30.

Mr. Curvin, Dublin street, bought up 1025 skins at $1.30, paying the high price on account of the drying method, his purchase having been dried square, which leaves the skins in a condition to be cut to better advantage than the bow dried. These skins were from Emily and Enniskmore. Mr. Parsons of Omemee bought up 300 skins at $1.27 at the same time.

On Tuesday last Mr. Curvin bougtht up 1000 flat dried skins at Curve Lake and Chemong at $1.27. Mr. Curvin says the skins are the best quality he has ever handled, but the visible supply the shortest, hence the advance in price, which in one year has jumped from 68c to $1.27 and $1.30. He will dispose of his purchase in New York, Montreal and Toronto.

What Is a Rummage Sale?

An enquirer has asked what sort of a sale a rummage sale is. According to modern experience, a rummage sale is generally conducted by a resourceful number of ladies working on behalf of some benevolent, charitable, patriotic or missionary association for the purpose of devoting the proceeds of such sale for the benefit of the funds of said laudable object. The friends of the association are first asked to "rummage" through their households and unearth all the cast-off clothing, millinery, footwear, bric-a-brac and second-hand articles to be found from cellar to garret, and make a gift of them to the ladies conducting the rummage sale. These goods are afterwards carefully assorted, ticketed with bargain prices, and displayed in some central store premises, and sold to the highest bidders for spot cash.

The Fraser Mission Band of St. Paul's church have the reputation for running some record-breaking rummage sales on behalf of their favourite Mission funds, and are again planning another, to be held the end of this week, particulars of which may be found in another column.

WINDSOR BEHIND THE TIME.

Walkerville, April 22. — Notwithstanding a resolution passed by the Border Chamber of Commerce, a few days ago, urging Walkerville to join with Windsor in keeping the clocks where hey were, instead of moving the hands an hour ahead, the town council of this municipality at a meeting declared for the new time. This action leaves Windsor the only municipality in Canada to ignore the government's daylight saving plan.

The object of Windsor's refusal is that she wishes to keep her time in agreement with that of her big neighbor across the river (Detroit) whose time is naturally one hour slower than that of the Canadian side. Detroit like all other American cities has adopted the daylight saving system, and its time now corresponds to that of Windsor previous to the change.

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH BRONCHITIS
Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup GAVE INSTANT RELIEF

Bronchitis is a disease which is very prevalent during the late winter and early spring, when there are sudden atmospheric changes. It is a condition of inflammation of the bronchial tubes which produces mucous or phlegm. This irritates the throat and causes you to cough in order to get rid of it. The cough may be tight or loose according as to whether this mucous is sticky and hard to remove, or soft and easily expelled.

Bronchitis is not really dangerous but the complications which are liable to follow makes it necessary to get rid of it at the first sign. This you can do by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for over 25 years.

John D. McFarlane, Jr., S.W. Margaree, N.S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I found gave me instant relief. It is the best remedy for bronchitis I know of, and I now take care that I always have a bottle of it on hand."

See that you get "Dr. Wood's." Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c.; manufactured by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Did It Ever Occur to You?

That the FORD is the only car now selling for less money than before the war?

Have you considered that perhaps RIGHT NOW you can buy a Ford car for less money than you will be able to for some years to come?

If you contemplate buying a car THIS YEAR, you would be well advised to do so without delay.

Even if you do not want a Car until next year, it might pay you to buy RIGHT NOW.

The prohibition of Foreign cars to Canada will undoubtedly cause an unprecedented shortage and increase in price.

In addition, there is daily expected an Excise Tax of 10 p. c. on all unsold cars.

Buy your Ford car or Truck RIGHT NOW if you would save delay and money, yes, and probable disappointment.

FIRE CHIEF GRANGE WILL INAUGURATE A MONTHLY SYSTEM OF INSPECTION

The City Will Be Divided Into Three Sections and Each Section Will Be Looked After By An Officer of the Fire Department--Fire Escapes For Apartment Houses.

To the business men, merchants and others who may be intersted in fire protection, the following will be of interest:

After May 1st, 1918, a system of monthly inspection for fire prevention purposes will be instituted by the Chief of the Fire Department. The territory to be inspected will be divided into three sections and each section to be looked after by an officer of the department, who will be responsible to the Chief of the Department for the condition of the buildings in his section. The buildings will be inspected from the cellar to the attic. Back yards, outbuildings, etc., will also receive the attention of the inspectors.

Whenever the officer conducting the inspection "shall find in any building or upon any premises combustible material or conditions dangerous "to the safety of such building or "premises, or which is so situated as "to endanger other property," he shall report to the chief of the department, who "shall order such combustible "material to be removed or such dangerous condition to be remedied by "the owner or the occupant of such "premises." (Fire Marshal's Act, Sect. 5.)

He shall also report to the Chief any case where the following regulattions have not been complied with:

1. Windows shall not be covered by iron screen in stores, factories, apartment or amusement houses, unless such screen can be readily removed from either the outside or the inside of the building.

2. Storm windows must not be fastened with a button, but with hinges on one side and a hook on the other side the window to swing outward.

3. Apartment houses or any building occupied as living quarters and of three storeys or over in height must be equipped with a fire escape of the type having steps and a railing with an ample landing place at each floor.

It is desired also that the recommendation of both the Fire Marshal and the Fire Underwriters' Inspector, that the cellars of all stores be equipped with a sprinkler system, be carried out.

Arrangements have eben completed with the Fire Marshal for to have an inspection of boilers and heating plants in the business section of the city.

Fire Marshal's Act.

The following extracts from the "Fire Marshal's Act," together with the one quoted may serve the purpose of enlightening the public as to the manner in which our Government is endeavouring to lessen the fire losses of Ontario, and also to let the public know the consequences of violation of the Act

Section 7, Clause 1—

"The Chief of the Fire Department "of every municipality in which the "fire department is established, and "the clerk of every other municipal-"ity shall be by virtue of the office "held by him an assistant to the Fire "Marshal."

Section 15—

"It shall be the duty of the Crown "Attorney of every county or district, "upon receiving the report of the Fire "Marshall or upon receiving notice of "anq offence having been committed "against any of the provisions of this "act or the regulations, to institute "and conduct a prosecution of any "person who appears to have been "guilty of an offence against the crim-"inal code or against this Act or the "regulations.

Section 16—

"If upon investigation by the Fire "Marshal he finds in any building or "upon any premises combustible ma-"terial or other conditions existing "dangerous to the safety of such "building or premises or to other pro-"perty, and orders the removal of "such material or the remedying of "such conditions, and default is made "in compliance with such order, he "may apply to a judge of the Su-"preme Court for an order to the own-"er or occupant to remove such mate-"rial or to remedy such conditions "and the judge may make such order "upon the report of the Fire Marshal "or upon such further evidence as he "may deem meet and may impose a "penalty for default in carrying out "the order of the Fire Marshal or the "judge not exceeding $100.00 per day "for every day during which such de-"fault continues."

I sincerely hope that the business men, merchants and public generally will assist their Fire Department in thei endeavours to minimize the fire loss of this city. I have every confidence that will be the case.

PRICE OF SEED POTATOES SHOWING SIGNS OF A SLUMP

New Brunswick Firm Quotes City From $1.00 to $1.65 Per Bag for the Best Seed on the Market Delivered at the Station in Peterborough.

GREATER PRODUCTION

The greater production movement in the city received a trifle of a back due to the spell of bad weather things were going in fine shape up to the end of last week. Gardens were cleared up, some ploughed and a few venturesome people were already bragging about the early onions in sight, poking up above the ground. But the bad weather will go and things be lively again.

A good deal of ground has been taken. The yield promises, if all hands stick to it, to be larger than last year, and that was above expectations. One incentive is lacking. In order to poke up production potatoes should have remained at $5.50 per bag. Then in self-defence the man without a garden had to be the man-with-a-hoe. It is feared, that with the price of potatoes falling, that some who planted last year may be inclined to trust to another big crop. They may be deceived.

Demand Rent.

Several cases have come up where rentals have been asked for garden plots that seemed excessive. Of course any one owning a garden can ask all the traffic will bear. One person, asked to rent the garden, asked a fee of $10.00 for use of a plot about 40 x 100 ft. Figure this out for yourself and you will find that the money asked represents about $108.00 per acre, at the rental named. Too much. And the party may not use it and will miss a moderate rental sum. Such a course defeats the idea of greater production.

Last year, at this time, seed potatoes and how to get them and what to pay was a burning question. This season the fire has died out of the wholesale dealer at a distance. He seems to find that stocks are large and he is listening to unload. A firm in New Brunswick wrote the chairman of the local garden movement inquiring if any seed potatoes are needed. The firm asks that an order be placed. The firm is obliging and will part with the potatoes for a moderate sum. Here are the figures, as a matter of comparison:

Cobblers	$1.90
Green Mountains	1.65
Delawares	1.65

All at station in Peterborough. Ninety pounds to the bag and properly labelled. Same qualities as used by well known seed distributors. Stock first class in every respect. Privilege of examiantion of the potatoes when they come. Four hundred bags needed in one order.—F. H. D.

RECOVERS FROM SHOCK AT LAST

Mrs. Downs Could Hardly Get About House—Enjoys Work Now

"Before I started on Tanlac I was so weak and rundown that I could hardly get around the house, but now I just enjoy my housework," said Mrs. Mary Downe, of 1 Currie street, Toronto, recently.

"About six months ago," she continued, "I underwent a serious operation that taxed my strength so severely that it looked like I would never get over the shock. I had no appetite and had to force down every bite and have actually gone for days at a time without eating a thing. I felt as weak as water and if I tried to exret myself the least bit I would get exhausted and have to stop. My nerves were frayed out so I could hardly sleep and many a night I would lie awake till broadlight. Even if I dozed off at all I would wake up with an awful nightmare trembling and shaking like a leaf.

"This was just the fix I was in when I took my first dose of Tanlac. It wasn't long before I felt it bracing me up and making me eat more. I have taken three bottles now and my appetite is just fine. I relish every meal and feel ashamed to eat all I want. My nerves are much stronger now, I rest well at night and never have those terrible nightmares any more. I am able to do all my housework without half trying and never feel tired and worn out like I did before I began using Tanlac."

The War Veterans Attended Memorial Service Yesterday

Veterans Mustered at the Armouries—Inspiring Address by Canon Morley—The National Church

APPROPRIATE MUSIC

Yesterday morning a memorial service was held in St. John Church in commemoration of the Second Battle of Ypres. The members of the Great War Veterans' Association met at the Armouries at 10.30 o'clock, under the direction of President H. Staunton, and, headed by the band of the 57th Regiment, paraded to the church, where an eloquent and timely address was given by the Rev. Canon Morley.

Welcomed the Veterans.

In his welcome to the Veterans, Canon Morley remarked that they were in the national church of the Mother Country. "No matter what creed you belong to, you are welcome to this great church," said the speaker. The Church has given all Christian nations their banner; the Cross of St. George, the Cross of St. Andrew, and the Cross of St. Patrick, all are emblems of the Church. Anything of any value in this world cannot be obtained except through privation and suffering, and you, the Veterans of the Great War, have set an example which rings round the world. In the Second Battle of Ypres the anadian forces took a glorious part. In that great battle for the retention of Ypres, 6,000 Canadians fell. It is fitting that we should honour the veterans who have participated in that great struggle.

Before the War.

Canon Morley took for his subject, "For what shall a man profit if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" which may be translated thus, "For what shall a nation profit if it shall gain the whole world and lose its own soul?" Before the war we were all wrapped up in material prosperity, but when the time came we responded. The Allies have discovered the measure of their own soul. In August, 1914, it reached Canada. Thank God we made the choice and are standing to-day. We might have made the Great Refusal, but we made the Great Choice. What is it that is saving the Allies? It is the spirit of righteousness. War is binding us together as one nation. The war is drawing the elements of our civilization together. That spirit of righteousness is the only spirit which can save our souls, the spirit of the living Christ. The supreme moment of history is coming, and I hope we will embrace sacrifice willingly. When the United States had entered on the side of right and justice a bishop representing the United States said in St. Paul's Cathedral: "Thank God we have found our soul."

Very appropriate was the music for the occasion. "La Marseillaise," "The Star Spangled Banner," and "Oh Canada" were played in succession by the organist, Mr. R. Devey.

The anthem, "God shall wipe away all tears," succeeded a period of meditation, and was finely sung by the choir, who were present in large numbers.

A feature of the occasion was the initial appearance of the band of the 57th Regiment since its re-organization. Lieut. Gliddon's organization turned out thirty-three strong for the parade, with seven members who are connected with church choirs, where their services were indispensable, unavoidably absent. The instrumentation of the organization was rather a surprise to the public. The band showed splendid reed, bass and trombone sections, the marches selected showing them to best advantage, with the piccolo giving an added snap to the reeds. The trombones are the best the 57th have had for years, while with two double B's and three E b's, the bass section is sufficient for a band of fifty Basson and saxaphones were also good, while the tuning was close to perfection. The performance of the band on its first march-out gives promise of a successful series of park concerts during the coming summer.

Thomas Rork Died Yesterday

Deputy Collector of Inland Revenue Had Been Ill for Some Time.

Thomas Rork, 319 Simcoe Street, for many years Deputy Collector of Inland Revenue, died at his residence on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, after an illness of some months.

The late Mr. Rork was born in the Township of Cavan, Ireland, 84 years ago, and came in 1838 to Kingston, Canada, to reside with his parents. On March 27, 1862, he married Elizabeth Burgess, who survives him. After the death of his parents, Mr. Rork moved to Asphodel, where he resided for 38 years, when he removed to Norwood, which place he left when he came to Peterborough in 1901 to take the position in the Inland Revenue Office, which he filled so ably until compelled, by failing eyesight, he retired on January 1st, 1915. He leaves besides his wife one son, J. W. Rork, of Norwood, three daughters, Mrs. A. J. Eaton, 430 Park Street; Mrs. Rose, Corbetton, Ont., and Miss Mary, of Toronto.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday. Leaving Mr. Rork's late residence, 319 Simcoe Street, where service, conducted by Rev. Mr. Rowland, will be held at 11, the remains will be taken by the noon C.P.R. to Norwood, where a later service will be held at Mr. J. W. Rork's home at 3 o'clock. Interment at the Norwood Cemetery.

FUNERAL WAS HELD TO-DAY.

There was laid at rest to-day, in the family plot, Little Lake Cemetery, the remains of Miss Grace McDonald, who was formerly a resident of this city. Miss McDonald died at the Private Patients' Pavilion, Toronto General Hospital, on Friday, April 19. She was a daughter of the late Duncan McDonald, in the early days of Peterborough a well-known business man. Miss McDonald was at one time an active member of the Murray Street Baptist Church, and her kindly deeds and gentle ways are well remembered by many members of that church. In recent years she has been residing with her sister in Aurora, Ontario.

Surviving her are four sisters, Mrs. John Donnelly, Peterborough; Mrs. William Robinson, Bobcaygeon; Mrs. Thomas Urquhart, Aurora; and Miss Elizabeth McDonald, Los Angeles, California; also one brother, Alexander McDonald, Glendale, California. Two brothers, William R. McDonald, Ann Arbor, Michigan, and Duncan E. McDonald, Winnipeg, pre-deceased her. Her life has been one largely of loving service for others, and the influence of it will long remain with those who knew her best.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

Among those from out of town attending the funeral were ex-Mayor Urquhart and Mrs. Urquhart, Mr. C. Curtis, Miss Sinclair, Toronto; Mr. Herb. McDonald, Detroit, and Miss Robinson, Bobcaygeon.

Mayor Is Promised Coal For Peterboro'

Mayor Duncan and Ald. Taylor returned on Saturday night from Buffalo and Cleveland, where their orders for coal, which the city hopes to secure for a winter reserve, were met with encouraging promises, if not with signed contracts. Representatives of various coal companies were interviewed, and although the market is none too bright for the coming season, Peterborough was promised an early consideration. A meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee will be held on Tuesday night, when a full report of the visit to the coal brokers will be presented.

At St. Andrew's church yesterday morning a pastoral letter from Revd. Captain Rollins, at present chaplain with a forestry battalion at Sunningdale, England, was read by Revd. W. H. Rowand.

While not expecting to get over to the front at once, because of the many senior officers who will get their chance before him, Captain Rollins hopes sooner or later to realize his ambitino.

In sending his greetings to the congregation he knew Mrs Rollins and his daughter, at present in Nice, would echo his message if they were near.

GERMANS PLAN TO WEAKEN BELGIUM

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, April 22.—The Volks Zeitung of Cologne says the German authorities in Belgium have issued a decree directing that the finances of the Flemish and Walloon districts shall be administered separately. This, the newspaper asserts, brings the independence of Flanders much nearer. This move on the part of the Germans probably is in furtherance of their plan to weaken Belgium by dividing it into Flemish and Walloon States with nominal independence.

Nine Russians Fined $123.75 For Sunday Gaming

Nine Russians employed by the Leonard Construction Company were each fined $13.75 in police court this morning for gambling on Sunday. Five of them were arrested in Room 27 at the "bunk house" shortly after one o'clock in the morning. Police Sergeants Kidd and Blade and Constable Deagnard, and unprofitting by this experience, four more were rounded up in Room 11 at nine o'clock on Sunday night by Sergt. Reid and P. C. Deannard. At that several other gamesters eluded the raiders. The police were informed that one man lost $100 a week ago in a little game, but the "tovarishi" rounded up yesterday did not elucidate that incident.

P. C. Deannard in his testimony, stated that the game he watched through the window looked like poker, but the Russians maintained that it was only casino at five cents a game. The word poker apparently conveyed no intelligible idea to Magistrate Dumble.

"I don't know what you mean," he remarked.

Looking over the cards picked off the table in the early morning game P. C. Deannard picked out groups of sixes and eights. Three sixes, he explained could beat a pair of eights, and the eights were better than two sixes.

Magistrate Dumble said there seemed to be only one ace in the deck, but the other three were around somewhere it was stated.

Known by Numbers.

The first five players were Peter Wolak, Harry Yoroshuk, Max and Andrew Artimohik and Steve Ykimowick. The other four were also reminiscent of a Bolshevik) roll call. Each man responded to a number to simplify their registration at the Construction Company's office.

P. C. Deannard watched the first game ten minutes through the window of Room 27, and then called Sergeants Blade and Kidd. When they entered the room the men scrambled for the money and cards, leaving only forty-five cents in the pot.

In fining the men $10 each with costs Magistrate Dumble stated that the Russians must understand that gambling, especially on the Lord's Day, was forbidden. The men worked too hard for their money to squander it in idle playing. His Worship added, and advised them to save their earnings.

Mr. A. Low acted as interpreter, and although the men pleaded not guilty the evidence of the police was conclusive.

MUCH OPPOSITION TO WILLARD-FULTON BOUT

COL. MILLER REPORTED TO BE CONSIDERING AOTHER OFFER BECAUSE OF OBSTACLES.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 22. — The probability that the championship fight between Jess Willard and Fred Fulton would be held in the Twin Cities on July 4 dwindled to a possibility to-day. More obstacles were met by the promoter, Col. J. C. Miller.

Although Miller announced that he would mark time until Tuesday, when the Minnesota Safety Committee would form an opinion on the advisability of permitting the contest, it became known that Miller is again considering offers from other cities.

Numerous protests filed at the Capital, coupled with the announcement that the Safety Committee would be governed by public opinion, was one cause for uncertainty. A statement credited to Col. Miller, to the effect that he would insist on the $10,000 'inducement bonus' from the Twin Cities, as soon as he closed the fight arrangements, also clouded the situation.

It is understood that Miller told Twin City associates that he wanted this guarantee money to immediately start work on the arena. Some of the men interested in the fight are reported to have taken the position that such a move would force Twin City enthusiasts to bear a heavy financial loss if the fight was called off at the eleventh hour.

SPORTING COMMENT

Toronto baseball fans are tickled to death that the Leafs will train at the Island Stadium. They will then have a chance to look for themselves at the faterial 'Dan' Howley gathers for his 1918 Toronto team. For Howley, however, it may not be so good. The side-line critics are sure to use their hammers freely. "Dan," however, made the suggestion that the Leafs train at the Island Stadium and he evidently is ready to stand any "gossip" that may be going around.

Lew Tendler, the promising lightweight of Philadelphia, has come out with a defi to fight Benny Leonard. "All I want is a chance at the champion," he said. "I'm going to fight every one in the division if necessary in order to make Leonard meet me."

"This is a tough job I have stepped into," stated Manager Howley of the Leafs. "Here I come into a city that had a championship team last year, and have practically nothing to build a team from. However, there are brighter days ahead. As soon as the major league clubs start to use the old axe we will strengthen our club. The local owners are willing to spend money for players, and though things are not very promising right now, just watch out for us when the warm weather comes."

The City's Wires Were At Fault

PETERBORO NARROWLY MISSED ANOTHER BIG FIRE THIS MORNING.

A grounded wire belonging to the Utilities Commission, and located on George Street, caused a little excitement at Cressman's store this morning, when a short circuit in the men's clothing department started a blaze. Mr. Wolfe, who was in the store, at 9.30, noticed sparks coming from beside a water pipe near a window, and investigating found electric wiring had caused the circuit. The radiators and elevators were also charged with electricity.

The fire department was called, and made a thorough investigation of the electric wiring in the store, which showed the wires in the building to be intact. Had the short circuit started in the night a serious fire would undoubtedly have been caused.

STORE CLOSED.

The store was closed for about three quarters of an hour during the overhauling of the wiring. The investigation showed that the short circuit was caused by a wire touching an iron pole on the street.

TWO MORE VICTIMS OF DOG MENACE

Bulldog Attacked a Little Girl and Then Turned on Mother.

The dog menace in the city is still active and two more victims were reported during the week. Mrs. Weir, Downie street was badly bitten on Saturday afternoon when a bull dog at the corner of Brock and Bethune streets, which was in leash but not muzzled, dashed at her little girl's face. Mrs. Weir quickly drew the little girl away and the dog buried its teeth in Mrs. Weir's side tearing her skirt and sinking its teeth through several thicknesses of clothes and breaking her skin. The second case was that of Miss M. Frickie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frickie, corner of Stewart and McDonnel street, who was attacked by a yellow collie which bit her face badly inflicting wounds which are at present badly festered. The police were notified and the dog catcher will look up the dog.

NOTICE—All persons, in ordering their food, ought to consider the need of Great Britain and her Allies, and their armies, for wheat, beef, bacon and fats, and that the Canada Food Board desires the public to do everything in their power to make these commodities available for export by eating as little as possible of them and by making use of substitutes and avoiding waste.

Protecting Big Game.

Jack Buckham, representative for the Columbia division in the B. C. Legislature, has some original ideas about how "big game hunters" should be treated. He has moved in the House an amendment to the Game Act, providing for a $25 license for all non-resident hunters and fishermen who shoot or fish within British Columbia, and in addition, $25 for each grizzly bear, moose, bighorn, wapiti and caribou shot; $15 for each black or brown bear, and $5 for each goat or each species of deer shot. As big game hunting in British Columbia has for many years drawn the world's best sportsmen from all quarters of the globe, the victims before their expert rifles have been numerous. Under such a tax as Mr. Buckham prescribes, big game hunting in British Columbia would bring revenue according to results.

Female "Posties."

Women mail carriers, elevator operators and conductors are favored by the executive of the Saskatchewan Board of Trade, which has passed the following resolution: "That as there has been displayed by a number of women in the city a wish to relieve the farm labor situation, it is recommended that they be encouraged to register for duties such as street car conductors, elevator operators, mail carriers, etc., with a view to relieving the men so engaged for seeding and harvesting work on farms, the men relieved to be guaranteed their positions when they return."

Titles Will Be Object Of Another Offensive

The Government Will Have the Right-of-Way Once This Question is Disposed of—Conscript Enemy Aliens in Canada?

FOOD CONTROL COST

OTTAWA, April 23.—Yesterday was the last private members' day of the session. From now on Government business will have precedence over other business, with the exception that a date will be set apart for further discussion of Mr. W. F. Nickle's resolution calling for the abolition of hereditary titles, and Mr. R. L. Richardson's amendment which would wipe out all titles in Canada.

Pensions.

When the House met yesterday the first report of the special committee to enquire into pensions was made by Hon. N. W. Rowell, chairman of the committee. The report contained the recommendation that the committee should ask for leave to sit when the House is in session.

Replying to a question by Mr. Lemieux Mr. Rowell explained that while it was thought advisable to ask for this privilege, the committee would endeavour to complete its labours at morning sittings

Food Control Cost.

At questions time Mr. Sinclair, of Antigonish, asked for the cost of operating the Food Control Department, including salaries, temporary employment, travelling expenses, and services of all kinds from the date of the organization of the branch to December 31st, 1917.

Hon. Mr. Crerar: "$105,159."

Mr. Sinclair asked if any claims had been preferred against the Government in connection with C.N.R. which were not specified at time of purchase.

The answer was "No."

Mr. Lemieux was told that the Government had under consideration legislation to compel motor boats used for salmon fishing to be equipped with mufflers.

Conscript Alien Labour.

Advocating the conscription of enemy aliens throughout Canada, and stating that the Dominion Government should take greater precautions after the war with regard to the kind of immigrants permitted to enter Canada, Mr. H. S. Clements (Comox-Atlin), made a strong speech in the House of Commons on behalf of his resolution to consolidate all alien labour laws into one uniform law. Mr. Cements told of labour conditions in his own Province of British Columbia, but saying that he had no doubt similar conditions existed throughout the country.

This will enable Food Administrator Hoover to ship 3,000,000 bushels of wheat immediately to Belgium to relieve starvation conditions there.

A Big Programme.

Hoover's programme calls for the arrival at Pacific ports of 1,665,000 bushels of wheat a month, starting April 1. 10,000,000 bushels must come in by September 1, under the schedule mapped out.

Because of the critical world food situation, a large slice of Swedish tonnage to be acquired under agreements practically completed, and 70,000 tons of Japanese shipping, will be used to move Argentine and Australian wheat to the United States.

Next to troop movements, food is getting the right-of-way. Wheat must be poured into America's back door to keep the bread line to Europe intact. American wheat shipments to Europe are made entirely from the savings by conservation from normal consumption.

After Hard Fight.

After a hard fight with the War Industries Board, the Food Administration has convinced the Ship Control Committee of the Shipping Board that Australian wheat must be rushed in. Hauling direct from Australia to Europe is out of the question because of the submarine danger and the long haul involved. Despite the fact that 150,000,000 bushels of wheat is piled on the docks at Adelaide and other Australian ports, practically none of it has been moved. Only a tiny fleet of sailing vessels has been available until now.

In addition to wheat, war industries must have tin, rubber, chrome and jute from the Strait Settlements.

Skipper Sank A German Submarine

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

A CANADIAN ATLANTIC PORT, April 22. — There is now in port a British sea captain, whose name, for obvious reasons(is withheld, who on a recena voyage to Europe shelled and sank a German submarine. The skipper was awarded the D.S.O. for his work. His steamer was well within the war zone when the forward lookout sighted a submarine on the surface only a short distance ahead. Travelling at full speed, she rammed the U-boat, disabling the German craft, but not sinking her. The sub-sea boat was then shelled until it sank.

A MOTHER'S CARE

The woman at home, deep in household duties and the cares of motherhood, needs occasional help to keep her in good health. The demands upon a mother's health are many and severe. Her own health trials and her children's welfare exact heavy tolls, while hurried meals, broken rest and much indoor living tend to weaken her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home iss often indisposed through weakness, headaches, backaches and nervousness. Too many women have grown to accept these visitations as a part of the lot of motherhood. ut many and varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple and the cure at hand. When well, it is the woman's good blood that keeps her well; when ill she must make her blood rich to renew her health. The nursing mother more than any other woman in the world needs rich blood and plenty of it. There is one always unfailing way to get this good blood so necessary to perfect health, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new blood abundantly, and through their use thousands of weak, ailing wives and mothers have been made bright, cheerful and strong. If you are ailing, easily tired, or depressed, it is a duty you owe yourself and your family to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trali. What this medicine has done for others it will surely do for you:

Miniature War Tanks.

A war "tank" one-eighth the size of those now in use will be offered to the British Government for $1,000,000 within a few weeks by the designer, A. F. Welsh, of Regina. The inventor claims that his tank will perform any of the feats common to the larger tanks, and that it will attain to a speed of 15 miles per hour. Its powers of resistance are said to be as great as the monster tanks now in use on the west front. Mr. Welsh is now on his way to England to confer with the War Office authorities.

A Record Price.

Buyers at the Union Stock Yards a few days ago paid $20.50 per hundredweight for hogs, which the stated was a new record price for the American continent. Packers claim they will lose heavily by this advance in prices, as they have contracts to fill, and it is expected that pressure will be brought to bear upon the office of the Food Controller in an effort to secure a regulation of price of live hogs. Three years ago hogs sold on the Toronto market for $8.40.

Vain Thought.

"You are looking thin, Gadspur."

"That's true."

"Appetite poor?"

"Very. I was just thinking that if my appetite for food were one-tenth as voracious as my furnace's appetite for coal, I would soon be tipping the scales at 200 pounds."

Children Had Whooping Cough

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

Whooping cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine made than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 25c, and 50c. a bottle; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

During The Dinner

CHAPTER LXVIII.

The exclamations of delight over the place cards charmed me. I felt honoured that such an artist as Merton Gray had thought me of enough importance to devote his time to me. He treated the matter very carelessly, yet I could not but recall what both Mrs. Sexton and Madge Loring had said concerning him— that he was so expensive, his time so valuable, he never had consented to do anything of the sort before.

James served the dinner perfectly. I watched George, and his expression showed that he was pleased. Really, as own dinner—his and Mrs. Sexton's — had not gone more smoothly. The food, too, was perfectly cooked. Mary had taken special pains with everything, and my young guests enthused over each and every course. I knew George would think them undignified in this, yet I relished the praise, and couldn't help being glad he heard it. Even if they were younger than his crowd, they were all charming people and of the best families in Moreland.

George was lovely to the twins, June and Jennie Lawson, and congratulated Frank and Charleton in the nicest way. Even with all the excitement, I could but wonder again why he acted as he so often did, when he could be so charming.

An Interruption.

About the middle of the dinner the bell rang, and James brought in a telegram to George. After excusing himself, gone almost as soon of annoyance, gone almost as soon as it came, swept over his face.

What could it be? Surely he would not allow anything to spoil my dinner and the dance I had planned, afterward? But without a look in my direction, George crumpled the message into his pocket, and continued his conversation with Evelyn Reeves right where it had been interrupted by the telegram. Would I ever learn to have an iota of his aplomb?

But I soon forgot the interruption in listening to Merton Gray's interesting talk, and in watching that my guests were properly served.

Ah! That's the Spot

Sloan's Liniment goes right to it. Have you a rheumatic ache or a dull throbbing neuralgic pain? You can find a quick and effective relief in Sloan's Liniment. Thousands of homes have this remedy handy for all external pains because time and time again it has proven the quickest relief.

So clean and easy to apply, too. No rubbing, no stain, no inconvenience as is the case with plasters or ointments. If you once use Sloan's Liniment, you will never be without it.

Generous sized bottles, at all dealers.

Sloan's Liniment
KILLS PAIN

"Everything is going splendidly," Merton said to me, "don't get nervous. Your cheeks are burning; it is very becoming, but you will make yourself ill with anxiety."

My cheeks were burning, but not as much as after Merton had spoken. How thoughtful and kind he was, and how much I liked him. I was indeed fortunate I liked him. I was indeed fortunate to have such a friend. I thought, as we rose from the table, after having had our coffee at the table. I feared George wouldn't like to have it that way, but I had ordered it served in that way; I would not do one single thing as it had been done at his dinner.

If he disapproved, he said nothing; and it was a very gay party that trooped into the drawing room. The rugs had been taken up and all the good dance records laid out conveniently. I knew George would not object to an orchestra, but I had determined to follow Mrs. Sexton's advice and have all my arrangements as simple as possible. George had had professional entertainers. I would have only the Victrola.

On With the Dance.

George danced the first dance with me. I was perfectly delighted that he did so, and terribly surprised. Why I should have been —knowing it was the proper thing for him to do —I don't know. He danced wonderfully, and was very gay and complimentary.

"Your dinner was very good indeed," he said as we glided round the room," and your decorations were quaint and unusual. I am not only pleased, but surprised with the taste and good judgment you have shown."

"Oh, I am so glad you are pleased," I returned, happily, as I gave his arm a little squeeze. He little imagined how his praise affected me. I had been so anxious, so afraid something might happen to offend his taste, or him, that I had scarcely breathed naturally all the evening. But now I gave myself up to the enjoyment, with no thought of anything going wrong.

I danced with every one of the men once; with George and Merton Gray twice. And as much as I liked Merton, as comfortable as I was with him, I was happier when dancing with George.

"Your husband is just lovely!" June Lawson gushed as they were putting on their wraps to leave.

"I think so, too," Olive Rivers agreed. "Do you know, I was a little afraid of him, but he is perfect. Don't be jealous, Mrs. Howard, will you?"

"No indeed! I am too happy that you all like him. It would be awful if you didn't," I replied. Then, laughing and talking, they all left, just as the clock struck two, leaving George and me alone—I, tired but very happy.

Eats Thanksgiving Dinner in His Shirtsleeves

By RUTH GRAHAM

Gertrude Wentworth, a pretty New England girl, looked forward to Thanksgiving day with dispondency instead of anticipation of pleasure. Her mother was ill and kept to her room. She had no brothers or sisters, therefore she would be alone at the table for the Thanksgiving dinner. There seemed nothing further to do but to ignore the day entirely.

There was no reason why she should not permit the servants to enjoy themselves on Thanksgiving day, so she told them that they might go where they pleased after the morning work was finished; and they availed themselves of the permission.

The Wentworths usually remained very late in the autumn in their country cottage, at a seaside settlement, and this year were to remain till Christmas time. Their cottage was a country house as comfortable in winter as in summer. They called it "The Good Cheer," and it was cheerful even in winter. Gertrude bethought herself of inviting a friend, Miss Burns, to come out from the city and spend the day with her.

Thanksgiving morning came, and brought a letter from Miss Burns declining the invitation since she could not be spared at home. It also brought the first snow storm of the season and a howling wind.

But had Miss Burns accepted the invitation she would not have been able to make her way to "The Good Cheer," for the storm increased in violence and whirled the snow with impassable drifts. Poor Gertrude stood at the living-room window looking at the blizzard without. Within there was a cheerful blaze of logs in the fireplace, but no cheer, since Gertrude was alone.

The house stood back from the road about fifty yards, and presently Gertrude saw an auto car struggling past the house. It stalled and the driver looked about him for shelter. Noticing the name, "The Good Cheer," above the front door of the house, he naturally supposed it to be a hotel. Turning his car aside onto a space bare of snow he alighted and fought his way through drifts to the house. Gertrude was watching him and answered his summons at the door.

"Big blizzard," he said cheerily. "I think I'll stop with you till there's better going."

Gertrude saw by his words that he supposed the place to be a hotel, and bid him enter. Shaking the snow off him he did so and she pointed the way into the living room.

"What luck!" he exclaimed, throwing off his overcoat and hat and handing them to Gertrude, to put in the hall closet.

"Would you like dinner, sir?" she asked, respectfully, as a maid to a guest of the house.

"Dinner? I should smile. And I'll pay extra if you'll serve it right here in this room, before this splendid fire. What time do you dine?"

"Any time you like. This is Thanksgiving day, and all our guests are dining out. The servants have been given the day off. I can get you up a dinner, sir, and serve it right here in this room. But I need to have notice."

"Notice! Just you consider yourself notified to serve a dinner for one, the best you have in the house. Expense not to be considered, as soon as convenient for you."

Taking out a dollar bill he slipped it into Gertrude's hand, saying that there would be "another tip at the end of the banquet." Gertrude took the money, promising to do her best, and disappeared leaving the young man stretched out in an easy chair before the fire, puffing lustily at a long cigar.

About an hour afterward, this young gentleman, who was known at his club as Dick Summertime, from his cheery disposition, his real name being Richard Summerwall, having sank into a pleasant daze, was aroused by cries of, "Help! Come! Quick!"

Dashing into the kitchen, whence the cries enumerated, he found Gertrude vainly endeavoring to quench a pan of blazing fat. She was blowing it which only made it burn more fiercely. Mr. Summerwall looked about him for something with which to quench the fire and seeing nothing serviceable took off his coat and smothered the flame.

"Heavens!" cried Gertrude, "you've spoiled a silk-lined coat."

Mr. Summerwall looked from Gertrude to the contents of the kitchen which were in frightful disorder, then back at Gertrude.

"You're no cook," he said.

Gertrude, who didn't even know how to fry bacon, was badly rattled, broke down and confessed that she was a lady, that they were in a private house, and the rest of the situation. Mr. Summerwall thereupon turned in his shirt sleeves and acted as chef, assisted by the young lady. The two managed to get up a pretty good dinner and ate it together before the fire in the living room, though Mr. Summerwall was obliged to eat without a coat.

And so it was that Gertrude Wentworth spent her happiest Thanksgiving in her life, meeting her fate; for Mr. Summerwall after leaving, showered attentions upon her and at last prevailed upon her to eat all future Thanksgiving dinners in his company, which in commemoration of meeting his wife, he invariably did in his shirtsleeves.

Appropriating a Passport

By WARREN MILLER

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

I am an American citizen of French extraction, my name being L'Hommedieu. In America I have always been called "Lommedoo." Both my father and mother were born in France, and I am not only French in appearance but speak French fluently.

In 1914 I was traveling abroad and was in Berlin when the world's war broke out.

I hurried to the foreign office to get my passport put in order to leave Germany, but was obliged to wait several days for it. While waiting I formed the acquaintance of a man named Walker, who claimed to be an American.

The day I received the passport, on returning with it to my hotel, I met him in the office. I was so pleased that I told him all about finally being permitted to leave Germany and he congratulated me warmly. He asked me when I would leave and I told him that I would go the next day on the only through train that ran between Berlin and Brussels."

The next day, when I reached the station, I was met by Mr. Walker. He was carrying a suitcase and told me that he was going on the train. He took me to a compartment of one of the coaches, in which there were eight seats. Six of the seats were occupied and Walker and I took the remaining two seats. Then the guard—we in America call him the conductor—locked the door. As he did so I saw a look of intelligence pass between him and Mr. Walker. What it meant I had no idea.

At the first stop several passengers got out and the guard locked the door at once, preventing anyone else from entering the compartment. Within an hour after leaving Berlin Walker and the remaining passengers, excepting one man and myself, got out. The train was crowded and persons repeatedly tried to induce the guard to let them enter our almost empty compartment; but he kept it locked, evidently telling them his reason for doing so, which I could not hear.

As soon as we were off again the sole remaining passenger in the compartment besides myself took out a cigarette case and offered it to me. I took a cigarette and he another. I noticed that he helped himself from the other side of the case from which I took my cigarette. I leaned back in my seat, and feeling very comfortable, closed my eyes, and in a few minutes fell asleep.

I was awakened by the guard announcing that we were at the border and "all out." He was obliged to give me a good shaking before arousing me. I was alone, the other passenger having departed. I seized my hand baggage and went to the room where passengers were showing their passports, or their permission to leave Germany, and put my hand in my pocket to take out my own passport. It was not there.

As soon as I could get an officer's attention I told him I had been robbed of my passport. He asked me my name, and after an investigation told me that a man named L'Hommedieu had passed out.

Then I knew that my fellow passenger had put me to sleep with a cigarette prepared for the purpose and had taken my passport.

I was taken back to Berlin and held on suspicion of being a spy till I had convinced the authorities that I was what I represented myself to be, then, with the assistance of the American minister, I was permitted to leave Berlin, and after great difficulties at last found myself at my hotel in Paris.

A few days after reaching the capital of France I received a card which bore the name of a noted French statesman. Wondering if there were not some mistake, I went to the salon to meet him and found a man about my size and build, though he would not be mistaken for me.

"Mr. L'Hommedieu," he said, "I have been waiting for some time for you to register your name at a Paris hotel. I am indebted to you for getting me out of Berlin, where I happened to be, unknown to the German government, at the breaking out of the war, and I desire to crave your pardon for having caused you inconvenience.

"Inconvenience!"

"Hear me. A friend of mine who passed under the name of Walker knew of your trouble about your passport. It occurred to him that you and I were about the same size, our eyes and hair were the same color. Under my own identity I could never get out of Berlin. Walker engineered the plan to rob you of your passport. You would only be delayed, while I would be considered an important capture, and would suffer a long imprisonment, and heaven knows what other torture. Walker guided you to the compartment we occupied. Those who occupied it were sympathizers."

"You had no right to give me so much trouble," I protested.

"That I acknowledge, and I have come to remunerate you. I am an influential man—"

"I know who you are."

"If there is anything in the gift of the French government that you desire, it shall be yours."

I told him that I desired nothing but to get home to America. But, appeased, I added that I was glad to be of service to the country in which my parents had been born.

And so we parted friends.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Reminiscence

By EDWARD T. STEWART

Few are living who have traveled on a Mississippi steamboat when the big stream was the only route between northwestern and southwestern cities. I, an octogenarian, made a trip from Memphis to New Orleans when I was ten years old. I can see far back in the past the steamer like a gigantic swan coming down on the bosom of the stream float rapidly past the wharfboat on which passengers intending to go South on her were gathered, make a graceful turn, and with steam shut off slowly approach against the current, while cables were thrown from her, with which to make her fast.

A number of years after this trip, when the railroad was built along Mississippi's eastern bank and most of the mammoth boats had given place to the railway train, I made another trip, this time from Baton Rouge on one of these steamers that was still running. We stopped at a landing which had been used by a huge plantation but now served principally a small town. A middle-aged man in typical Southern dress came aboard. As he was mounting the staircase leading up to the cabins a colored porter took his hand baggage from him.

"Howdy, Marse Morgan," said the darkey grinning from ear to ear.

The gentleman looked at him, surprised that he should be called by name, for he didn't remember ever having seen the negro before.

"Yo' don't remember me, do yo', Marse Morgan? But I reckon yo' remember this boat. I tuk yo' hand baggage de day yo' come aboard when we lef' dis very wharf on de down trip mo'n ten years ago; de time yo' run away with Colonel Jeffries' daughter."

"Why Sam, yo' black rascal! Yo' don't mean to say you've stuck to this boat ever since?"

"I lef' her durin' the war. Couldn't run in dem days; too much fighten. When dat was over and she started up again I come back to her."

"Well, well. So this is the same boat I made my wedding trip on. I would never have known her. She was a beauty in those days; not the rusty old tub she is now."

The darkey carried the gentleman's baggage to the cabin where the dialogue was renewed.

"Sam, you rascal, I'm mighty glad to see you again," said Morgan. "That was a sharp fight I had for my wife. The colonel came near plugging me. Poor man, a Yankee bullet got him during the war. But we made up all right on the boat and he gave us his blessing, dear old chap. I always regretted taking off his left ear; but it couldn't be helped."

By this time several persons had gathered round and one of them asked for an explanation of what the two were talking about. Whereupon Morgan gave the story.

"It was this way," he said. "I was a frequent visitor at the plantation of Colonel Jeffries, whose daughter Isabel was sixteen years old, I being twenty. The colonel said to me one day: 'Tommy, I'm quite fond of you, but it doesn't suit me to consider yo' for a son-in-law. Sheer off from Isabel.'

"I hadn't thought of asking for the young lady's hand for I knew I wasn't worthy of her, but when the colonel said I couldn't have her it made me mad. The colonel had told her that she mustn't make a match with me and this stirred in her the perversity of her adorable sex. We put our heads together and resolved to take our departure on the first boat heading downstream for New Orleans.

"This boat was the first and I was watching for it. The minute I saw her ten miles up stream I notified Isabel. She secretly prepared for the bridal excursion and when the boat had taken on a hundred bales of cotton she and I flitted down to the wharfboat like a pair of swallows. Some contemptible person saw Isabel leave the house and ran off to warn her father."

"I saw yo' comin'," interrupted Sam, "and the colonel comin' too. He had his gun in his hand ready."

"I saw him," continued the narrator. "We had got up the stairs to the cabin and had gone out on the guard. The colonel saw us and before I could get my gun from my pocket he let drive at me from the wharfboat. I'll bet I can find the bullet hole out there now. As soon as he had fired Isabel and I stepped inside, the colonel boarded the boat and came upstairs to the cabin. I was silly enough to shoot at him and cut off his ear.

"By this time the captain of the boat who heard the firing came up and stepped between the colonel and me. Isabel clung to me and told her father it was useless to try to separate us.

"Well, there was an argument between father and daughter while she bound up his wound with her handkerchief. She finally brought him round, a parson was found among the passengers and Isabel and I were married. The colonel persuaded us to go ashore and get something of a wedding outfit and take another boat for our honeymoon trip."

"An' I toted yo' carpet bag off de boat," said Sam.

"By the by, the cotton taken aboard belonged to the colonel, and he gave it to his daughter for a wedding gift."

The "Tired Business Man."

Are not all business men tired? If not why do we hear so much about musical comedies and vaudeville performances that are constructed especially for the purpose of resting and refreshing the tired business man?

If there is any one claim that has been conceded for ages past it is this: Fatigue is much more fatal to a man than to a woman. We seldom hear of a tired washerwoman or a tired housekeeper. Nobody ever wrote a musical comedy for tired schoolmarms. It has always been held that if a man has to work at night he must sleep in the daytime. But everybody knows that a woman can walk the floor all night with a sick baby in her arms and still be able to perform strenuous household duties next day. "Man's work is from sun to sun"—that being the limit of his endurance.—Southern Woman's Magazine.

When a Man Proposes.

When a man asks a woman to marry him he pays her the greatest compliment a man can pay a woman, or else he needs the money

Rose Always Popular.

It is doubtful if there is any other flower so widely spread over the globe, so universally represented among the races of men in all times as the rose. Before the Christian era men chose the finest of the species and improved them insofar as possible. And it was during the invasion of the barbarians from the north German countries during the dark ages that the culture of the rose was driven into the more protected places, like the convents and the larger castles.—St. Louis Republic Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Causes of Earthquakes.

One cause of earthquakes is the shrinkage of the earth's crust from cooling. This process exerts a powerful sidewise pressure on certain rock strata, and at irregular intervals one stratum slips a little over the other. Another cause is the sudden conversion of water into steam in or near volcanic districts. An explosion of greater or less violence is thus produced, and the consequent tremor is transmitted for many miles through the rocks.

True Mahogany.

True mahogany is produced by only two species of trees which are closely related—Swietenia mahogni Jacq and Swietenia machophylla King, natives of tropical America. There are various cabinet woods passed off for real mahogany. A bulletin recently published by the department of agriculture named "67 species of 41 genera, and scattered through 18 families of the vegetable kingdom."

Kind Thoughts as Tonic.

When you find yourself ready to put the worst construction on the acts of others, when it is easier to believe that an acquaintance passed you without speaking because she wished to cut you, than it is to assume that she failed to see you, it is high time to take yourself in hand. Suspicious people need the tonic of kind thoughts and generous judgment.

Supremacy in Air Disputed.

Man is not to be undisputed lord of the upper air. Enemy birds armed with formidable beaks and talons are ready to oppose the soaring ambition of the sky-pilot, or a swarm of smaller seabirds and scavengers, menacing by reason of their numbers, are liable to overwhelm him, as the Lilliputians did Gulliver.

Shellac Varnish.

To make a shellac, which serves admirably as a cement for insulating electric wiring, fixing gaskets and in similar operations, dissolve flake shellac in alcohol. The mixture may be kept in a wide-mouthed bottle, the cork of which should be waxed to prevent its sticking.

Enjoy Yourself.

Do not put off pleasure any more than duty. Take your good times as you go along. Plan for some fun in every day, and, yes, more than that, plan for a good time all the day. Work as well as play should be enjoyable, a part of your good time.

Bees' Wings.

A bee's wing moves so fast that hitherto no moving picture could catch it, but it has at last been photographed by an electric spark lasting a hundredth of a second, during which time 20 sharp negatives were made.

Life.

Life is a struggle, but not a warfare; it is a day's labor, but labor on God's earth, under the sun and stars with other laborers, where we may think and sing and rejoice as we work.

Just a Greeting.

Sister was taught not to ask for anything to eat when visiting. One day while calling on a neighbor she saw a dish filled with tempting candies. She looked at it longingly, then said: "Hello, candy!"

In Harvest Time.

The delights of vigorous manhood and womanhood are not those of youth, but they are none the less enjoyable because of that little difference, says St. Paul Pioneer Press. A life well lived, grows richer, fuller and more bounteous as it approaches the harvest time.

Why the Cocoanut Has Eyes.

Who can tell why the cocoanut has three eyes? Luther Burbank explains it this way:

Cocoanuts generally grow at the edge of the sea or rivers. The nuts are surrounded with a thick husk with a waterproof covering, so that when they drop into the water they will float. In floating the three eyes are always on top.

Once in the water nature gets busy. From one of the eyes there comes a shoot, which develops broad leaves like sails. The wind catches the sails and wafts the cocoanut on a journey sometimes many miles long. As it sails the other two eyes develop roots, which at first grow among the fibers of the woody husk.

In good season the cocoanut is swept upon another shore, perhaps on another island. The roots embed themselves in the soft earth, the sail becomes the trunk, and a cocoanut palm is growing where none grew before.

Keep Grapes Fresh for Months.

Grapes can be kept fresh for several months by inserting their stems through the corks of glass bottles, filling these with water, pressing the corks firmly in, sealing them if necessary with paraffin and inverting the bottles on wooden racks in a cool, dark cellar. The bunches should hang free, their stems sticking up into the water.

NOTHING LIKE PHOSPHATE TO INCREASE STRENGTH, VIGOR AND NERVE FORCE

ORDINARY BITRO-PHOSPHATE WILL DOUBLE THE STRENGTH OF WEAK DELICATE, NERVOUS PEOPLE IN TWO WEEKS' TIME IN MANY INSTANCES.

Weak nerves quickly reduce the strong and robust to an extremely pitiable condition and rob men and women of all the joys of life. Slowly and stealthily the health is destroyed, the poor sufferer only realizing the magnitude of his ailment when faulty memory, sleeplessness, indecision, lack of energy or other unmistakable symptoms indicate weak nerves. Then it is a serious and dangerous mistake to resort to the use of so-called tonics, alcoholic or drug stimulants.

Weak and exhausted nerves need food and nourishment—not stimulants that lash them into temporary activity. The food and nourishment advised by present day physicians is just one 5-grain tablet of pure bitro-phosphate taken during or immediately after each meal. Simple advice, but its soundness has been proven over and over again.

Moreover the genuine standard bitro-phosphate is inexpensive and is sold by McDermid & Jury and most all good druggists under a binding guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

A Scotchman's Preference.

Lord Strathcona was fond of stories of his Scottish countrymen. One that pleased him highly I have heard him often repeat, says Beckles Willson in "The Life of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal."

A Scot was once boasting that Scotch apples were far better than the Canadian variety.

"Really," exclaimed his friend, "you can't mean that!"

"I do mean it," was the response. "But I must premeese that for my ain taste I prefer them soor and hard."

One story told of his native town delighted him, although he professed incredulity. The superintendent of the Forres Sabbath school had prepared a list of questions for the junior class—name the strongest man, the wisest man, the meekest man. Only one child—a cynical little elf she was—answered correctly, "Samson, Solomon, Moses." All the others wrote or printed opposite the queries the name of the hero of their hearts—Lord Strathcona. There might be stronger and wiser and meeker men, but the junior class was not "acquainted wi' 'em."

Pains Followed The Nerves

From the Feet to the Top of the Head — Could Not Attend to Business For Five Months—Gaining Strength Every Day.

Bowmanville, Ont., Feb. 16. — A great number of people in this district have been trying out Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with splendid results and none are more enthusiastic than Mr. Allen.

His nervous system had become so completely run down that he had to give up his usual occupation and he suffered keenly from neuralgic pains which would dart along the nerves, causing keen distress.

But he found a cure and does not hesitate to recommend it to others. This is his letter.

Mr. Samuel Allen, Coleman Street, Bowmanville, Ont., writes:

"Last summer I suffered from a severe attack of nervousness. I was laid up, unable to attend to my business, for five months. I would be taken with pains which commenced in my feet and ran right up to the top of my head. I had frequent dizzy spells, sometimes so bad that I would fall over from dizziness. At last I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and they proved of such benefit to me that before long I was able to return to work. I am still using the Nerve Food and gaining strength every day. I can heartily recommend them to any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

This letter is endorsed by Mr. John Lyle, J.P.

Treaty for Bird Protection

CANADA and the United States are parties to a treaty for the protection of birds unique in the history of the world. The full text of this pact may be obtained on application to the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, along with the text and the enabling act (bill 92), passed by the Dominion Parliament on July 21, 1917. An abridgment of the text of these laws is in course of preparation, and will be issued in leaflet form for distribution by the Canadian Society for the Protection of Birds this year.

This treaty was drafted and signed after an exhaustive biological survey of the North American continent, in which the evidence of experts regarding the mission of certain species of birds in organic nature to maintain an essential check on insect life, was presented and confirmed. The alarming decrease of useful species of birds of all kinds on this continent was also noted and deplored.

The treaty provides for a perpetual close season on all migratory insectivorious and weed-seed eating birds, and for special periods of protection for vanishing species such as the Wood duck and the Eider duck. It abolishes spring shooting all over the continent and provides a close season on all migratory game birds throughout the nesting season—from March 10 to September 1st.

The Canadian enabling act is known as the Migratory Birds Convention Act. This splendid Act—which the public should be made aware of, is now operative throughout the Dominion—imposes a maximum penalty of one hundred dollars or six months' imprisonment, or both fine and imprisonment, on any person violating its provisions. It also provides for the confiscation of all guns, ammunition, vessels, vehicles and outfits of every description, that may be used in the violation of the act or even with intention to violate it.

Under the act, Dr. C. Gordon Hewitt, Dominion entomologist, has recently been appointed as Dominion consulting zoologist. The administration department, which will include game officers, invested with the powers of both a constable and justice of the peace, is in course of organization.

Excellent though its provisions are, and its administration may be, however, the act and the great treaty will be of little avail for their purpose unless the people are enlightened regarding the value of birds to man and their nests and eggs. Until this is done and the knowledge of the mission of birds in nature, and pure interest in birds for their beauty and habits and song become widespread, laws for their protection will be evaded or only half-heartedly obeyed.

The Canadian Society for the Protection of Birds exists for the purpose of disseminating this knowledge. It is a voluntary movement receiving the approval of the Ontario Government, which has assigned to it suitable headquarters at 153 University avenue, Toronto. Its object is the education of the people regarding bird life and bird service. It is the only organized and incorporated association in Canada for this purpose.

During the past year 2,500 members were enrolled, chiefly juniors, from the Yukon to Newfoundland. The awakening interest of young people in birds is promising, and the chief hope that the treaty for their protection will be faithfully observed.

But the pretensions of the multitude of "young naturalists" who apply yearly for permits to collect birds' eggs and nests and to kill rare visitors to their localities as "specimens," must be resolutely repressed, and M.L.A.'s discouraged from applying to secure these permits.

Not in one case in a thousand is the "collection" more than a passing fancy, to be thrown out in the course of time as rubbish—and Canada so much the poorer for the loss of the birds.

The truest and most beneficial knowledge of birds is obtained by use of the kodak, and by patient, intelligent observation.

To Mend Marble Ornaments.

To mend marble ornaments, plaster of Paris, finely powdered, is soaked in as much saturated solution of alum as it will absorb. The mixture is baked in a slow oven, and when hard it is ground to a powder. This powder, mixed in water and applied like plaster, sets very hard, will take a very good polish, and, if properly colored, makes a capital imitation of any kind of marble.

At Sea.

On the trip to France the rough going produced that feeling among troopers which made it a matter of absolute indifference to them when the world came to an end, just so it came quick. On an army transport was a steward named Terry. Before the mess call sounded, Terry always visited the different staterooms: Pushing the door ajar he would say to the officers: "Gentlemen, do you wish me to throw your luncheon overboard, or will you do it yourselves?"

The Change.

When the old-fashioned wife
With her hubby had strife,
"I'll go back to my mother," she's sob,
But the spouse of to-day
Doesn't threaten that way,
She says: "I'll go back to my job."

Fighting Farmers.

Three thousand three hundred members of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers are in the Canadian expeditionary force; 470 have made the supreme sacrifice.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER
SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

To Rebuild France.

Her Excellency the Duchess of Devonshire has most graciously granted her patronage to the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire mobilization of a grand army of 1,111 volunteers for the adoption and relief of towns and villages in the devastated regions in France. The scheme has already been commenced in Toronto, and two battalions are under formation. Operations will extend throughout Canada. Mme. Chase Casgrain will leave shortly to visit the chapters and will organize brigades for the purpose of raising funds for this enormous undertaking.

Not a Corn or Callus on Feet
Apply few drops, then lift them off without pain.

A noted Cincinnati authority discovered a new ether compound and called it freezone and it now can be had in little bottles for a few cents from any drug store.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone upon a tender corn or painful callus and instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off with fingers.

No pain, not a bit of soreness, either when applying freezone or afterwards, and it doesn't even irritate the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also toughened calluses, just shrivel up and lift off so easy. It is wonderful! It works like a charm. Try it!

Women should keep freezone on their dressers and never let a corn ache twice.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction

LADY'S EMPIRE MATERNITY DRESS.

The Empire waist is the most satisfactory for this type of dress, besides being the most comfortable and becoming. An excellent model for this purpose is shown in No. 8739. The dress has simple, straight hanging lines and it is made so that it can be worn when the figure is of normal size. The waist has a panel front which fastens at both sides. The panel is cut for a V shaped neck, which is finished with a very deep collar, having a slight roll at the back of the neck. Either full length or three-quarter sleeves may be chosen. The skirt is in one piece, and it may be either box plaited or gathered to the Empire waistline. The wide belt has a fancy piece applied at the front.

The lady's Empire maternity dress pattern No. 8739 is cut in five sizes—36 to 44 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 5¼ yards 36 inch or 3½ yards 54 inch material, with ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting material.

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

She Beat the Detectives

By RICHARD MARKELY

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

Alec Winfield had been married and was on his wedding tour with his bride. The couple were at dinner at a hotel in Albany when a policeman entered the dining-room and arrested Winfield. Mrs. Winfield was much agitated, but her husband assured her that a mistake had been made and he would easily prove his innocence of any charge that might be brought against him.

Winfield was taken before a judge, who asked him many questions, one of which turned out to be of importance to the prisoner. It was, What was his business? Winfield said that he was a patent lawyer, and had his office in a certain building in Buffalo. Whereupon the judge made out papers enabling the police to send him to New York, where the accusation against him had been made.

Winfield had been charged with having obtained money under false pretenses—that he would give checks just before a holiday, on a bank in a different city, forging the name of some depositor of the bank.

Winfield's arrest had occurred in this wise: The scoundrel had been in Albany on the third of July and had perpetrated his usual swindles there, pretending to hail from Buffalo, where he had an office for securing patents and stating that he was stopping while in Albany at the same hotel as Winfield. The latter being the only recent arrival registered from Buffalo, the police arrested him on suspicion. His story of his business and residence confirmed the charge.

Winfield was taken to New York, where he was identified by certain persons as the man who had given forged checks signed William Spangler. He began now to be much troubled. The identification of these persons was a very serious matter. Evidently the forger must resemble him. However, he had no difficulty in procuring bail, and went home to his bride.

Fortunately, Winfield was a man of means and he employed the best detectives he could find to get on the track of Spangler. The detective went to Buffalo and made inquiries at the building in which Winfield had his office for a man who resembled the patent lawyer. He did not succeed in getting a trace of any such person. He also visited persons whom Spangler had operated upon in different cities, but met with no success in getting on the track of the real swindler. He had Winfield's likeness with him, which he showed the swindled parties, some of them identifying Winfield by it as the person who had passed the forged checks.

Winfield was spending a good deal of money to clear himself of the charge against him; his trial was coming on, and the matter looked very serious. His wife bore up well under the strain and took considerable interest in the efforts to find Spangler. But it was evident to her as well as the others that they were as far off the track as when they began the search.

The day before the trial was to come off she took up the photograph her husband had given the detective and which had been pronounced a likeness of the swindler. While looking at it she noticed that one foot, being in an advanced position, appeared very large.

"Alec," she said to her husband, "anyone looking at this photograph would think that you have an enormous foot."

Winfield was noted for having a very small and remarkably narrow foot.

"That's because of the position. I was sitting with my legs crossed and that foot was nearer the camera than the rest of me. Consequently it was taken on a larger scale."

Mrs. Winfield made no reply. She was still intent on the photograph.

"A penny for your thoughts, dear," said her husband.

"I was thinking that maybe the swindler didn't have your narrow foot. Did he buy any shoes with a forged check?"

Winfield ran to his wife and gave her a bear hug.

"Sweetheart," he exclaimed, "you've beaten the detectives and all the rest of us. One of the swindler's victims is a New York shoemaker. We can get the size of his foot from this party."

The next day at the trial Arthur Packard, a clerk in an expensive shoe store, was called as a witness. He identified Winfield as the man to whom he had sold several pairs of shoes and had received a check amounting to thirty-two dollars, on a bank in Chicago. The transaction occurred on the day before Labor day.

"Do you remember," asked Winfield's attorney, "the size of the shoes you sold the defendent?"

"I don't remember the size, but I do remember that it was a very large size."

"Broad or narrow?"

"Very broad. I had difficulty in getting shoes broad enough for him."

"That'll do. Mr. Winfield, put your foot upon that chair so that the jury can see it."

Winfield put his foot on the chair, displaying his 5½-A shoe.

It is needless to say that the accused was acquitted without the jury leaving their seats. He took his wife in his arms, saying:

"I owe my vindication to you."

Benny Vaigar, the French bantamweight champion, was given the newspaper decision over Dick Loadman, of Lockport, N.Y., in a ten-round bout at Cleveland last night.

PATRIOTIC ENTERTAINMENT HELD IN LAKEFIELD

Corporal Stenner of the Princess Pats Presided--Comforts For the Boys Overseas---The Programme

LAKEFIELD, April 22.—A most successful entertainment was given in Lakefield on Friday evening, April 19. The programme was under the auspices of the Soldiers' News Club and the Maple Leaf Club. The former, a band of twenty young girls, ranging in age from 14 to 17 years, presided over by Miss Graham, and the latter eighteen in number aged from 9 to 12, under the care of Miss Hilliard. The object of the entertainment was, by the Soldiers' News Club to send maple sugar to Lakefield boys overseas, and by the Maple Leaf Club to contribute to the support of the Maple Leaf Club in England, which are maintained for homes for Canadian soldiers on leave, affording our brave lads the care, protection and entertainment of real homes.

Last year the Soldiers' News Club sent 74 generous parcels of maple sugar to boys belonging to Lakefield and its vicinity, and their share of the splendid financial result of this entertainment will enable them to send about the same number this year.

The programme, which is appended, was presented to a packed house, and was presided over by Lance Corporal Stenner of the Princess Pats, who is home on a short leave, and both clubs were keenly sensible of the honour thus bestowed upon them. Dr. Finnimon, of the Princess Pats, was an interested member of the audience. Mr. J. J. McFadden sold tickets at the lower entrance to the Town Hall, and Mr. Gordon Fairbairn received them at the upper door. Messrs. Wm. Hampton and Stanley Kidd acted as ushers. Thus was the Great War Veterans represented in this patriotic undertaking, and Lakefield is proud to welcome home and honour these noble men who all bear the marks of having "done their bit" for the safeguarding of liberty and justice. Having regard to the programme where every part was so excellently taken, it would be unfair to accord especial mention to anyone, but perhaps it may be justifiable to speak of the recitations of Miss Electa Preston of the Soldiers' News Club and Miss Isabel Sutton, of the Maple Leafs, the singing of Miss Helen Bygott, the part of Brittania played by Miss Gwendoline Simpson, the excellent piano work of Miss Simpson and Miss Lola Waldon, and the part of the little mushrooms in Miss Penberthey's pretty 'Mushroom' song. These stand out as dazzling stars in a brilliant constellation, and indicate talent of a more than ordinarily high degree, and both clubs have now established a reputation of giving an evening well worth while.

The handsome sum of $63.25 was received to gladden the hearts of these young workers for the great cause.

LIEUT. CUNNINGHAM REPORTED MISSING AND BELIEVED KILLED

Mr. Robert Cunningham, 378 Stewart street, has been officially notified that his son Lieut. Herbert D. Cunningham, M.C., is reported missing and believed killed. The date is unknown. A letter from the Officer Commanding the unit to which Lieut. Cunningham was attached, states that Cunningham, together with three other men, were in the zone of machine gun fire and were seen to fall to the ground. A few minutes later the territory was recovered by the Germans and under the circumstances, the officer commanding was obliged to put in his report "missing and believed killed". The Officer suggests that Cunningham may be a prisoner in Germany, but little hope is held out for his safety.

Lieut. Cunningham enlisted in Alameda, Sask., where he was residing when war broke out. He formerly resided in Millbrook, where he received his education and subsequently removed to Peterborough until he moved West. He was wounded in February last and was awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry.

ENEMY TRENCHES ARE CONTINUOUSLY BOMBARDED BY CANADIAN BATTERIES

The Canadians Used Six Thousand Shells Against Thirty Enemy Battery Positions--Sharp Fighting Developed in Many Places--Prisoners Taken.

ENEMY DISPLAYS NERVOUSNESS

(By W. A. Willison, Canadian Press Correspondent.)

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, April 23.—Raided in no less than seven places, gassed with thousands of Lachrymatory and Lethal shells, harrassed by special artillery shots, his trenches swept by machine gun and rifle bullets, his front hammered by trench mortars, the enemy for the past twelve hours has had a lively time at the hands of the Canadians. From dusk until dawn the whole front has been lively north and south of Lens. The ceaseless rumble of our heavies, who are neutralizing hostile batteries by calculated and continuous gas shelling, has been accompanied by the sharper chorus of our field artillery, carying out a particularly harrassing fire programme. Periodically our artillery fire has reached a barrage intensity in support of raiding parties. Regularly the Bosche lines have been lit up with scores of flares, betraying nervousness which has been produced among the enemy by such activity, as he has not known on his front for weeks. The enemy has been forced to fire his guns under gas clouds and in gas masks. He has betrayed the effect of our tactics by diminishing the volume of his fire, but has made answer to our general raiding and gas activities by projecting much tear gas against our positions north of Lens.

HEAVY LOSSES.

Of the batteries bombarded by our gunners during the past twelve hours many will not be heard for some time. The enemy gunners must have suffered heavily under our bombardment, for we used nearly six thousand shells against some thirty battery positions. Our 4.5 howitzers secured six direct hits on concrete shelters in the Avion district.

In some instances in our raids, which were all supported by our artillery, our men were unable to locate the enemy. In others sharp fighting developed, particularly in one case, where protracted hand to hand fighting took place. So close was the struggle that we were unable to take many prisoners.

A British Lieutenant Recovered Airman's Body

Famous German Aviator Was Sitting Upright in the Machine With a Bullet Through the Heart

THROUGH THE BARRAGE

(United Press Service).
(By William Philip Simms.)
WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN

Ten O'clock Despatch.

FRANCE, April 23.—A British lieutenant crawled through the barrage the Germans purposely laid down around Baron Von Richthofen's wrecked machine, then crawled back with the famous airman's body.

Richthofen was buried last evening with full honours.

Until further inquiry is made, details of the fight and the exact details of Richthofen's death are uncertain. He appeared at a height of about 8,000 feet over the British lines, somewhat detached from his famous "circus."

AMAZING EXHIBITION.

A fast British machine took on Richthofen in a titanic battle lasting seven or eight minutes, both tumbling about in the sky in an amazing exhibition of skill, apparently falling headlong a thousand feet at a dive, to get a favourable position.

Richthofen flattened out about five hundred feet over the British lines. Rifles and machine guns blazed away from the ground. The Baron's machine crashed to earth.

The Germans immediately put down a barrage around the plane, continuing it all afternoon. The British lieutenant who crawled through the barrage found the body sitting upright in the machine, a bullet through the heart.

Provincial Towns Greatly Disturbed

German Papers Are Filled With Obituaries—Casualties Are Enormous

AN EXAMPLE

Special to the Examiner.

THE HAGUE, April 23.—German provincial towns are greatly disturbed over the enormous casualties resulting from the West front offensives. The papers are filled with obituaries.

As an example, during the first five days of the offensive the small frontier town of Bentheim had sixty-seven dead, and Gronau had twenty-seven.

Bentheim and Gronau are located near the Dutch frontier. Each had a population of 2,500 before the war.

GUATEMALA CAN FURNISH SUPPLIES FOR THE ALLIES

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 23. — Gautemala's entry into the war was regarded favourably here to-day for its moral effect on Central and South America.

Authorities said it would aid materially in the campaign against German propaganda, active in Central America and responsible for minor disturbances there. Gautemala can furnish certain meat and food supplies.

Two More in Prospect.

LONDON, April 23.— Uruguay and Argentina are expected to declare war against Germany at an early date. German newspapers have been notified to prepare the public for this development.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

This is "Boy's Week" at the Semi-Ready Clothes Shop, and whether the boys or their parents want to purchase some garments or not, I would be glad to have them come in and see the boys' suits, and incidentally I want them to become better acquainted with "High-School" clothes for boys. Come in after four, any day, boys. "Come to me."

QUIET IN IRELAND

Labor Men Ignored Order to Cease Work For a Day as a Protest Against Conscription

WORK AS USUAL

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 23.— The order of the Irish labour convention for a day's cessation of work as a protest against conscription was absolutely ignored in Belfast and the north of Ireland, says a Central News despatch from Belfast to-day. Work went on as usual, the message reports, and there was no outward manifestations to make the day different from any other working day.

NO CONSCRIPTION OF ENEMY ALIENS

May Be Interned, But Not Compelled to Work Says Doherty.

OTTAWA, April 22.—The debate on the proposed Registration Bill made it clear to-day that the government has no intention of conscripting aliens for industry. Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, stated that prisoners of war might be compelled to work by their captors and receive military pay. With regard to enemy aliens who were civilians, however, the rule of international law was that they might be required to leave the country, and if permitted to remain in the country, might be interned for protection, but might not be punished or compelled to work. In England civilian prisoners in considerable numbers were allowed to work voluntarily, but they were not compelled to work. The Minister of Justice pointed out that the compulsion of enemy aliens in Canada to work might be followed by reprisals upon Canadians in enemy countries, and, further, that the labour of such aliens under compulsion would not likely be productive.

The registration of the man and woman power in Canada is to be compulsory and is to include every person who resides in Canada, male or female, British subject or alien 16 years of age and upwards. This registration will furnish information as to the manner in which Canada's labour resources are being utilized and as to persons available for industry and agriculture. With this information in its possession the Registration Board will be able to decide on what industries able-bodied men should not be employed and to assist the enforcement of the recent order-in-Council requiring every citizen to be engaged in some useful occupation. At the same time it was made clear that the Government had no intention of conscripting aliens for industry.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

British Improved Line and Took a Number of Prisoners—A Successful Naval Operation

FRENCH COMMUNIQUE

LONDON, April 23. — On the Somme front, north of Albert, the British last night improved their line by a successful local operation, it was announced officially. They took sixty prisoners.

On the Flanders front, in the Robecq sector and near Wytschaete, the British took prisoners.

THE OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

In the neighbourhood of Fampoux one of our raiding parties entered the enemy's trenches and penetrated his support line. The hostile artillery was active yesterday afternoon and during the night west of Albert and on the greater part of our front from the south of the Forest of Nieppe to the east of Ypres. Concentration of hostile troops observed in the Villers Bretonneux sector and in the neighbourhood of Serre were engaged by our artillery.

NAVAL OPERATION.

LONDON, April 23.—British naval forces to-day raided the German submarine bases of Ostend and Zeebrugge, the Admiralty announces. Five old cruisers which had been filled with concrete for use in blocking Channels were run aground, blown up and abandoned by their crews. The Admiralty reports that the raid met with a reasonable measure of success.

LONDON, April 23.—The British attack last night north of Albert was carried out on a front of about 1,000 yards. Reuter's correspondent at British Headquarters reports that an advance was made to a depth of two hundred and fifty yards.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, April 23. — (Official). — Rather spirited artillery engagements occurred on the Somme front and east of Rheims. German raids between Lassigny and Noyon, northwest of Rheims and in the Vosges were without results. Prisoners remained in our hands. Everywhere else the night passed in quiet.

BIG DEMAND FOR BIRTH CERTIFICATES

Registrar General Receives Over 300 Applications a Day.

(Special to The Examiner.)

Toronto, April 23. — Every time that the government issues a call for more men, a rush for birth certificates is made at the office of the Registrar-General, at the Parliament Buildings. The rush first started when the Dominion Police put in an appearance in the city, and it has not abated since. Yesterday the corridors were filled with young men, who wanted to know whether they came in the 19 to 23 class.

The coffers of the provincial treasury ill be augmented by a tidy sum, as a result of the 75c that is charged for each certificate. At the present time there are applications for more than 300 birth and marriage certificates per day.

The Allies Have Large Reserves

Winston Churchill, Minister of Munitions, Says the Destruction of Material Has Been Great

POWER TO CONTINUE

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, April 23.—"The enormous strain thrown on us during the present battle and the destruction of material have been great, but we have enormous reserves, capable of meeting any strain," Winston Churchill, Minister of Munitions, declared in an address here last night.

"We are able to arm and equip any Americans sent temporarily to serve with us.

"The enemy's territorial gains do not affect our or our Allies' power to continue the war at maximum capacity."

AVIATOR GAVE PETERBOROUGH A CALL.

A friendly aviator gave Peterborough a once over at noon to-day, and when last seen was heading westward. The flier entered the city from the direction of Jackkson Park and a few minutes later was on his way west. A few persons were fortunate enough to get a pretty good view of the aeroplane, while others were located where they could distinctly hear the roar of the engine. Now that the flyers are home from Texas it may be that Peterborough will receive an occasional visit even at the risk of causing some of the natives to break their necks in an effort to get a glimpse at one of the instruments of war.

Liquor Vendors Not Appointed For Peterboro'

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, April 23. —Announcement was made to the Examiner by members of the Ontario Board of License Commissioners to-day that while the Board had three applications from Peterborough for Provincial Vendors' licenses under the Ontario Temperance Act, it had been decided that no vendor will be appointed for Peterborough. The only new vendors to be appointed at present will be at Ottawa and Windsor.

The Offensive to Date Has Gone the Way of All Offensives—Germany is Keeping the Losses From the Public.

"THE DECISIVE HOUR"

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 23. — The great west front battle seems about to blaze forth again. That the Germans will try a new offensive at one or two points is likely, that the allies will permit the Teuton to exhaust himself further appears likely, according to military men to-day.

Gen. Foch's plans constitute the great enigma, not alone for the allied nations, but for the Teuton as well. The utmost confidence is manifest here in his strategical and administrative ability. Army men say if he himself does not strike now, it will be because he sees that there is a chance to waste a lot of German lives while the Allied reserve grows, awaiting the time for a big counter blow.

A Striking Point.

Robecq probably will be one of the striking points, while another may be struck simultaneously further south.

The offensive to date has gone the way of all offensives big gains of terrain at the start, greater losses to the Boche than the gains were worth, the advance growing closer and less forceful, and finally, a stalemate. This stalemate will not last, however. The offensive will be resumed, army men say ,and eventually the reinforcements for the Allies will be so great as to make a victory possible. This, however, is a long problem they say.

The New Spirit.

The Echo De Paris, according to diplomatic dispatches, comments joyfully on the new spirit of the Allies.

"Their entente is cemented in rock and their combined resistance to the Hun fury is so radically strong that for a third time Hindenburg has been forced to make a pause in order to reconstitute his shredded masses," says the paper.

Germany is keeping the truth of her losses from the public as well as possible, but the story of the fruitless casualties is seeping back. "If by the end of May," says a Teuton prisoner's letter, "the decisive hour has not struck, it will be useless to continue the tremendous deception of the German public." Another prisoner's letter says the Germans hoped to get Boulogne a channel port.

ALIENS WOULD BE RESTRICTED

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, April 23.—Senator Bradbury has given notice of an amendment to the Dominion Lands Act which would exclude from homesteading privileges all Germans and Austrians who once resided in Canada but returned to Europe and who may come back to Canada after the war. It is felt that many of these men went home to join the enemy ranks.

FIFTY N. Y. ELECTION OFFICIALS SENTENCED

NEW YORK, April 23.—Fifty election officials—half of them democrats and half republicans—were sentenced to-day by Justice Goff to prison terms of two months each after pleading guilty to participation in primary frauds in the mayoralty contest here last September.

Ten others who denied their guilt and were tried and convicted by juries received sentences of from three to six months each.

COOK BACK ON THE FORCE.

Toronto, April 22.—W. J. Cook, the military policeman, who fell into the trap of some fool jokers, and mistook Sir Sam Hughes at the Union Station for a man of military age, has been reinstated in the force, from which he was suspended as a result of his over-zealousness. Sir Sam, since hearing that the incident had been instigated, has interceded for Cook.

"Paterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, APRIL 23, 1918.

GREAT CARE NEEDED.

There is every probability that the little blaze at the Cressman Co. store, yesterday morning, which occurred about 9 o'clock, would have developed into a very serious fire had the same conditions existed and the fire started throughout the night with no one in the store to detect it. The cause of the fire is said to have been a "city" wire rubbing against one of the iron posts outside the store, which caused everything metal in the building to become charged with electricity, finally breaking out in a small blaze which fortunately was easily controlled.

The wiring of every building is inspected according to law, but there is little comfort in this fact if just as bad trouble may be caused from wiring outside the building. Rigid inspection of outside wiring and conditions apparently is just as necessary as the inspection of inside work, and if this has not been done it is felt that the attention of the Commissioners has only to be drawn to the facts to have both outside and inside conditions absolutely perfect.

A RIGHT MOVE.

The announcement by Fire Chief Grange of his intention to inaugurate a monthly inspection of the city, wih a view to fire prevention will be generally endorsed. Many fires are the result of the lack of such an inspection. Rubbish is allowed to accumulate around some premises until a carelessly flung match or cigarette stub, does the damage. Chief Grange's plan of dividing he city into three sections and making three of his brigade officers responsible for the inspection of these sectionns, is a good one, and if it is carried out systematically, as no doubt it will be, should be a most valuable precaution. Important sections of the Fire Marshal's Act will have to be observed in view of the step decided upon by Chief Grange, and the monthly inspection should result in a cleaner and safer Peterboro.

The Fire Chief should be given every assistance by the citizens in the important work he and his department are undertaking. It is a step in the right direction and deserves support and encouragement.

WHY NOT PETERBORO?

In Ottawa they are staging early in May, a "Clean-up Week" campaign, that has as its objective the making of Ottawa one of the cleanest cities in Canada. A strong committee has been formed, the co-operation of many organizations has been promised, and all classes of citizens will be asked to assist in the work. The date set for the beginning of the campaign is May 6th, but the committee point out that it is not necessary for citizens to wait until that time to begin their work.

A similar movement might well be undertaken in Peterboro. We have an added incentive to clean up the city this year in the visit of the Duke of Devonshire. Peterboro should have on its best clothes for the coming of the Governor-General, and a systematic cleaning up by the citizens everywhere would leave in the mind of the distinguished visitor a most desirable impression.

During the long winter the accumulation under the snow of a certain amount of refuse is inevitable, in spite of the regular collection of garbage. All such refuse should now be gathered up and got rid of. Stables and stable yards should receive special attention, while a small expenditure on paint and white wash will achieve wonders. The value of a concerted effort to thoroughly clean up every hole and corner in the city will be recognized.

The reward will be found in a fresh atmosphere, in a diminution of the fly evil, in milk and food that are less contaminated, fewer cases of sickness, less danger of fires, and the improved appearance of houses and yards and lanes.

Even if the time is too short to organize a campaign on the lines adopted by the Ottawa committee, each householder can form a committee of one to deal with his own premises. Much can be done in this respect if the citizens will recognize the importance of the work.

THE BAND GRANT.

The question of a grant for the 57th Regimental Band is still hanging fire as far as the Council is concerned, doubtless because it is associated in the aldermanic mind with the matter of the disposition of the instruments of the 93rd Band. As far as the present is concerned, however, there does not seem to be sufficient connection between the two questions to justify any considerable delay in regard to the 57th's request.

In connection with the 93rd instruments the Examiner has already made its position clear. This paper believes that the instruments having been subscribed for the use of members of the Canadian Expeditionary force should be turned over to men who have been overseas, and therefore believes that if the veterans want the instruments they should have them.

But the question of a grant to the 57th Band is a different matter altogether, and should be approached from a business standpoint. There is so much money in the estimates to be spent on band music, principally to provide concerts during the summer. The question before to Council is how to expend that money so that it will furnish the maximum amount of enjoyment and entertainment for the citizens. In pre-war days the concerts of the 57th Band were for many people the big event of each week during the summer. There was no doubt as to the appreciation of the citizens of the programmes provided by the organization for the slopes of Victoria Park were crowded with thousands of people every Friday night. If the re-organization of the 57th Band and its strengthening by the acquirement of many new members have enabled it to regain its form of a few years ago then as a matter of business it should be the recipient of a substantial grant, for it will be in a position to deliver what the people want. And that should be the only feature to be considered by the Council.

The large turnout shown by the 57th Band on Sunday gives excellent promise for the future.

The Council should satisfy itself as to the possibilities before the Band and then deal with the request accordingly. It should simply be a question of getting value for the money expended and when it is a matter of providing enjoyment for the people, the opinion of the people, well be taken as a guide.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

To-day is not only St. George's Day, but is also the anniversary of the birth of William Shakespeare. Coming, as it does, on the anniversary, too, of the hardest day's fighting of the second battle of Ypres, April 23 should be regarded as one of the most important in the calendar.

The unfortunate Germans who are holding the sector opposite the Canadians would doubtless prefer to have been chosen for some other point on the line. 1,200 drums of gas, properly distributed, and varied with gas shells, shrapnel and trench mortar bombs have a most depressing effect and in their latest demonstration General Currie's men seem to have given Fritz verything in this line they had in stock.

No flags for St. Julien Day; few roses for St. George's Day. What is the matter in Peterborough?

The drive of the enemy in the Valley of the Lys seems to be checkd, but Lord Robert Cecil's warning should be heeded. "We would be wickedly foolish," says the British Minister of Blockade, "if we believed the battle had ended. We have an indefinite period of terrible and strenuous struggles before us."

The registration to be taen in June is a move that should have been taken in the early stages of the war. The money wasted on the unsystematic national service movement would have provided a proper registration.

New Issue Is Offered

Abitibi Power and Paper Company's Attractive Proposition

A new issue of the $1,000,000 7 p.c. convertible mortgage debenture stock of the Abitibi Power & Paper Company, Limited, is being offered by the Royal Securities Corporation, Limited, at a price of 87 and accrued interest, yielding over 8 1-2 per cent., particulars of which are given in the Company's prospectus appearing elsewhere in this paper.

The Abitibi Company is one of the largest companies engaged in the production of newsprint paper and sulphite and ground wood pulp. Its mills are located at Iroquois Falls, Ont., and have an annual capacity of 62,000 tons of newsprint paper, 21,000 surplus tons of sulphite pulp and 22,500 surplus tons of groundwood pulp. The company controls under lease over 1,000,000 acres of pulpwood lands with water powers approximately 48,000 horsepower.

An estimated valuation of the company's property as a going concern, made by George F. Hardy consulting engineer, of New York, October 13, 1917, gives a total of at least $13,200,000, against which the company has an outstanding funded debt of $6,400,700 including the present issue. The earnings for the year ending December 31st last, available for interest and depreciation were $1,139,275.07. Interest for the year absorbed $361,411.05, leaving a surplus of $777,864.02 or eleven times the amount of the annual interest required for the new issue of 7 p.c. convertible mortgage debenture stock.

The company's product is marketed chiefly in the United States, where the demand for newsprint paper and pulp exceeds the available supply and is constantly expanding. The expansion of the Canadian pulp and paper industry in recent years has been one of the marvels of industrial growth. In six years our exports have advanced from an annual value of $14,659,325 to one of $51,924,888. For the current fiscal year the exports amount to about $60,000,000 and the total output, including domestic consumption, to $80,000,000. The Abitibi Company's establishment is of modern construction throughout and its mills among the best organized and best equipped in Canada.

The new issue is convertible into common stock at par any time after March 1, 1921, and is callable at the company's option at 110 per cent. and accrued interest at any time on or before that date, making it an exceedingly attractive offer.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

What Would He Do?

(Montreal Star.)

The young draftee who said he objected to killing any of God's creatures might explain what he does when a husky mosquito operates on his nose.

Kaiser Differs.

(Hamilton Herald.)

We gather that the Kaiser does not share Sir Wilfrid Laurier's democratic contempt of titles; our reason for this assumption being that the Kaiser has decided to bestow upon himself several brand new titles, among them Grand Duke of Courland, Grand Duke of Lithuania, Prince of Livonia and Esthonia, and Great Protector of Finland.

The War Over.

(Ottawa Journal.)

It was after spending the entire day rehashing the election that the committee of the whole rose and reported progress on the bill to provide $500,000,000 for the war.

Was the House of Commons informed at the secret session on Wednesday that the war was over?

The Dawn of Victory.

(Montreal Star.)

So, joined by a new and lasting bond of friendship to our great neighbour to the South, cemented more closely to the Motherland by the link of further sacrifice, assured of the sympathies of the whole civilized world and served in the field by men of such courage and devotion that they compel the admiration of the enemy, we can look forward confidently and uncomplainingly towards the dawn of final victory.

The Censorship.

(Kingston Standard.)

Regret may be expressed that the Government had not introduced these regulations earlier though now that they have been introduced the press will obey them as a war-time measure. But we would point out that the Government must not only enforce them with firmness, but with great discretion. Fair criticism of men and measures is in the interests of the country and the Empire and we believe this to be the opinion of the press.

By Battles, Not Boycotts.

(New York World.)

Germany is not to be beaten by threats of what we are going to do after the war. Unless we win this war, and win it so thoroughly that there wil be no question about it, Germany will determine for itself and for ourselves just what we shall and shall not do. The war once won, as we must win it, we shall have no need of reprisals, since those are the very wrongs we have taken arms against. Not by boycotts, but by battles, not by exclusion but by conclusion, is the earth to be freed from Prussian terrorism, and it would be well for all our speakers at war meetings to address themselves to that idea exclusively.

MR. A. LOW BUYS OLD PALACE HOTEL

Mr. A. Low has purchased the Palace Hotel property on Hunter street from Mrs. B. Roach, of Toronto, and will renovate and alter it for an apartment building. The lease held by the present tenant expires on May 20th, after which Mr. Low will immediately begin the changes he has planned. The deal was put through by Mr. J. A. O'Brien, of Gordon, Widdifield and O'Brien.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear son, Pte. Samuel McKinlay, who was reported missing at the battle of Langemark, and who has since been presumed to have died on April 23rd, 1915.
—Inserted by His Mother, Mrs. S. McKinlay.

If I could have strengthened your arm, lad
Or caught in my breast the ball,
But I was helpless at home, lad
And I could not save your fall,
Your dear head low in the mire lad,
Your blue eyes closed at rest,
Those eyes that smiled in my face dear
As I'd hold you against my breast.
Why yesterday it seems, dear
You were only a child at play,
And then I had kissed you good-bye, lad,
You followed the drum away.

When you were just a wee lad,
In anger, or hurt at play
You would find my arms around you,
I'd kiss all your tears away.
How I loved the clinging hands, dear,
I could help you then, but to-day,
You died alone, uncared for,
And I was far away.

And yet I am not alone, lad,
For tonight I seem to see
The armies of mothers and wives, lad,
Who have given their best like me.
I would not keep you back lad
If I had you again to give,
Oh Britain free, victorious
Who dies if Britain live.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear brother, Private S. McKinlay. Inserted by his three sisters, Bessie, Jean and May.

Ah, me, Ah, me, our hearts are sad,
We cannot stay our tears:
For he was one of our soldier lads—
A brother we loved for years.

It seems it was but yesterday,
We were playmates around our mother's door;
Now in his narrow bed he's laid,
On earth we'll meet no more.

He heard his King and country's call,
And gladly he obeyed;
For our dear flag surrendered,
All the sacrifice he paid.

With glad bright smile, he said "Good-bye!"
So fearless and so brave;
In youthful bloom to die—
He fills a soldier's grave.

Somewhere in France, far o'er the sea,
Our dear young hero sleeps;
While o'er his grave the silent stars
Their lonely vigil keep.

Farewell, farewell, sweet be thy rest,
Far from the world of care;
In yonder mansions of the blest,
We hope to meet you there.

IN MEMORIAM.

JAMIESON.—In loving memory of Isabella Jamieson, wife of the late Thomas Jamieson, who died April 23rd, 1917, in her 86th year.

Peaceful be thy rest, dear grandma,
'Tis sweet to breathe thy name,
In life I loved you very dear,
In death I do the same.
—Granddaughter Irene.

Here is a Wonderfully Chic Turban Covered Entirely with Ostrich Feathers $8.00

The hat fits snug over the head as a turban and is trimmed completely with ostrich feathers which cover the frame closely. Except for a fancy of fruit or a flower placed in various positions, the hat depends for its effectiveness solely on the feathers. It is very, VERY pretty and the woman who loves something odd and different will take to them at first glance.

SILK or SERGE DRESSES at $25.00

That are Copies of much Higher Priced Frocks

The headline tells the story and we were not timid in making the importance of the event plain, you will notice. And we say here that if these dresses could be seen by as many women within one hour, there would not be a single trace of them left.

They are the kind that have much higher priced tickets attached to them in other stores. Including the striking Eton fronts and draped skirts, the most wanted shades.

Soft draping quality taffeta, charmingly combined with maline, net or metallic laces—others of white or colored georgette crepe trimmed with little roses. Others show a tendency toward the bustle effect.

Sicily's Lemons Are Shut Out By Scarcity Of Ships

An embargo on Sicilian lemons announced last week by the United States War Trade Board, means that the American requirements of this fruit must be supplied by California. Scarcity of bottoms, the trade term for lack of ships and the congestion of the Atlantic ports, are given as reasons for this action by the United States authorities. It is expected here that satisfactory arrangements will be effected by which the Canadian fruit dealers will receive sufficient supplies for the home demands.

CUBAN FRUIT SITUATION.

Fruit takes second place to sugar in these war days, and the new Cuban sugar crop is given precedence over bananas, cocoanuts, pineapples, and other tropical fruits that are just beginning to move freely. It is stated that only two weeks will be allowed for the movement of pineapples, and that those dealers who have not put in their orders early enough for that supply will simply be left high and dry on the market. A similar condition applies to bananas, which will have to be marked higher up on the price scale this summer.

FINED FOR KILLING DEER OUT OF SEASON

Haliburton last week passed through an unusual stage of dealings in law. On Thursday night Magistrate Jordan, of Minden, heard a case against several Italians in regard to killing deer during the past winter. Two of the offenders were fined $40 and costs and their dogs ordered destroyed.—Minden Echo.

Entrance Blocked

British Casualties Were Heavy in Attack on German Submarine Bases

LONDON April 23.—"There is every reason to believe the entrance to the Bruges canal was blocked," Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, declared in the House of Commons this afternoon, in referring to the British naval raid on the German submarine bases this morning. "Our casualties were heavy. One British destroyer and two motor boats were sunk and two launches are missing.

CASUALTIES HEAVY.

While the operations were in progress, Sir Frederick announced, British parties were landed to distract the enemy. The officer who developed the scheme of attack was killed. Storming parties were landed on the Mole from the cruiser Vindictive. Casualties to personnel, said Sir Eric, were heavy in proportion to the number engaged. An enemy destroyer was torpedoed at Zeebrugge. Two of the blockading ships were sunk and blown up at the entrance to the Bruges canal. The piling beside the Mole at Zeebrugge was blown up by an obsolete submarine filled with explosives.

MURRAY STREET CHURCH ROLL CALL.

Wednesday evening of this week is the great rallying occasion of the congregation of Murray Street Baptist Church. In many years it has been the custom to set apart one evening in which the church membership, having been notified by card, comes together for the calling of the roll. As each name is called a verse of Scripture or a word of testimony is the response. If any are ill or unavoidably absent, a message is sent to be read in response to the name.

This year it is expected that when the names of the absent soldiers are read the home friends will read a sentence from some of their letters or arrange for some other suitable response.

The time-honoured custom is not only a happy but a profitable one. Never as this year had the people more for which to express their thanksgiving, and never was there more need for united prayer. The Baptist people will have a large gathering.

ADDRESSED THE EPWORTH LEAGUE LAST EVENING.

The Epworth League enjoyed a most interesting and instructive address last night in the George street church when Rev. J. Wilks, who recently returned from missionary work in Africa, gave a graphic account of the country, the natives and his work amongst them. The curios which Mr. Wilks brought with him were of a rare and most interesting order and the members of the League displayed a keen interest in them.

The Junior League gave a good musical programme.

MERCHANTS WILL MEET TO-NIGHT.

The hardware men in the city have agreed on a five o'clock closing hour to take effect on Wednesday, May the first. In addition to this, many of the leading stores in the city, including the dry goods merchants, have signified their willingness to close at five o'clock each evening, instead of six o'clock. This evening the Merchants' Association will meet at the Y.M.C.A., and the various sections will present reports of interest to the business.

Poisoned And Shot Dog Escaped But Police Finished It

Of five dogs captured by Jimmy Gates to-day, one of them apparently possessed that tenacity to life that is supposed to be a feline characteristic. It had terrorized the west-end. One day it romped off with a roast of beef from a back kitchen, and more recently it bit a little girl. It was a collie, and although every man's hand was against it, with thumbs down, it managed to escape capture until this morning. It strayed into the backyard of the home on McDonnel Street of the little girl it attacked last week. The mother recognized it, and lured it into the shed, locking the door. Then she notified Mr. Gates, who armed himself with a strong dose of poison at a drug store on his way uptown. First, the dog ate the poison, which had been carefully sandwiched in a piece of meat, and to make sure of the job, Mr. Gates shot it through the head with a 32 calibre gun he borrowed from a neighbour. Confident that he had finished off the collie, he turned his back for a few moments before departing, and in that pause the dog had pulled itself together and vanished.

The next episode in this film was staged with the police in the central roles. A telephone message from a home near the west end of Weller St. gave the information that a dog with a hole in its head was in the neighbourhood of Queen Mary School, menacing the children. P. C. Bromley hurried into the picture and overtook the much-mauled collie west of the school, and finally despatched it with a revolver shot.

Dogs that are taken out on the leash must have a muzzle on or the owners will be summoned to Police Court.

The Pathe Exhibit At Motor Show

The first public exhibit of the Pathe phonograph was made at the Motor Show in the Armouries last week. The Pathe booth was a centre of great interest. The many advantages which are incorporated into these machines makes the Pathe the one instrument for the most discriminating people. Some of the points of musical superiority in the Pathe include:

The permanent sapphire ball, which eliminates the bother of changing needles and does not wear out the records.

The Pathe patented all-wood tone chamber does away with that tinny sound so noticeable in some makes.

Pathe also has a tone modulator, and the Pathe also plays all makes of records and plays them perfectly. The Pathe possesses other features not found in other makes.

Along with the Pathe there are over 75,000 famous Pathe records to choose from. These records have held first place in England and the European countries for over a quarter of a century. These records possess art, from the very best singers in Europe.

On account of the Pathe having only been recently introduced in this city, there may be some people who think that this phonograph is a new machine, assembled by some cabinet-maker and placed on the market as a standard reliable machine, while in reality the Pathe is one of the oldest machines on the market to-day, being manufactured in France for over 25 years, and would not be in this country at the present time had it not been for the war. Therefore, the public have an opportunity of seeing and possessing this French achievement, which is considered to be a marvel of to-day.

Mr. E. V. Warne of this city is sole agent for these famous machines and records, and will be pleased to demonstrate the Pathe at any time.

FUNERAL TOOK PLACE THIS AFTERNOON.

The remains of Thomas Bork, 319 Simcoe street, late Deputy Collector of Inland Revenue, were laid at rest this afternoon in the Norwood cemetery. Service conducted by Rev. Mr. Rowand was held at the family residence at 11 o'clock, before proceeding to the noon C.P.R. train. The pallbearers were Messrs. Wm. Reid, Mr. McDonnell, W. R. Parker, Harry Phelan, Wm. Buller and Albert Raddon.

MANY PRAISE OFFER OF NEW DICTIONARY

Language Guide Should Keep Apace With Flow of Added Words

Distributing a new dictionary has brought this paper many complimentary remarks. One subscriber who presented coupons yesterday for half a dozen dictionaries for different employes and members of his family said he deemed it necessary that a dictionary should progress with the language just as a newspaper does. The world moves rapidly these days, and only the New Universities is apace with today's growth of the language.

The departments handling this great educational offer are being kept busy handing out the books. More reserves had to be rushed last night to fill up the rapidly depleted stock. At this rate the first and limited edition will soon be exhausted.

While readers are eager for the book on account of its being authoritative and complete, its absolute newness appeals to thousands. It has been many a long year since an actual new dictionary was given to the public. The New Universities Dictionary is new in all the word implies— new in contents, new in type, new in arrangements of helps to word study. Particularly is it new in making the study of to-day's English easy for young people who are so situated that they cannot attend schools and obtain individual instruction. Unaided, a young man or woman employed may learn the correct use of the English of modern business and society if they but follow the directions of the great university teachers whose articles on "Standard English," "Practical Syntax" (which means How to make good sentences), "Punctuation" and "Etymology" appear, plainly written in simple English, in this book.

Even the word "Etymology," which looks harsh and forbidding to a beginner, is made simple if one reads the article by Clark S. Northup, Ph.D., instructor in English in Cornell University. Professor Northup's article tells how to learn where our words were found, why we adopted them, and how we changed them to mean what we wanted to say. That's what Etymology is and this paper distributes this dictionary because it wants every reader to know all about the language.

THE ARCHBISHOP WAS GIVEN AN ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME

His Grace Was Met at the Station by Representative Citizens—Reception at St. John's Church—First Visit to Peterboro.

THE WAR

Enthusiastic welcomes on all sides were accorded His Grace the Most Reverend G. Thornloe, D.D., D.C.L., Archbishop of Algoma, and Metropolitan of the Ecclesiastical Province of Ontario, the first Archbishop to visit Peterboro. His Grace was met at the station by representatives citizens, and taken in Mr. Aylmer's car to Mr. C. C. Abbott's house, Hunter street, where he will stay during his visit in the city.

RECEPTION AT ST. JOHN'S.

At 8 o'clock a reception was held in St. John's Sunday school, and the officials of the city, ecclesiastic and public, turned out in large numbers to meet His Grace, who was introduced by the chairman of the reception committee, Rev. Canon Morley, who acted for Canon Davidson, at present ill in Toronto.

THE MEANING OF ARCHBISHOP

The Archbishop, a man of very slight build, very white, and a pleasing personality, spoke in a simple and direct fashion, not above the head of the simplest listener, and in a most pleasing voice. He spoke of the kindly reception which had been given to him, and the way in which he had come—in answer to the insistent invitation of Rev. Mr. Price. Continuing, he told what an Archbishop means. "It means," he said, "and represents what the church stands for, or the principles of the Catholic Church. It means he must do nothing to bring reproach, to belittle any institution connected with the Church. It behooves an Archbishop to be more serious than a lesser dignatary, as the higher a man rises the more incumbent it becomes upon him to be faithful to the principles he represents. The Catholic Church stands for long-standing precious institutions, for antiquity, for comprehensiveness and coherence. We are getting to value comprehensiveness more and more. All people should behave to one another as brothers and sisters, and I know by the very congregation which represents different churches, we are growing toward that goal, and I rejoice in the evidence of coherence.

"We are getting more and more to value the churches outside of the Church of England, and I hope bye and bye we may come together again—for I believe separation is the work of the evil one. We are coming to a time when we will realize that division is the greatest evil of the country. We are coming to a day when we will find plenty of ways in which we can sympathize and cooperate in interests at stake on every hand. Till that day there is small chance of coming together.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

"I believe we have arrived at a day when we realize the power of prayer and I believe that prayer alone is holding back the enemy on the other side. We don't know what we are doing by prayer. Go on praying, and who can say how God will restore the Church to a oneness.

"The primary purpose of the Church is to evangelize the world—the ultimate object is that all people, nations and languages may be united and brought together, and when the primary purpose is accomplished we may beat the swords into ploughshares and close all colleges and military institutions.

THE WAR.

"I congratulate Peterboro on the part she has played in the war, and I assure you it is not in vain the boys have sacrificed themselves and suffered. Bad as things look, and critical as they are, our efforts have not been wasted. I am confident of victory. Why does victory linger? we ask. We know how the Germans entered and how their calculations were upset. We went out confidently, too, believing in the righteousness of our cause. Would it have been good for us to have gained a complete and sudden victory? Should we not have gone back to pride, worldly principles and the old conditions of life? It may be that God defers victory until he sees that it may not be bad for us. It may be that He is waiting until the world comes to its senses. I may be a good thing for us if we should not gain a wholesale victory, but narrowly come through; because it may make us remember God, solemnize us, make us serious, changed conscious of God, and bring us to living for higher interests, less engrossed in the lower life—all not striving for ourselves, but all helping to live up to a conception of the Golden Rule.

PRESENT SITUATION.

"The situation as it is to-day finds the enemy, only a short time ago, only able to stand against the different forces; now the east is absolutely broken down; Germany is master of Russia, which has collapsed. Italy is more or less depleted, and just standing. France is bled white; but in the west are two vigorous, determined forces upon which the world depends. The one Anglo-Saxon race, Great Britain and the United States. Strange that notwithstanding the gulf politically and otherwise, the two branches of the Anglo-Saxon races have bene brought together. Is it not a wonderful thing that the bulwark of freedom is that race? Can it mean that God has singled out the Anglo-Saxon race to deliver the world into an abiding peace, to turn back the tide of tyranny. The thought ought to permeate Britons, that all may rise to be ready when God shall call."

In conclusion he spoke of the heroic deeds of the British, which never before have been greater.

A PROGRAMME.

A short programme was given in the Sunday school. Mr. R. J. Devey showed some views taken by Captain Dancey of Ireland, and Mrs. Arthur Amys sang "There's a Land." Mrs. Foster gave a splendid violin solo, and Mr. S. Kennet sang "Home Sweet Home."

WELCOMED BY THE MAYOR.

The programme concluded by a short speech of welcome, by Mayor Duncan, who, on behalf of the city, expressed the appreciation of the citizens for the honour conferred by having the Archbishop with us.

PETERBORO COUNTY FARMERS ORGANIZE

Mr. R. B. Rogers is President of the New Organization.

A meeting of a number of the farmers living in the townships of Otonabee and Douro, adjoining the east side of the city of Peterborough, was held in East City Monday evening, at which a branch was formed of the United Farmers of Ontario. The principal speaker was Mr. H. B. Cowan, editor-in-chief of Farm and Dairy, who made a comparison of the conditions in Canada seventy-five years ago, when farmers formed a great majority of the population and were influential in its government, with conditions to-day when the farming and urban populations are about equal, and where the control of the great organizations of the country has largely passed into the hands of urban people, including that of the banks, the great daily newspapers, manufacturing industries and others of the same character. The result has been that business interests have obtained control of the legislatures and of the House of Commons, in which the farmers have a very small representation. The effect has been to transfer the burden of concealed taxation largely to the people living in the rural districts, with the result that the farming population of Eastern Canada has been declining for years, and is smaller to-day than it was forty years ago. The influences which lead to the starting of the farmers' movements were explained and its development described as well as the prospects for the future of the movement.

The Discussion.

A discussion was held as to the advisability of becoming identified with the movement, with the result that a resolution was carried unanimously deciding to form a local branch. The following officers were elected: President, R. B. Rogers; Vice-President, Jos. O'Reilly; Secretary, M. S. Burnham; Directors: Wm. M. Reid, R. A. Wilson, Wm. Roberts, Alex. Hewson, C. Brown and Jos. Coughlin, all of Peterborough. The executive will select the place of meeting and make arrangements for the next meeting. An invitation may be sent to the officers of some of the local farmers' clubs that have been organized for some time to address the next meeting. Every farmer present became a member.

Deserter And A Conscientious Objector Ordered To Kingston

Joseph Adams Returned to the Military Authorities His Order to Report For Service on April 16 —Chas. Healey Deserted in 1915

Charles Healey, a deserter, and Joseph L. Adams, a conscientious objector, who refused to report for service under the Military Service Act, were handed over to the Military authorities by Magistrate Dumble this morning.

According to the police, Healey enlisted at Sault Ste Marie in the Spring of 1915, but disappeared from his battalion. He spent eighteen months in the West, and returning east, had lived in Toronto and several other cities until about two weeks ago, when he came to Peterborough, and was hired by the Leonard Construction Company. The police have had his name on their missing list for three years. A few days ago Detectives Newhall and Meagher apprehended him, and this morning he pleaded guilty to the charge of desertion.

In transferring him to the charge of Sergt. J. Bethune of the Assistant Provost Marshall's department, Kingston, Magistrate Dumble's expression "may God have mercy on you" sounded like an excerpt from the formal death sentence.

REFUSED TO REPORT.

Mr. Adams was ordered to report at Kingston on April 16, but instead of complying with this command he sent the order back to the Military authorities.

To Magistrate Dumble he said he was a member of the Plymouth Brethren, or rather the Brethren, which he explained, was the correct name of the sect.

Adams said he followed the law of Jesus.

"Shouldn't men fight for their own?" His Worship asked.

"If a robber tried to steal a valuable watch from you, wouldn't you try to defend yourself?"

"I can't say what I would do in that case."

"You have no mind at all," was the Magistrate's impatient comment. "Your ideas are nonsensical. Get over them and be a man. If you have those notions in Kingston you will go to the Penitentiary, and I think that is the proper place for you."

"I am prepared to take the consequences," Adams replied quietly and with apparent determination.

"Men who are educated in religious matters hold no such views as yours," said His Worship, who told Adams he should take his teaching from men of greater knowledge than he displayed. As a Christian he should accept all the teaching of Christianity and not a little part of it.

THE JOHN CLANCY INQUEST CONCLUDED LAST EVENING

Witnesses Describe the Shunting Operations Which Resulted in Clancy's Death

Last evening the adjourned inquest into the death of John Clancy was resumed in the police court chamber. After hearing the evidence the jury returned a verdict exonerating the Grand Trunk Railway Company and recommending that the Quaker Oats Company place a capable man in charge of the yard who would be fully responsible for the moving of all cars. The jury was empanelled by Coroner Dr. T. N. Greer, to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of John Clancy, who, on Monday last, was fatally crushed between two moving freight cars on the west siding of the old McAllister mill, now operated by the Quaker Oats Co. Crown Attorney G .W. Hatten appeared for the Crown, and the Grand Trunk Railway was represented by Mr. McNab, the local Agent.

THE EVIDENCE.

The inquest was opened on Monday evening last and adjourned until last evening in order to enable the authorities to secure the necessary witnesses. The first witness called was Wm. Garvey, of the Quaker Oats, who was temporarily in charge of the operations at the time. He stated that there were two loaded cars on the siding, coupled together. The first car was uncoupled, the brake loosened and the ten or twelve men started to shove the car down to the place selected. Garvey was the first to see the other car coming down and yelled to the men to look out. James Mackin who was on top of the first car, immediately put on the brakes so that it would not be shoved over the buffer. All the men got clear out except John Clancy, who was immediately crushed in between the two cars. Garvey stated that when he saw the second car it was not more than nine feet from the men. A gang of men known as the "bull" gang had worked in the yards, but because they were required to work overtime, left the employment of the Company. Garvey said that Mr. Perdue, the foreman, gave him the order to move the first car.

MOVED ONE CAR.

Richard Healey was the next witness called. Healey, who is also an employee of the Quaker Oats Co., said they only moved one car at a time because they had better control over it. He examined the brake of the second car afterwards and remarked that it was within three notches of being tight. He had never seen blocks put against the wheels of cars to block them as in this case. Dr. McNulty was then called. He was of the opinion that deceased had come to his death as the result of being crushed by an instr ment at least two inches wide and eight or nine inches long.

YARD FOREMAN.

Joseph Meagher, the local yard foreman, who placed the two cars on the siding, said that he did not push cars full into the siding because of the proximity of the buildings to the track. He put the cars on the siding and tightened at least one brake. It must have been pretty safe, because he shunted some cars on the end and they did not move. He thought it was the duty of the Company to look after the cars on their own siding.

Mr. McNab, representing the Grand Trunk, said the Railway Company refused to shunt cars farther than the derail, which was at the top of the slight incline. He understood that the Quaker Oats Company had a cable to haul empty cars up the incline. Wh could they not use it to ease the loaded cars down the incline?

The Jury were out for about an hour. In their verdict they completely exonerated the Railway Company and recommended that the Quaker Oats Company put a canable man in charge of the yard, who shall be fully responsible.

THE JURY.

The jury was composed as follows: George Evans (foreman), Wm. Lillie, Angus McIntosh, Thomas Twoomey, T. Mark, Herbert Stenson, James Metheral, A. J. Warne and John McCann.

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintzman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street.—B. H. Britton, Manager. 'Phone 253.

CHEESE FACTORY BOILERS HERE HAVE BEEN INSPECTED

The boilers of all the cheese factories in this district have been inspected preparatory to the opening of the new dairy season. This is apparently a precautionary move to prevent, if possible, a fatality and loss to the industry like that of last summer when the boiler in the Trewern factory exploded, scattering the building all over the surrounding fields and killing Mr. J. Chittick, the owner and maker.

The price of this season's cheese has not yet been set, but the framers fully expect a fair advance over last year's quotation. At the same time it is hoped that the increasing scarcity of labour will not affect the outpu of cheese. However, that result will not be apparent until the season is well advanced.

Some of the factories in the Peterborough district have already begun making, and by next week it is expected that all of them will be operating. The flow of milk will be comparatively light for the present, until the grass grows long and lush.

People Demand Electoral Reforms

Two Hundred Thousand People Participated in a Demonstration

Special to The Examiner:

ZUEICH, April 23.— Two hundred thousand persons participated in a demonstration for electoral reforms at Budapest yesterday, it was learned here to-day.

Five thousand marched to the Palace Club, shouting "Abas Tisza." Work and traffic was halted.

Similar demonstrations were conducted in various towns Sunday.

Premier Von Seidler told the Polonaise leaders to-day that Galicia would be restored to Poland.

LAWYERS FOR THE DEFENSE ARRIVED DAY AFTER COURT

Mr. Justice Middleton on Saturday refused to reopen the case of Carton vs. Mandel and Mandel, in which he gave judgment in favour of Mr. Carton, clearing the latter's title to the property at the corner of Bethune and Charlotte streets, north side, from all encumbrances claimed by the defendants. The Toronto lawyers for the defendants did not appear at the nonjury session of the High Court here last week when this case was heard, apparently having made a mistake in the date. They arrived the next morning, only to find that Messrs. Gordon and O'Brien had got judgment for Mr. Carton and were looking for costs from Mandel and Mandel. They appealed for a hearing but without success.

Did It Ever Occur to You?

That the FORD is the only car now selling for less money than before the war?

Have you considered that perhaps RIGHT NOW you can buy a Ford car for less money than you will be able to for some years to come?

If you contemplate buying a car THIS YEAR, you would be well advised to do so without delay.

Even if you do not want a Car until next year, it might pay you to buy RIGHT NOW.

The prohibition of Foreign cars to Canada will undoubtedly cause an unprecedented shortage and increase in price.

In addition, there is daily expected an Excise Tax of 10 p. c. on all unsold cars.

Buy your Ford car or Truck RIGHT NOW if you would save delay and money, yes, and probable disappointment.

THE TORONTO, NIAGARA AND WESTERN RAILWAY BILL PASSED COMMITTEE TO-DAY

Measure Provides For the Building of a New Line—Sir Adam Beck's View.

DELEGATES AT SEA

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 23.— The Toronto, Niagara and Western Railway Bill was to-day passed by the Railway committee of the House of Commons in exactly the form in which it was presented. It provides for the building of a line from Toronto to Hamilton to the Niagara frontier with a branch to Port Colborne. Before the committee got through the Bill, Col. Currie made insinuations about a C.N.R. lobby by which were upheld by Controller Maguire of Toronto, and before the bout was over both withdrew anything that might reflect upon the honour of the committee. The bill was passed by the committee on the following assurances being given by the Minister of Railways and Mr. Gerald Ruel, who is assistant government counsel in the C.N.R. arbitration but who was formerly with the C.N.R.

OWNERSHIP PROVEN.

1.—The Toronto, Niagara and Western is absolutely owned by the C. N.R., though not coveted by the list of C.N.R. properties in the Statutes of 1914. It therefore passes into government hands when the Dominion formally takes over the road, which will be in a month to six weeks. Ownership is proven by the possession of the T. N. and W. stock certificates by the C.N.R. and government. There is also a clause in the 1918 bill which makes it one of the C.N.R. subsidiaries.

AMEND THE BILL.

2. The restrictions as to route within Toronto, etc., which were in the 1916, still exist, and that government is pledged to observe them in building the line. No work has yet been done on the road, but $1,500,000 has been spent in survey and right of way. Major Mowat and Thomas Foster presented an amendment which would have made it clear that the 1916 restrictions still apply, but the Minister of Railways declared this was unnecessary and a wire from W. N. Tilley, Government counsel in the arbitration for C.N.R. purchase was presented by W. S. Middleboro to show that there is no necessity of amending the Bill.

Major Mowat's resolution was presented and some of them told him it was safe to withdraw it, which he did. Then others of the delegation objected. However, even Col. Currie finally stated that he was satisfied, provided that Hon. Dr. Reid would pledge the government in the House, as he had in the committee, to observe the restrictions of 1916, which confined the railway's right of entrance to Toronto to the C.N.R. right of way.

WAS SATISFIED.

"I suppose I am," said Sir Adam Beck, when asked at the conclusion of the meeting whether he as satisfied with what had been done.

Referee Eugene Corri, the best known of English boxing officials, is of the opinion that Joe Shears, the Canadian, is a coming star.

Lew Tendler, the promising Philadelphia lightweight, had an easy time winning over Terry Brooks of Boston in their six-round bout at Philadelphia.

Tommy Mowatt, a widely known lightweight boxer, died at Chicago on Saturday. He had been ill for some time with tuberculosis.

DEER SKINS SEIZED ON A PEMBROKE FARM

Several seizures of deer skins have been made in the vicinity of Pembroke, taken from animals killed out of season. Pembroke police officers brought in a couple of sacks full of skins. They were found in an outbuilding of a German farmer located about 18 miles out of town. The authorities are determined to put a stop to shooting game out of season.

THIRD FIRE ON VESSEL.

An Atlantic Port, April 22.—The third fire in two weeks was discovered on Saturday on the steamship Ryndam, lying at her pier in this port.

The blaze was confined to the paint shop of the vessel where it originated and an investigation has been started.

The Ryndam is one of the Dutch liners taken over by the United States Government a few weeks ago, and is the ship in which Count Tarnowski, the Austrian ambassador and his staff sailed after war was declared against the dual monarchy.

Playing the Game.

(London Daily Mail.)

The spirit of the game does not lie in keeping strictly to the printed code, and when we say that this or that action "isn't quite cricket" we invariably mean that it is the code of honour rather than that of strict law that is being transgressed. For that reason the teaching of games has much more than hygienic interest, and this is a matter that should not be lost sight of in the future. The best instruction in games is not an easy thing to come by but of this we may be sure, that the better a boy or girl plays the game at school the better he or she will play it in after life, which is a far more important thing than piling up runs, taking wickets, or scoring goals, or the mere develop-

WEDDING BELLS

COLLINS—O'DONNELL.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Martin's church, Ennismore, Tuesday, April 16th inst., by Rev. Father McCauley, when Bridget Hazel O'Donnell, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell, Emily, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Thomas James Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Collins, Ops.

The bride was attired in a gown of navy blue silk, with satin hat with a yellow ostrich band. She was assisted by her sister Agnes who was attired in a wine coloured silk, white hat and a white ostrich band. Mr. Arthur Collins, brother of the groom acted as best man.

After the ceremony the happy couple motored to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty repast was served. The afternoon was spent in music and games.

After supper the bride and groom left for their new home amid showers of confetti and good wishes of the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins will be at home to their friends after May the first at their residence, Broadview Farm, Emily.

MRS. WILLIAM KEMP.

Yesterday death came to Elizabeth Ann Oakley, wife of William Kemp, at her late residence, 548 Bethune street, after a lingering illness. The late Mrs. Kemp was born in Peterborough sixty-one years ago and has resided here all her life. MICHAEL HOBBINS.

The lamented and very unexpected death on Saturday, April 13, of one of Chandos' highly esteemed and best known citizens, the late Michael Hobbins, filled all classes with the deepest sorrow.

The deceased was a resident of Chandos for forty-three years, and had endeared himself to many friends. He was a member of St. Mary's church, and was always identified in a marked manner by the very great interest and untiring zeal with which he lent assistance to every good work connected with the parish. He was also a devout and faithful member of the League of the Sacred Heart.

The funeral, which was held on Monday morning at 10.30, was largely attended by sorrowing friends and citizens of every class and creed.

The deceased is survived by his sorrowing wife, four sons Patrick, Joseph, Anthony and Fred, and two daughters, Nora and Alice, all at home. He also leaves to mourn his loss, his mother, Mrs. P. Hobbins, of Clydesdale, and three brothers, Fred of Clydesdale, Maurice of Swift Current, Sask., Patrick of Peterborough, and two sisters, Mrs. Thos. Mahoney, Clydesdale and Mrs. James Mahoney, Pentieton, B.C.

The Veterans.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

The Great War Veterans have earned the good will and the lasting gratitude of the community. It is within the power of the Association to keep that good will and even to increase it; but it is also within its power to destroy it.

GOUIN'S SON WITH TANKS

Will Leave for Overseas Shortly — Two Belley Boys Join Tank Corps.

QUEBEC, April 22.—Lieut. Paul Gouin, son of Sir Lomer Gouin, is in charge of the Quebec detachment of recruits for the first Royal Canadian Tanks Corps and it is expected that they will leave for overseas very shortly.

Pierre Belley, aged 20, and Andre Belley, 19, two sons of L. G. Belley, advocate of this city, enlisted with this corps last week. This French-Canadian family now has three members in the service, one elder brother having been "over there" with the Royal Flying Corps for some time.

HUGE WAR BILL PASSES THE COMMITTEE STAGE.

$500,000,000 War Measure Is Put Through in Five Minutes—Mr. Proulx Asks Re M.S.A. Operation

TIME FOR DISCUSSION

OTTAWA, April 24.—In the House yesterday afternoon, Mr. Proulx asked the Minister of Militia if the order-in-Council passed in December empowering him to release men from Military Service for work on the farms still stood. Mr. Proulx said he asked the question in view of the recent order-in-Council cancelling exemptions of men in Class 1 of from 20 to 22 years of age inclusive.

Major - General Mewburn: "My powers are limited entirely to the order-in-Council passed last week. I cannot go beyond the powers defined in that order-in-Council."

Mr. Proulx: "But, is the order-in-Council of December repeated?"

Major-General Mewburn: "It is still operative so far as it applies to classes under the Military Service Act in which exemptions have not been cancelled."

HUGE WAR BILL PASSES.

The five hundred million dollar war appropriation bill was put through the committee stage with practically no further discussion, in about five minutes. Pierre Casgrain was the only member of the Opposition who had anything to say about the bill today. He brought up the case of Chas. Desjardins, a former agent of the Government who was indicted with the so-called Montreal dynamiters, and was bailed out by the Justice Department.

Sir Robert Borden objected to reference being made to this matter when the war appropriation bill was under discussion. The proper time to bring it up, he said, was when the estimates of the Justice Department were brought down.

Mr. Casgrain said that he had been informed from reliable sources that the check which was deposited in court as bail for Desjardins was marked "War." That was his reason for bringing it up at the present time.

TIME FOR DISCUSSION.

Sir Robert insisted that this was not the proper time to discuss the matter. The war appropriation was very important and should not be delayed unnecessarily. There would be an opportunity later to discuss the matter.

Mr. Casgrain: "Will you give us a day to discuss it?"

Sir Robert Borden said that ample opportunity would be given and Mr. Casgrain was satisfied.

After the war appropriation bill had been reported, third reading was given to Sir Robert Borden's bill, which provides salaries for the chairman of the National Registration Board and the Reconstruction and Development Committee of the Cabinet.

The House then went into committee on the bill to aid and encourage the organization and coordination of employment offices.

FACILITATE GOVERNMENT WORK.

G. B. Nicholson, East Algoma, said that employment offices up to the present had not been located in the country anywhere. If it was the desire to provide adequate machinery in order that employers and employees might get in touch with one another, and visa versa, then he thought the Government should in some way assume control of the many private agencies throughout the country and in this way the main work of the Government would be facilitated.

Hon. Mr. Crothers pointed out that it was intended to establish a clearing house in Ottawa. Five of the nine Provinces had already legislated in connection with labour bureaus.

NOTHING CAN COMPARE WITH IT

Mr. Fred Adams, New Rose N.S., writes—"I have tried many medicines for coughs and colds but never found anything to compare to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We have had the greatest never fails to relieve a cough and loosen satisfaction with this medicine for it it up."

Girls As Army Dentists.

Should the Preparedness League of American Dentists accept the offer of services from seventy-five young women students of Columbia university, says the New York Herald, Army recruits soon may have their teeth looked over by young women dentists.

The young women, having completed the course in oral hygiene at Columbia, are fully qualified dental hygienists and each has a license to practice this brand new profession. The young women want to clean the teeth of the soldiers before they go to camp.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

A pretty V. A. D. nurse who officiates in the linen closet of one of London's big military hospitals, according to a correspondent, relates this enlivening tale:

A few days ago fresh raiment was served out to a number of newly arrived Tommies who were in need of it. Suddenly one of the men said: "Say, nurse, what do they call cats that haven't any tails?"

"Why, those are Manx cats," replied the unsuspecting nurse.

"Well, then," said the Tommy, "you've given me a Manx shirt."

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

CLOUDS AFTER SUNSHINE

CHAPTER XLIX.

"The costumer will send for those clothes I wore last night," George said the next morning. "Don't forget to take the buckles off my shoes. I'd hate to have them carried off, they are so comfortable."

We had slept late and I felt rather tired even so. Yet as soon as the doors closed after George, I went upstairs to attend to his request. I ripped the buckles from the shoes, then started to fold the coat, when the thought came that I had better look through the pockets. George might have left a handkerchief in one of them.

I thrust my hand into one of the pockets and drew out the crumpled telegram. I smoothed it out, and read:

"The bunch are to come up for supper. Join us." It was dated the night before and signed "J. C."

I immediately thought of what Mr. Carpenter had said to George when I lunched with George at the Elite Restaurant about "The Bunch;" it must be some of that crowd with whom George had been so intimate, before I knew and married him. But who could have sent it? Then, all suddenly, the thought of that gay widow, Julia Collins, came to me. It must be she. But I had heard so much of "good form" of what was au fait in polite society, and what was not, that I could, but wonder at her lack of good taste — or so it seemed to me—in inviting a married man to an affair, and in ignoring his wife. At home such a thing was unknown.

That George had paid no attention to the summons, that he had not joined the "bunch" was comforting, until I remembered how often he remained out without my knowing anything about where he was. He probably had spent his time with this crowd — some of whom I had met — of whom I cared for in the least. My happiness in the success of my dinner of the night before, was clouded with the suspicion, and it was in a very different spirit that I laid the clothes ready, forgetting to look further for anything George might have carelessly left in the pockets.

The Message is Destroyed.

I tore up the message, then immediately wished I hadn't. Had I not, I might have handed it to George and he possibly would have talked with me about it. No, I would say nothing about it. That, I was sure, would be Mrs. Sexton's advice; and, strangely enough, I wanted her approval.

Not that my feelings toward her had radically changed; I still resented the fact that she had been hired to coach me in my duties — me, a married woman. Yet she had proved herself right so often, and her real help with my dinner had been so kindly given, that I had now a certain respect for her, her opinion, that insensibly influenced my thoughts of her.

I burned the scraps, and tried to think no more about it. But either because I was weak, or because I was too young to have yet learned to control vagrant thoughts, I could not wholly dismiss the matter. Even when Evelyn came over to talk about my dinner it still obtruded.

Evelyn is Enthusiastic.

"It was wonderful! Simply wonderful! I had a heavenly time. So did all the rest. And didn't everyone look lovely? Really, Helen, I don't think there's a person in Moreland could have done any better, and in some things not as well. I had luncheon with Kurt's mother. I just can't call her "mother;" it sticks in my throat. Not that I do not like her; but she is so dignified and cold, not "mothery" a bit. But she was quite nice to-day. She thawed out considerably while I told of your lovely decorations, and the menu. And you should have seen her when I told her that Merton Gray painted your place cards. Her face was a study in expression, I can tell you. I had to promise to take ours over for her to look at. I'm sure she will ask him to do some for her, at her next dinner, and if he refuses I don't know what she will do."

"I am afraid he will refuse. You know he gave me mine."

"Yes— that is part of the wonder. He gets perfectly fabulous prices, you know."

"I'm going to frame mine, and George's too," I told her.

"A good idea! I'll frame ours. We'll go together and get some dainty frames for them." Then:

Evelyn Admires George.

"Your husband looked stunning! I should think you'd be awfully proud of him. He is an awfully handsome man. And in that costume he was irresistible."

"He did look well, didn't he?"

"I should say he did! June Lawson raved about him all the way home, and Olive Rivers said she never had danced with such a fascinating dancer, and that he talked as well as he danced."

After Evelyn left, I recalled what she had said, and it gave me quite a thrill of pleasure to know that George had thought my guests worth talking to. I knew how well he could talk—if he wanted to.

To-morrow—A Contretemps.

Daily Thought.

We think there are circumstances under which we can deal with men without love, and there are no such circumstances. You can cut down the trees and make bricks, or hammer iron without love, but you cannot deal with human beings without it.

Everybody Does It.

One form which our national lying not infrequently takes is to say, when a prominent friend finally does come around and pay back what he owes you, or part of it: "Why, I'd forgotten all about it."

If hair's your pride, use HERPICIDE

Wonder World.

Surgeon Gen. Sir A. Sloggett, who has recently been made a K. C. M. G. by King George, is responsible for the following:

Mamma, it appears, was one day biting her fingernails at dessert, and little Johnny was moved to ask the reason why.

"Nervousness, dear," answered his mother. "It made me so uneasy to see you swallow your grapes whole that I didn't know what I was doing. You'll get appendicitis, if you're not careful."

A few days later, however, Johnny's mother was herself taken ill, and the case was diagnosed as appendicitis.

An operation was performed and the patient was relieved. The surgeon discovered that what had caused the trouble was the presence of a small piece of fingernail in the appendix.

"It was all your fault, Johnny," she said. "This would never have happened if you hadn't swallowed those grapes whole."

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction

GIRL'S ONE PIECE SECTIONAL DRESS.

Plain and fancy materials can be made to combine very attractively for little girls' dresses. One of the easiest and at the same time most effective ways to use a plain with a plaid material is shown in No. 8751. The dress closes at the back from the neck to the trimming band. The neck is cut square at the front and is finished with a wide collar which is divided at the back. The upper part of the dress is made of plaid gingham, giving the effect of a yoke, and the straight band at the lower edge, the sash and the cuffs are of the same material.

The girl's one piece sectional dress No. 8751 is cut in five sizes—6 to 14 years. As on the figure, the 8 year size requires 1¾ yards 36 inch or 1½ yards 44 inch plaid material, and 1¾ yards 36 inch or 1¼ yards plain material.

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

RELIGION OF THE CHILDREN

Spirit of Faith, Hope and Love Toward the Father and Mother Is Offspring's World.

We need not follow the antiquarians back into the era of the cave dwellers in our search for the origin of religion. Religion is reborn in the birth of every babe, says Lyman Abbott in the Outlook. He needs no teacher to tell him that he is dependent on his mother for his food, and a widening sense of his helpless dependence on her grows with his widening experience. Her service to him awakens his gratitude her brooding love for him inspires in him an answering love.

If she is wise as well as an affectionate mother, he early recognizes her authority and learns that prompt obedience is one secret of happiness. If she loves and honors her husband her child's love and honor follows hers to the strong stranger. If she has piety as well as human affection, he dimly perceives in her prayers at his bedside an experience which he presently wishes he might share. Thus there grows up in him a spirit of dependence, gratitude, love, reverence, obedience, faith—and this spirit is religion. It antedates all theology, precedes thought, transcends definition. The spirit of faith, hope and love toward father and mother is the child's religion. The conception of God and his duties toward God comes later.

TURNS THOUGHT TO RELIGION

Destruction by Shell of Statue That Stood Somewhere in Galicia Resulted in Many Reproductions.

Yes, war does turn men's thoughts to religion. Go to gay, immoral Budapest. You find it today a city of sober people. You find in many of the shop windows the reproduction of a famous statue that stood "somewhere in Galicia," relates the Christian Herald.

It was a large crucifix. A battle pivoted around it. A shell struck the statue, tore away the entire cross and left the figure of the Christ standing and unscathed. This event made a tremendous impression upon the Hungarians.

The story of it went through the army like wildfire. At Budapest miniature statues, showing the destroyed cross and the intact figure of the Christ, were at once manufactured, and put on sale. You can find them now, expensive or cheap, in nearly every Hungarian home.

The pity of it is that it seems to take a war to make some people think of these things.

Latin Countries.

Latin is the language of ancient Rome, the language originally spoken in Latium, and afterward extended over all the integral parts of the Roman empire in Europe. The countries of South America are inhabited by races ethnically and linguistically related to the ancient Romans or Italians; hence they are called Latin countries.

Take Inventory of Self.

Let every man study himself carefully and see if there is any discord, discontent and disgust in his character. If so, let him begin the fight of his life to eradicate it. If this is not done he will be a miserable failure as a farmer and an object of pity for his neighbors.

REINDEER OF THE FAR NORTH

Herd of Animals Imported Several Years Ago From Labrador Have Greatly Increase in Numbers.

Though perhaps most of us, young and old, associate reindeer chiefly with Santa's jingling bells, still there are, besides the dear, familiar phantom reindeer, the very real reindeer who are serving a very real and much-needed mission among the people of the far North, among whom Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell works and lives his life of brotherly aid and uplift. Mary M. Davis writes in Our Dumb Animals.

About six years ago Doctor Grenfell imported from Labrador a herd of reindeer, number about 400, which during their six years in Newfoundland have increased to somewhere between 700 and 1,000. The idea of bringing them from their native Lapland was suggested to Doctor Grenfell by the great abundance of reindeer moss in Newfoundland. The reasons for the experiment are many and far reaching.

The reindeer are valuable, not only for their rich and delicious milk—which would be a boon indeed to the dwellers of that northern part of Newfoundland in which Doctor Grenfell works—but also are invaluable as beasts of burden. In every way they are as well adapted to the requirements of the North as are the Komatik dogs, which in many ways are an absolute menace to the development of the country.

WEEKLY DATA ON MORTALITY

Statistics of Principal Cities Now Issued Regularly by the United States Census Bureau.

A weekly circular giving the mortality statistics of the principal cities of the United States is now issued regularly by the United States census bureau, says the Scientific American. It gives the total number of deaths reported (stillbirths excluded), the death rate per thousand, number of deaths of infants under one year of age, and the proportion of infant deaths to total deaths.

The cities for which data are given include one-fifth the population of the country. Thus the circular is a fairly accurate index to the state of the nation's health. Its uses are manifold. It will show local health authorities how their home towns stand in comparison with other towns in respect to mortality and when a town has a bad record the publicity given to the fact should spur the authorities to seek the cause and remove it. Insurance companies will find the reports of interest. The circular is issued in Washington every Tuesday, and is distributed free of charge.

Poetry a Requisite.

"If poetry could be in an instant swept not merely out of print, but out of language and tradition, there would be babel indeed, writes Brian Hooker in the Century Magazine. We should go about isolated each one from each by a chaos of misunderstanding, with no more communication than we could improvise out of intellectual terms. We could suggest nothing, connote nothing, say nothing but what we could define. The practical reality of that loss one may measure by our proverbial ignorance of certain savages and oriental races whose poetry is alien to our own. Nor is that all; for poetry is not alone our common repository of past experience, but to a degree far greater than we realize our source of present action. There is no need more than to remind any observer of human nature that mankind acts rather upon passion than upon conviction. Brutus demonstrated his point in prose; it was a poetic appeal that made the stones of Rome to rise and mutiny. We define and determine and decide, and still do nothing, but when we begin to feel, something is done."

Pains Followed The Nerves

From the Feet to the Top of the Head — Could Not Attend to Business For Five Months—Gaining Strength Every Day.

Bowmanville, Ont., Feb. 16. — A great number of people in this district have been trying out Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with splendid results and none are more enthusiastic than Mr. Allen.

His nervous system had become so completely run down that he had to give up his usual occupation and he suffered keenly from neuralgic pains which would dart along the nerves, causing keen distress.

But he found a cure and does not hesitate to recommend it to others. This is his letter.

Mr. Samuel Allen, Coleman Street, Bowmanville, Ont., writes:

"Last summer I suffered from a severe attack of nervousness. I was laid up, unable to attend to my business, for five months. I would be taken with pains which commenced in my feet and ran right up to the top of my head. I had frequent dizzy spells, sometimes so bad that I would fall over from dizziness. At last I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and they proved of such benefit to me that before long I was able to return to work. I am still using the Nerve Food and gaining strength every day. I can heartily recommend them to any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

This letter is endorsed by Mr. John Lyle, J.P.

In India the elephant is still used to move teak logs and other heavy loads. Despite numerous efforts to apply mechanical power to this transportation problem, the beast remains supreme.

There is a lesson in this for engineers

It is this:

Despite numerous attempts to supplant them with metal pulleys —the Dodge Wood-Split Pulley is still supreme—still the most economical and efficient means of conveying power.

It costs 60% less to buy—50% less to operate—and delivers 50% greater horse-power than a metal pulley of equal dimensions. It stops "belt slip" and "weight friction."

$10.00 per pulley per year is the average coal and power saving from using Dodge Wood-Split as against metal pulleys.

How Bombs Are Dropped.

The bomb-dropping mechanism of a Zeppelin captured by the British was described in a recent number of the London Sphere. There are 60 bomb droppers for conical bombs. The base is slung in straps, and there is a strap around the neck. The latter has a releasing hook, and when the hook is operated the small end first drops down and the base slides out of its straps. The bomb then rights itself and drops base downward. The bombs are slung in one or two lines along the under side of the mail hull. The releasing hook is operated by an electromagnet, and there is a small switchboard in the cabin for controlling the release. Each bomb has a separate switch. The bombs can be released by hand levers also in case the electric means fail. Each bomb has a safety device and is not "alive" until it has dropped several hundred feet.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Successful Experiment

By F. A. MITCHELL

I was about to leave my office in the theater of which I am manager, when a very pretty girl appeared in the doorway. I knew by the package she carried that she was a would-be playwright, and was disposed to be very short with her. She asked me to read her play, and I told her that I had already accepted more plays than I could produce in my lifetime.

"Please," she said, with a most bewitching smile and a lovely pleading in her eyes. I wilted, and told her that if she would leave the manuscript I would have it read. But this was not what she wanted; she wanted me to read her play myself. To get rid of her, I promised her that I would take the manuscript home with me and look it over. We left the office together, and when we parted I took a trolley car. I was worrying over a play I was getting ready to produce, and forget all about the manuscript for three or four days, when the girl appeared again in my office. She smiled as sweetly as ever, and asked me if I had read the play. Thinking to put a stop to the matter at once, I told her that it would not do at all. She looked so heart-broken that before she left I admitted that I had not read it over carefully, but would give it attention that very evening.

After dinner I went into my home sanctum with the intention of fortifying myself against her importunities when I should next see her, by skimming her production. I ransacked the room for the manuscript, and did not find it.

Great heavens! Must I admit to her that I had lost it?

I spent the whole evening trying to remember what I had done with the package, but could not remember any further than taking it from its author. The next afternoon she came into my office again, smiling as usual, and asked me for a criticism on her play. I saw that there was a job of deception before me. My object was to put her off, hoping that the manuscript would turn up.

"Did you spend much time on your scenario," I asked, "before putting in the dialogue?"

"What's a scenario?" she asked.

This encouraged me. If she did not know what a scenario was, I could not be stuck for big damages in case I had to pay for the loss of the play.

"A scenario is a skeleton of the play that is to be written. When it is completed, the dialogue is very easily written."

"I always write the dialogue first," she said with that positiveness which I have always found women assume when they are making their worst blunders. She was so unsophisticated, so pretty, so amiable that I was tempted to say a few soft things to her. Besides, it was necessary for me to keep her in good humor. I told her that I had not come to a conclusion about the play. It lacked something, but I could not tell what it was. I would read it again more carefully.

I parried all efforts she made to make me discuss any particular scene or incident, by which I would show my ignorance of the play, and finally when she departed felt quite satisfied with my diplomacy.

The authoress was persistent and the manuscript did not turn up, though I had my rooms turned upside down to find it. I finally made up my mind that I must have left it in the trolley car I had used the day I received it from the author. I advertised for it, offering a substantial reward for its return to me; but I received no reply, and finally made up my mind that it was lost to me, and I would never find it. So I began to prepare for a confession.

What I meant by preparation was subterfuge by paying compliments and saying sweet things to the girl whom I must confess to, hoping by this means to receive a light punishment. But who ever says sweet things that he does not mean to a girl is liable to warm a serpent in his bosom. This was really more dangerous than losing a manuscript.

Well, when I believed that I had got her in a mood to make my confession to her, I did so. She forgave me, tearfully.

I had succeeded only too well. She had a right to consider that I loved her, and nothing remained undone but a definite proposal.

This was delayed, and after some time I received a note, asking me to call upon her. When I did so, she met me with the lost manuscript in her hand, stating at the same time that her name and address being on it, it was returned to her the day after I had left it in the trolley car.

"Open it," she said.

I did as she asked, and took out sheets of blank paper. I looked at her, astonished as well as crushed, and asked what it all meant.

"I am a playwright of some experience," she said. "I have sent manuscripts to you and other managers which were returned, I believe, unopened. So I resolved to try you in this way."

I was so cut up that I resolved to get the best of her by making real love to her. I told her that I loved her devotedly, and asked her to be my wife.

"Thank you, no," she replied. "I have one husband, and that is enough."

An excellent play by her has since been produced.

IN THE SPRING

will be the great test of a life and death struggle on the Western front. In the everyday walks of life, it is the spring time that brings ill health. One of the chief reasons why the run-down man finds himself in a bad state of health in March or April, is because he has spent nearly all his hours for the past four or five months penned up within the walls of house, factory or office. It is the reason for our diminished resistance—that is, lack of out-door life, coupled with perhaps over-eating, lack of good exercise, insufficient sleep, and constipation. In other words, we keep feeding the furnace with food but do not take out the "clinkers," and our fire does not burn brightly. Always keep the liver active.

There is nothing better for health than taking an occasional mild laxative, perhaps once a week; such a one as you can get at any drug store, made up of May-apple, jalap, aloes, (sugar-coated, tiny, easily taken), which has stood the test of fifty years of approval—namely, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. But for the "Spring Fever," the general run-down condition, the lack of ambition, the "blues," one should take a course of treatment every spring; such a standard tonic as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, now to be had in tablet form in fifty-cent vials. Watch the people go plodding along the street. There's no spring, no vitality. A vitalizing tonic such as this vegetable extract of Dr. Pierce's gives you the power to force yourself into action. The brain responds to the new blood in circulation, and thus you're ready to make a fight against stagnation which holds you in bondage. Try it now! Don't wait! To-day is the day to begin. Gain a little "pep," and laugh and live. 'Tis and vitality are the natural out-pouring of a healthy body. It does not spring up in a night. Try this spring tonic, and you gain the courage that comes with good health.

A Modern David

By WARREN MILLER

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

Doctor Gaston Larrabee had just completed his medical education when the World's war broke out, and of course he joined the surgeons of the French army. Doctor Larrabee was better fitted to give medicines to women and children than to attend the wounded on the battle field. He was small of stature and delicately organized.

The young doctor was, moreover, in love with Louise Rappelier. He was not successful in his suit, for Louise admired strength. She looked forward to marrying some hero of the war, some imposing man with fierce moustachios.

"Go," she said, "and do your duty in the field in which you are placed. A surgeon may win a decoration as well as one in the trenches. I hope you will return safely, and having shown yourself a brave man, I care not how."

Gaston went forth without any hope of proving that he possessed what he had no taste for. He would much rather have remained and fed pellets to children; but the government did not propose that he should do so.

Gaston's small stature, his soft voice, his gentlemanliness, soon brought down on him the sarcasm of his associates. That is, some of his associates. Most of them liked him. It was only the rough-hewn men who were indelicate enough to twit him for his delicacy. There was no occasion for taunting him, for he did his work conscientiously, and if war was not to his taste, that was no fault of his. He could not force his likes or dislikes.

Captain Bombarier was Doctor Larrabee's opposite. He came of rough stock, and had received very little education. He hated refinement, and education was detestful to him. The little doctor was to him like a red rag to a mad bull. The two men were of the same corps, and were consequently thrown together. Bombarier never lost an opportunity to cast a slur on the doctor's small hand or foot, or his soft voice, which latter was as unlike the captain's as the coo of a dove to a lion's roar.

Bombarier's taunts finally reached insults. Gaston's friends suggested to him to ask for a transfer to a corps where he would not be subject to the captain's remarks, but the doctor said that would not avail. The reputation for having failed to resent an insult would follow him. Besides, he would find others disposed to pounce upon him. No, he preferred death rather than live an object of contempt. He would challenge Captain Bombarier. If he were killed his sufferings would be ended. However, the matter might end, it might in future render him less liable to insult.

The next time Bombarier cast a slur on the doctor, Gaston challenged him to fight. The captain laughed at the idea of fighting such a delicate little fellow, and ignored the challenge. This would have been well enough had he ceased his slurs. For a time he was not quite so contemptuous, but soon was as irritating as ever. Then the other officers took the matter up and insisted that he fight the doctor.

Bombarier reluctantly consented, stating that he was placed in a false position as the opponent of such a stripling, and a meeting was arranged. The seconds, in order that nothing serious might come of it, or to save the little doctor's life, separating the combatants 500 yards, naming rifles for weapons. The duelists were placed as far from the trenches as the circumstances would admit, but the distance was not great. When all was ready, the word "Aim" was given, and each raised his rifle to his shoulder. Gaston aimed at nothing, shutting his eyes. At the word "Fire" two shots rang out simultaneously. The doctor was unharmed, but the captain fell dead.

Doctor Larrabee was sure that he had not killed his enemy, unless it was by accident, for he had not wished to have the blood of anyone upon his conscience. Be he could not convince the seconds that he had not done so. They buried the captain and proclaimed the doctor a man who was not to be trifled with.

One of the men who buried the body of Captain Bombarier noted that he had been shot in the back. He inferred that he had been killed by a stray bullet that had come from the enemy's trenches. But being a friend of the doctor's he made no mention of the discovery, not wishing to mar the effect of his achievement.

From that time forward Surgeon Larrabee suffered nothing from his delicate make-up. Indeed, being a contrast to his supposed courage, it rendered him an object of interest. He was pointed out as the man who had killed the overbearing Bombarier.

News of his feat reached his friends at home, and when he was wounded during service on the battlefield, and went home on leave, he found himself a double hero. Louise Rappelier relented and accepted him, not because he was hit doing his duty, but because he had killed a man who had taunted him.

Doctor Larrabee had become used to fire—men will become used to anything—and is a marked man in the army, but he is chiefly admired as that refined little gentleman who, like David killed His Goliath.

Telephone Economy

The Need of the Hour

THE vital need of the hour is for economy!

¶ We are urged to save, to conserve our resources. Nothing is so important, so pressing.

¶ We must economize, we are told, in food, in fuel, in clothing, in railway travel—all along the line, in order that the war efforts of our Empire and its Allies may have a clear track to victory.

¶ The telephone, by the very nature of the work it does, is a powerful agent making for economy and efficiency. Without it, business would slow down with a fatal reaction on war effort.

¶ But the increasing scarcity of telephone material of all kinds, and of skilled labor demands that our subscribers should practice a rigid telephone economy—

¶ That they should order only such telephone equipment as is indispensable—

¶ That they should be careful of present telephone apparatus in home or office so as to avoid breakage and repairs—

¶ That they should refrain from unnecessary telephone conversations and make their talks brief so as to keep the lines open for the next caller.

¶ We ask your co-operation in our efforts to keep our service equal to war-time demands.

Lord Mayor Laid Brick.

Sir Charles Hanson, now Lord Mayor of London, was roaming the streets of Brampton over fifty years ago, and entreated the builders of Grace Church to let him lay one brick and mark it with an X. The builders obliged the boy, and W. A. McCullough recalled the incident and identified the brick at the recent Grace Church jubilee.

SUFFERED WITH NERVES
COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and wornout by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Death to the Puppies.

The details of the snatching from this life of four brindle Boston bulls in the prime of their puppyhood were recited when a woman reviewed her married life in the court of domestic relations in New York. "Only last week," she said, "our bulldog, Ida, had a family that would have been worth $200 if it had grown. My husband went to a veterinarian and the doctor told him if they wouldn't take milk out of a saucer to put some milk in his own mouth, but a nipple in his mouth and feed them that way, just like dog fanciers do. At first he didn't even want to do it."

"Well," said the court, "and what has that to do with the case?"

"Because when he did do it, I tell you, the dogs died."

Sealing Fleet Suffers.

It was a greatly depleted Newfoundland sealing fleet which started on its annual hunt in the waters off the Labrador coast and in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Like everything else in which sea-going craft are concerned, this industry has suffered severe losses from the war. The crack steel steamships which had largely replaced wooden vessels and which were the most efficient ice-breakers in the world, were taken over for war purposes. Two of the best of them are now at the bottom of the sea.

BIG AIR DRAGONS

Craft of the Future Will Be Armored Dreadnaughts.

Winged Fighters Promise to Be Developed Much the Same as That of Naval Construction.

The fighting airplanes of the future will grow larger and larger. They will soon become the dreadnaught of the air. The development, writes a Washington correspondent, will be much the same as that of naval construction.

This is the prediction of a government expert. It is based on the brief report from London telling of the construction by Germany of metal-inclosed battleplanes, which Germany is building to meet Americans in the air.

"From the outset I have been convinced that the United States should devote much of its genius and constructive ability to the development of a powerful fighting airplane," he said "Germany may be building a sort of aerial armor-clad, but the kaiser will have no monopoly in this respect.

"My judgment is that development of an effective fighting force in the air will follow much the same line as naval construction. In modern navies, in fact in all navies of history, the heavy ship of the line, which could take and give the most punishment was the backbone of the fleet. This will be true of the airplane flotilla of the future.

"All of the allied nations now are building much heavier battleplanes. This tendency will increase. At all times there must be light and exceptionally fast scout machines, just as we must have scout cruisers also. Large and speedy battle cruisers also may be a development of the immediate future, but the slower and more stable machine with a real punch, the airplane that can give and receive a maximum of punishment and still remain aloft must be the backbone of the aerial fighting forces of the future."

The most powerful airplanes which have been seen in this country are the Caproni biplanes and triplanes at the Langley flying field, Newport News, Va. The big Handley Paige battleplanes turned out by Great Britain also have great carrying power and are capable of a large measure of destructive work. It is predicted that these powerful flying machines will soon give place to planes of far greater capacity and capable of withstanding a veritable broadside in a sky battle.

The new American Liberty motor continues to meet every test to which it is subjected.

The Next Step.

"The Germans," said a noted surgeon, "are vaunting their war surgery. Two years ago 80 per cent of their wounded returned to the front. Last year 90 per cent returned. Rubbish!" The professor made a gesture of repudiation. "Why, at this rate," he said, "the Germans will be telling us that every time an enemy bullet hits a German soldier in the head, its only effect is to fill a hollow tooth for him."—London Opinion.

WAS CALLED BY WASHINGTON

First Cape Cod Canal Engineer to Be Pressed Into Service Because of Demand for Experts.

Thomas Machin, the engineer charged by a committee appointed in 1776 by the colony of Massachusetts with the task of making the first survey for the Cape Cod canal, was "drafted" as an army engineer by George Washington before he could make a fair start on the survey, says the Engineering News-Record. George Washington's letter to the chairman of the committee which appointed Mr. Machin read:

"The great demand we have for engineers in this department has obliged me to order Mr. Machin hither to assist in that branch of the business."

This bit of American engineering history is recounted by William Barclay Parsons, in a paper (published in the Proceedings of the American Society of Civil Engineers) on the Cape Cod canal, which was first proposed more than three hundred years ago and finally opened to commercial traffice in 1914.

STRENGTHENS THE THROAT, ASSISTS PUBLIC SPEAKERS

Catarrhozone is the Greatest Invention of the Age for Weak Throat, Hoarseness, &c.

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it,

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him, and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throat weakness or catarrh.

Kate Field's Prophecy.

When, a good many years ago, Kate Field wrote those clever verses beginning: "They talk about a woman's sphere as though it had a limit," little she guessed how tremendously that sphere was destined to be enlarged by the coming of the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventeen. As a matter of course, observes an exchange, the great world war is responsible for the very rapid advance the women are making in every sphere of the world's work. We are no longer surprised to find that women are doing anything and everything that men can do, from driving warplanes to shining shoes. A shoe-polishing "parlor" in which only women are employed is now doing business in Boston, yet even this innovation scarcely challenges attention in these times of shifting conditions.

OLD LANDMARK IS PRESERVED

Historic General Schuyler Mansion at Albany, N. Y., Associated With Revolutionary Times.

By the dedication of the General Schuyler mansion at Albany, N. Y., another interesting landmark of revolutionary days was permanently preserved from the devastating hand of modern improvement, notes a correspondent. The house is 155 years old, having been built in 1762. Its recent dedication by Governor Whitman, marked the one hundred and fortieth anniversary of the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga. General Schuyler took an active part in the campaign against the invading British army from the North, and, at Saratoga, he suffered a serious loss in the burning of the British of his country home and mills. Notwithstanding this, he acted the part of the chivalrous conqueror a few days later, when he entertained General Burgoyne and his staff, including the Hessian general, Baron Riedesel, and his wife, at his Albany home, when, as prisoners of war, they stopped there on the way to Boston.

With the single exception of the famous Washington headquarters at Newburg, purchased by the state in 1849, the Schuyler mansion is more closely associated with revolutionary times than any other of the historic memorials purchased from time to time by the state for preservation.

Lady Hendrie.

The son of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario was among the first to volunteer for service overseas, and he has passed something like three and a half years in the firing line. Naturally his mother, Lady Hendrie, exhibits more than mere casual interest in the daily increasing problems arising in connection with the supply and distribution of foodstuffs.

Anxious to do all she can to help the Canada Food Board in whatever it decides is most essential, Lady Hendrie was one of the first women in Toronto to give impetus to the carrot and onion campaign recently conducted in that city. She thinks it is the solemn duty of every woman to do the little things that are asked of her in food-saving—service in the kitchen, she believes, being now as important in a sense as the work that the Red Cross nurse or ambulance driver can do within the fighting sphere.

"To put it in the simplest way—saving food means helping to bring the war to an end," says Lady Hendrie. "There isn't a woman in Canada who wouldn't work for that end, and surely any woman who has anyone near and dear to her over there will double her effort to save and produce if it means the speedier conclusion of a weary war.

"I think, if anything, I am more interested in food conservation than in production. The former is essentially women's affair, and while, undoubtedly, her help is needed outdoors this year, it seems to me that her biggest work lies in the home. I do thing that every woman should have a garden and raise chickens, but, except where it is really necessary, the idea of heavy work in the fields seems foreign to one's conception of womanhood."

Lady Hendrie keeps chickens—forty-eight of them—and is quite enthusiastic about her poultry. Government House gets an average of seventeen eggs a day from those chickens, and they are a source of great gratification to everyone concerned.

A Bad Lot.

Senator Weeks, apropos of the Luxburg, Bernstorff, Von Igel and other German exposures, said in Washington a short time ago:

"Germany seems to approve the unexampled wickedness of her sons. She reminds me of the old man at the club.

"An old man sat reading a newspaper in a club while a group of young fellows talked excitedly about the marvelous power for lying possessed by a certain Jack Courtenay. When their talk ceased the old man cleared his throat and said:

"'Gentlemen, I have just heard you decide that Jack Courtenay is the biggest liar in the United States. I am his father.'

"A young man, very red in the face, started to apologize, but the old boy said:

"'No, no; don't apologize. It isn't necessary. I merely wanted to say, gentlemen, that if you consider my son Jack the biggest liar in the United States, it's very evident that you have never met my other son, Jim.'"

Hay Shortage In Cape Breton.

Owing to the scarcity of hay and feed in Cape Breton, where in some districts cattle were reported almost on the verge of starvation, the Nova Scotia Government has sent a portion of the staff of the Agricultural College at Truro to that part of the province with supplies to relieve the situation.

SORCERERS BURNED AT STAKE

Custom of an Early Age When Thousands of Unfortunate Students Were Put to Death.

Alchemists often believed that by deep thought they could find a way to turn base metals into gold, but alchemy itself was much deeper and broader than this, according to a writer. It was supposed at this time that there were seven heavenly bodies—the sun, moon, Mars, Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn—and seven metals—gold, silver, iron, mercury, copper, tin and lead. There were also seven days in a week and seven colors in a rainbow. There were twelve signs in the zodiac, twelve months in the year, twelve precious stones, and twelve parts to the body. It seemed to the alchemists that there must be some hidden connection between these things of nature, and in trying to find it they spent much time in watching the sky and in bending over their crucibles and retorts.

During an age when superstition was rife such nocturnal activities could not fail to arouse suspicion, and to be accused of being a sorcerer was generally followed by burning at the stake. Many thousands of such unfortunate students were put to death during these dark centuries, but in spite of the dangers men secretly studied alchemy.

RUSSIAN NAMES WERE EASY

Pronunciation Not to Be Compared With Talk Between Baby and Parrot, Proud Parent Boasts.

Reference at a social session was made to lingual dexterity when Congressman John M. Evans of Montana, said he was reminded of a little incident along that line.

Down at the cigar store one night the regulars were talking about the war and remarking how it gave one something worse than face ache to pronounce the Russian names that appear in the news.

"Those Russian names are nothing," remarked a man named Johnson, with an expansive smile. "You just ought to hear what I stack up against in my own home every day of my life."

"What's that?" demanded one of the regulars, amazedly. "Do you mean that you have somebody in your family who can put a kink in those Russian syllable twists?"

"Well, I should say that I have," rejoined Johnson. "You should come around some time and hear the baby and the parrot when they get to talking together."

Africa Second Largest.

Africa is the second largest of the continental divisions of the earth, containing 11,632,000 square miles. Europe contains 3,671,004; Asia, 17,470,280; North America, 7,116,000; South America, 7,344,000. At the outbreak of the present war, August, 1914, European states had established protectorates over it. By agreement, Great Britain controlled about 3,700,000 square miles; France, 4,422,600; Germany, 931,000; Belgium, 909,000; Portugal, 704,000; Spain, 592,000, with native ownership ignored everywhere. These areas of control have undergone material changes since the war began and no doubt will be further changed at its conclusion. The different areas have been held and governed as colonies, the only politics being a contest among the nations to obtain and hold as much as possible. It has been what might be called in common phrase "a grab game" on a large scale, with a continent as the spoils.

Profits in Shipbuilding.

The sale of the schooner Glynn, the first ocean commerce carrier built south of Newport News since the war began, has brought out facts, says the Manufacturers' Record, showing the remarkable profits to be made from shipbuilding and the operation of freight ships under war conditions. The company made a profit of 25 per cent on the building of the vessel; her purchaser, James S. Bralley, Jr., received $52,000 freight for the voyage to Italy with naval stores and then sold her to French interests for $90,000. After deducting $21,500 for insurance, outfitting and provisioning and the salaries and wages, the Glynn netted him $45,500 in six months.

Making Mineral Wool.

An American firm operating in Australia has started works near Melbourne for turning the local basalt into "mineral wool" for use as an insulator in packing machinery and ice chests and as a substitute for asbestos, according to the Scientific American. The basalt is melted down with a proportion of freestone and limestone and then steam, at an immense pressure, is forced through the fluid. The liquid rock, thus aerated, flies into the air and falls in flakes on the floor.

GRAIN MARKET

The strong demand for oats, supposed to be on government account for export, keeps that market active at steadily advancing prices for the past couple of days. The options, both at Winnipeg and Chicago, acted strong under steady buying by the leading commission houses. FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES
ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

A NEW BATTLE OPENED UP ON A FRONT OF NINE MILES

FRENCH WAR OFFICE REPORTS HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE

DONNEYBROOK THREATENED

Sir Adam Beck Was Invited Outside For a Fistic Encounter—Hydro Champion Declined

EXCITING SESSION

(Special to The Examiner.)

Ottawa, April 24. — A furious row between Mr. T. J. Stewart, M.P., of Hamilton, followed Tuesday's session of the Commons Railway Committee, at which Mr. Stewart had upheld the renewal of the Toronto, Niagara and Western Company charter. Mr. Stewart alleges that Sir Adam told him after the meeting that he (Stewart) has been standing by his friends "as usual," apparently meaning the private interests, and asked him how much he got for it. Sir Adam denied that he put the latter query to the Hamilton member, who, by the way, is a Hydro commissioner in that city, but he admits the remark about sticking by his friends. At any rate, Mr. Stewart's reply may be translated into printable English as follows:

"You are a such and a such kind of ——, and if you ever say that again I'll knock your block off." He then invited Sir Adam outside for a demonstration of the said block-knocking process. But the Hydro chairman replied: "It would be a child's job to fight you. I'll get a boy to do that."

ENCOUNTER AVERTED.

The passage afforded a very exciting moment or two, especially as the Hamilton man's characterization of Sir Adam included a word which usually spells fisticuffs; but a physical encounter was averted.

The Hydro champion had hardly got through with Mr. Stewart, when he had to tackle another opponent in the person of Colonel Herb. Lennox, solicitor for the York Radials. Sir Adam made the remark that here was Herb. Lennox, who had been lobbying, and Colonel Lennox at once challenged him to prove it.

"Well, were't you?" asked Sir Adam. "What business of yours is it if I was?" Colonel Lennox is alleged to have retorted, at the same time denying that his presence had anything to do with the Toronto, Niagara and Western Bill.

Later in the day the Colonel fell out with Mr. W. H. Pope, of the Hydro, whom he accused of having consented to the bill the night before the committee met; but this racket was mild compared with the earlier ones.

Mayor Duncan's Car Smashed By Utilities' Truck

With a bang that could be heard a block away, the light auto truck of the Utilities Commission's fleet, driven by Mr. Al. Spenceley, crashed into Mayor Duncan's new automobile at the corner of Hunter and Water streets at 8.30 o'clock. The Mayor's car was badly damaged but he fortunately escaped without injury. He was driving north, and had the right of way over cars from the west. Half across Hunter street he was hit by the Commission's truck, a full broadside blow against the rear half of his car. Its body was dented so badly the doors couldn't shut, the fender and other parts were bent, and generally speaking, it received a bad mauling.

Chief Thompson issued an information against Mr. Spenceley for a breach of the traffic regulations.

"I intend to prosecute for every infraction of the traffic laws that I know of," said the Chief. "If automobile drivers would remember that the car on their right has the right of way there would be no accidents at the street intersections. This is a simple rule, and can be easily observed."

The regulation applies to drivers of every vehicle that travels the streets and should be learned at once.

Strong German Attacks Developed Last Evening On The Flanders Front

Heavy Infantry Attacks Reported to Be in Progress This Morning in the Albert Sector—Attacks Repulsed.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, April 24. — The French and British artillery inflicted severe losses on Germans in the Flanders attack.

Strong German attacks developed last evening in the neighbourhood of Dranoutre, on the Flanders front, but were repulsed by French troops, the War Office announces. Heavy infantry attacks are reported to be in progress this morning in the Albert sector, north of the Somme, and also between the Somme and the Avre rivers.

On a front northwest of Albert the Germans' attack early yesterday evening was repulsed.

THE STATEMENT SAYS:

The hostile artillery activity increased yesterday afternoon and evening on the greater part of the British front, particularly in the Somme and Ancre sectors and north-east of Bailleul. At dusk hostile infantry left their trenches to attack northwest of Albert, but met with heavy rifle and machine gun fire and were driven back. Strong hostile attacks developed also late in the evening in the neighbourhood of Dranoutre and were repulsed by French troops after sharp fighting. French and British artillery inflicted severe loss on the enemy. During the night the activity of the enemy's artillery continued, and at an early hour this morning a heavy bombardment was opened along practically the whole British front from the north of Albert to our junction with the French south of the Somme. Strong infantry attacks are reported in progress in the Albert sector and between Somme and Avre river. Heavy hostile shelling is reported to have taken place also early this morning between Givenchy and Robecq. Concentrations of hostile infantry in the neighbourhood of Merville were desposed by our artillery.

Between the Somme and the Avre the enemy's bombardment during the night took on the character of extreme violence along the Franco-British front, especially in the region of Hangarden Santerre and Villers Bretonneux. French artillery carried on an energetic counter bombardment of German batteries. In the region of Ailette and Avecourt Wood French patrols took prisoners. Elsewhere on the front there was intermittent cannonading.

SEVERAL MORE EXEMPTION CLAIMS HEARD TO-DAY

Mr. G. W. Hatton Has Been Notified of the Changes in the Military Service Act

WRITTEN APPEALS

Three more claims for exemption were heard this morning before His Honour Judge Huycke and Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, Public Representative at the Review Tribunal.

Mr. Hatton has received word from the Chief Public Representative that in the cases of men of 20, 21 and 22 it will not be necessary to devote any time in hearing evidence as they are called out under the new legislation.

The greater number of appeals were written.

Called To-day.

Those called to appear to-day were: Thomas J. McKay, Apsley, farmer. Robert Wilson, Haultain, farmer. James Scott, Clydesdale, farmer. Michael Scott, Clydesdale, farmer. William Hogan Clydesdale, farmer. William Trotter, Clydesdale, farmer.

Edwin Fletcher, Clydesdale, farmer. Hiram Gerills, Glenalda, farmer. Hiram Woodbeck, Lasswade, farmer. John Darling, Warsaw, farmer. Alford Toms, Rush Point, farmer. Leo W. Stanley, Lakefield, farmer. Arthur G. Little, Hall's Glen farmer.

Herbert Windsor, Hall's Glen, farmer.

John E. Gallagher, Warsaw, farmer.

John C. B. Buchanan, Havelock, farmer.

Isaac H. Hoard, Havelock, farmer. Edward Keating, Havelock, farmer. Leo Stanley Whibbs.

Temporary Exemption.

John Hilliard Darling, aged 24, was exempted as long as he remained upon the farm and who lately has taken a place on Mr. Tedford's farm, who, according to Dr. Munro's statement, will be unable to resume work until July 1st. He suffered a broken leg. Mr. Tedford who appeared, said he did not know what he would do without the boy. A younger brother is called up under the new Military Service Act.

The Judge allowed Darling until June 15th to get in the crop at the Tedford farm, saying he wished he could send John and spare the younger brother.

Little Hope.

Robert David Wilson, Haultain, 21 years of age, exempted until Class 2 are called, but called under review, had not heard of the change in the law calling up men from 20 to 23 years. The military authorities had appealed against his exemption. The father, who also appeared, is a cook in a lumber shanty. Cross-examined Wilson showed a hazy idea of practical farming and the yield from the land. He has under 225 acres under cultivation. The Judge held out little hope of exempting Wilson for a longer period.

A Doctor's Letter.

Leo Stanley Whibbs's case was next heard. His father, Thomas Whibbs, appeared for him, stating that he has two sons at home. He had a letter from his doctor stating his health to be poor. 270 acres at the Whibbs farm are now under cultivation. Whibbs said the boys run the farm, with himself as overseer and that it was impossible to get men to work on the farm at any price. The Judge asked him if he were not anxious to have his boys share the glories of war.

The Judge gave him until July 1st to see how they can get along and left it in the hands of the government to see later what they could do with the handling of the crops.

MILITARY SERVICE

Special Provisions Made For Excusing Men For Work on the Farm —Temporary Military Leave

CERTIFICATES ISSUED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 24. — The Government supplements the calling out of men of 20, 21 and 22 by regulations which provide the machinery for dealing with these who ask leave of absence. Special provisions are made for excusing men whose families have already contributed sons to the actual theatre of war and for temporarily releasing farmers whose presence is essential during the summer, but the latter must be on the certificate of a Department of Agriculture representative, one of whom will act in each military district. Those claiming leave on agricultural grounds will be granted leave of absence without pay only if they fulfil the conditions as to family service overseas which would entitle other applicants to leave. If the claim is based on any other grounds it will be considered and the men will be utilized according to category, unless in E class (totally unfit), when they will be discharged.

Temporary Leave.

The following disposition is made, however, for temporary leave of absence. Any men of the Canadian expeditionary force who can be temporarily spared from military duties may be granted leave of absence without pay on the authority of the officer commanding the district on certificate of the agricultural representative of the district appointed by the Federal Department of Agriculture to the effect that he an efficient farm labourer. The first certificate shall be good until July 15, but may be extended for three months on a further certificate from the agricultural representative that he has been continually engaged in farm work. A nominal roll will be kept of these absentees and they will be duly notified when their return to military life is required.

GALLANT EXPLOIT OF YOUNG SOLDIER

Sergt. Ardagh Coe Was Sent Through the Lines as a Runner.

The anniversary of St. Julien recalls the gallant exploit of Sergt. Ardagh Coe, nephew of Mrs. Wm. Eyres, of 168 Antrim Street, and of Mrs. Wood, also of this city. He was sent through the lines as a runner by Colonel John Currie to find the bodies of his officers and also to bring back any papers which were left in the dugout. Colonel Currie states in his description of the incident:

"Through the hurricane of shot and shell that tore the earth up in all directions, two brave men, Sergt. Coe and Pte. O'Connor, made their way."

Colonel Currie also tells of picking up a rifle dropped by a wounded man that morning, and he adds:

"I afterwards gave the rifle to Sergt. Coe, the bravest among many brave men, who carried it when he fell at the charge of the orchard at Festubert."

The original messages which were sent back from France are now in the possession of his aunts, the Misses Ardagh. Sergt. Coe was the only son of the late John Coe, bartister of Toronto. The young soldier was only 23 years of age at the time of his death in the summer of 1915. He was well-known in Toronto as an athlete, having made a considerable reputation for himself as a lacrosse player with the St. Simons lacrosse team. He also belonged to the Argonauts, with whom he played Rugby, after graduating from the Capital Rugby team, junior champions of Canada in 1912.

America Can Supply Three Million Men

This Number Can Be Sent to France Within a Year If Ships Are Available

TAKE A CHANCE

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, April 24.—America can put three million men on the fighting lines in France within a year if ships are ready, according to adjutant-General McCain, before the House Military Affairs Committee.

"I do not see any reason, if we could get ships, why we could not send over three million men after giving them sufficient training in this country," he stated.

"We have to have five million men and get sufficient ships."

"Could we have five million men over there in two and one-half years?" asked Representative Morin.

"I think we can do it before that, if we are willing to take a chance here and there—willing to go in without fear of making a mistake," General McCain said.

Navies Are Working In Splendid Unison

"In Their Hands the Safety of the Democratic Peoples May Be Left" Says Head of Labour Mission

IMPRESSIVE SPECTACLE

(Special to The Examiner.)

EDINBURGH, April 24.—James Wilson, head of the American Labour Mission to Great Britain, to-day gave the following interview to the United Press following the Mission's visit to the British Naval Base at Rosyth:

"We say an impressive spectacle of efficiency and power, inspiring in its perfection, yet only a section of the whole war machine.

"We saw, spread out along the Frith of Forth, evidence of that great bulwark of strength to the cause of democracy.

"We were stirred to see ships of our nation as an integral part of that naval force which make impossible any doubt as to the final outcome of the struggle.

"We understand why neither the British navy nor the British people fear the submarine menace. The British, American and other navies are working in splendid unison. In their hands, the safety of the democratic peoples may be left."

The Canadian Standard Efficiency Test Course was fully and care fully explained. It was pointed out that this course was suggestive only and that each city group was quite free to add to or modify the activities outlined by the manual. The audience was very appreciative of this splendid address.

Germans Make Another Drive For Amiens on a Twenty Mile Front —Began This Morning

ENEMY DRIVEN BACK

(By the Associated Press.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 24.—The Germans began a heavy bombardment of the British positions in the Somme sector this morning and the latest reports state that an attack is in progress.

A German bombardment of the British positions on both sides of the River Lawe on the northern battle front was begun at four o'clock this morning. A large section of this battle front is seething, although definite dimensions of the infantry action are not yet known. Northwest of Albert early to-day enemy troops which advanced from their trenches for an assault were driven back by the British fire. Northwest of Merville a large concentration of German soldiers was dispersed by British artillery.

WAR SUMMARY.

NEW YORK April 24.—The Associated Press war summary to-day says: "The drive on Amiens, for which the Germans plunged desperately but failed to reach in their great offensive last month, was resumed to-day. In an effort to push toward the important junction point and allied base renewed after two weeks' interval, in which the main German effort was transferred to Flanders, the enemy this morning launched a heavy attack on a front of approximately twenty miles.

The line at which the German infantry is again being thrown, extends from the district north of Albert to north-east of Amiens to the Avre River, south-east of the city. Nearly all this front is held by the British, whose line links up with the French at the River Ince, about three miles north of Avre. It has been regarded as almost inevitable that the Germans would again strike here.

MAINTAIN EVEN TRADE BALANCE

American Goods Will Be Shipped to Australia.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—American electrical goods will be traded for Australian wheat. The importation of over one and a half million bushels of Australian wheat a month will make necessary the return sale of American products to fill the wheat-hauling ships on their return voyages and to maintain an even trade balance.

TAXATION SUGGESTED.

From the Great War Veterans, who have been perhaps more concerned over the alien question than any organization in Canada, comes a suggestion that might solve the problem. The view of the Veterans is stated by Provincial Secretary W. E. Turley, of Toronto, as follows:

"I am prepared to admit that if there are insurmountable obstacles to the conscription of enemy aliens, the G.W.V.A. will be prepared to submit to that condition.

"But we are bound to continue our objection to the present situation under which the alien profits while loyal Canadians are giving all that this country is asking them to give for the winning of the war.

"To us these men are war profiteers Their earning capacity has doubled and trebled by war conditions, they have largely escaped a just share of war taxation and the logical plan to adopt if conscription is impossible is some system of graded taxation of what are often all war profits.

"Just how the tax is to be collected is a matter that cannot hasily be decided upon. But it would seem that officials of the government, through employees of these men,could through some government agency, collect a percentage of earnings which would be applied to war funds.

"It would seem better that Canada should tax the earnings of these men in preference to interning them under present conditions, because internment would greatly limit their labor, might seriously interfere with food production and other necessary war work, and would only result in financial loss to the coutry."

THE ALIEN QUESTON.

The debate on the alien question, including the proposition that enemy aliens in Canada should be conscripted, and made to work at soldiers' pay, was debated at length in the House of Comons on Monday, but little progress was made or indicated in connection with this problem.

The opinion of the Great War Veterans and thousands of other citizens, that it was not fair that Canadians should have to leave their positions and go overseas to fight for liberty, when aliens were free to remain here, and hold good positions, is a sound one, but in proposing measures to deal with the unfortunate condition of affairs, a solid difficulty, in the form of international law, is in the way. The question seems to be whether Canadians shall follow the Prussian example, and outrage all the laws of the Hague conference, or whether we shall abide by such laws, and allow conditions to remain as they are.

A number of members expressed the view that autocratic measures, should be adopted, and Mr. W. F. MacLean,the member for South York, argued that if the Germans broke international law, Canada could at least resort to a somewhat similar treatment. However, the reply of the Minister of Justice seemd to indicate that there is little probability of stern measures being taken by the Government. Hon. Mr. Doherty pointed out that under international law civilian aliens could be interned, but could not be punished, and could not be made to work.

There seems, however, to be a chance that citizens of France, Belgium and Italy residing in Canada may either be sent home, or conscripted with the Canadian forces, as it was announced that the Government was endeavouring to arrange this with the governments of the three countries.

A DASHING EXPLOIT.

The dashing attack by naval forces on the enemy's submarine bases at Zeebrugge and Ostend will send a thrill throughout the Empire. The exploit seems to have been of the audacious nature of some of the feats of the British navy of old. Not only did the ships risk unknown navigation dangers, the peril of mines and torpedoes and the fire of shore batteries, but the nacy even succeeded in throwing landing parties ashore. Whatever may have been the success of the expedition in blocking the enemy's harbours the exploit will be welcomed as another proof that the spirit of Nelson still animates the men of our glorious navy. It is typical of the navy, too, that every man who took part in the expedition volunteered for the occasion.

It is no wonder that the Navy League is able to announce that after forty three months of unparalleled strain in the prosecution of world-wide sea warfare, "devotion to duty, the spirit of sacrifice and confidence in the ultimate victory, stand at a higher level throughout the whole personnel of the British fleet than at any previous moment in her history and that in the developing of effective power, the fleet has achieved since the beginning of the war a degree of superiority and a standard of efficiency of which no conception could be formed in the terms of apparent naval preparerness in time of peace."

In the anxiety of the terrible struggle on the land we are inclined to lose sight of the great achievements of the navy since the war began. We forget sometimes that the British fleet has effectually accomplished the defence of the British Empire from invasion, so that that Britain is the only nation engaged in the war which has conquered enemy territory and lost none of its own. Through the co-operation of the navy the conquest of German colonies in Africa, Asia and Australasia has been made possible. The navy has swept the German flag from the seas and has protected the transport ofover 13,000,000 men. So well has this been done that hundreds of thousands of Canadians have been carried across the Atlantic without the loss of a life. Under the guardianship of the fleet, over 2,00,000 horses, 26,000,000 tons of munitions and war supplies, and 53,000,000 tons of coal and oil have been conveyed to meet the needs of the allied armies.

The splendid attack on the German submarine bases will serve to arouse us to a grateful recollection of these achievements.

THE FARM LABOUR PROBLEM.

The argument of the Ottawa Journal that if Canada is not to disappoint the allies in food production this summer, there must be Federal regulation of employment in some form, seems to be founded on a common sense view of the situation. The address of Hon. Mr. Carvell, along the same line the other day, emphasized this point, but it was noticeable that Mr. Carvell spoke of the matter as if he were merely voicing his own opinion, and afforded no indication of Government action.

The labour problem on the farm is a serious one. It was bad enough before the war; it became steadily worse as Canada's voluntary army grew, and it has reached a climax now that the Government has decided to cancel the exemptions of men from 20 to 22 years of age. Thousands of farmers' sons and farm labourers will be drafted as a result, and the consequences will be that food production must necessarily suffer unless immediate and adequate steps are taken. All the efforts that are being made by the Organization of Resources Committee, and by other bodies, will not be sufficient to meet the need of the hour. It will be necessary to offer bigger wages on the farms if the men are to be found.

The Ottawa Journal deals with the matter in its usual crisp style, as follows:

The voluntary system cannot be depended on. It may not be necessary to conscript men for the farms. Regulation of employment in non-essential industry and regulation of wages for farm labour may be sufficient to place nearly every man where he is needed and to equalize the burden of national service by preventing under payment to those who leave highly paid work for which they have trained to engage in work the country requires.

In view of the manifest need of maximum food production in Canada this year and the appeals that are being made for voluntary assistance by employer and employed the situation is very embarrassing to employers and employed. Employers who are not summarily dismissing their men are charged with being unpatriotic, and employees are being called slackers. And as has been pointed out in these columns, there is no assurance that if they responded to the appeals that are being made they would save the situation.

It is to be sincerely hoped, primarily for the realization of Canada's duty in food production, and secondly for the protection of those who are being unjustly accused of lack of patriotism, that it will not take too long for the Government to become seized of the necesseity for federal control of the labour situation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If one friendly aeroplane with a Peterborough in charge caused so much excitement in the city, the effect of two or three enemy machines engaged in the gentle pastime of dropping bombs can be imagined.

Perhaps all of the Canadian people do not grasp the significance of the recent statement from Washington that the United States has only shipped 14,000,000 of the 100,000,000 bushels of corn promised to the allies and that for the next two months none can be shipped owing to the danger of it going out of condition. This means that Canada wil lhave to make a still further contribution of wheat to take the place of this corn, as wheat can be shipped at any time. In order to do this strict adherence to the wheat saving regulations are absolutely essential.—Grain and Trade News.

"The need of food on the other side is greater than ever;: the need of economy on this continent is greater than ever."—Mr. Herbert Hoover.

"Nothing is as usual; why eat as usual?" is the pertinent query of the Canadian Food Bulletin.

Ypres, which has probably been under shel fire more than any point on the western front, is again being bombarded by the enemy.

Having finished entertaining the Archbishop of Algoma, Peterborough will now begin its preparations for the reception of the Duke of Devonshire.

Food's Function.

Food is the fuel which furnishes the energy for all the bodily activities, as coal furnishes the heat to make the steam which drives the engine; but it does more than this—it also builds the body engine and keeps it in repair.

Consolation.

Many a fellow who is always wailing because all his friends have forsaken him should be mighty glad his friends were wise enough to forsake him in time to avoid being here with him.

Most Wallflowers Peppery.

The mustard family contains more than two thousand species and includes cabbage, cauliflower, turnip, radish, horseradish and, in ornamentals, the stocks, sweet alyssum and the wallflower.

Poet Too Artificial.

In the same year as Lovelace, or just three centuries ago, was born Abraham Cowley, who published his first book of poems at the age of fifteen and to whom fell the posthumous honor of leading off Samuel Johnson's "Lives of the Poets." Johnson ranked him among those he called the "metaphysical" poets and expressed a dislike for his far-fetched conceits with which the present-day reader would heartily coincide.

Being Sure of Heaven.

I would rather be a poor beggar's wife and be sure of heaven, than queen of all the world and stand a doubt thereof by reason of my own consent.

Woman Invents Lamp Shade.

Artistic lamp shades have been invented by a woman who chemically treats the lining of calves' stomach to produce a translucent leather.

TO-DAY he can eat three square meals and sometimes one "extra" because Chamberlain's Tablets toned up his stomach and gave him a good digestion. They are a great help to nature. They stimulate the liver and induce healthy action of the bowels. Any time you are feeling "headachy," or bilious, or if your complexion is yellow or spotty, start taking Chamberlain's Tablets at once. Most times a single dose at night makes you bright and smiling in the morning with a clear head and a vigorous appetite.

TO AID THEIR MEN

British Women Disregard Former High Social Positions.

Female Population May Be Found Any Place Doing Such Work as Will Help the Cause.

"By Jove, I never felt more like an ass in my life, old chap." It was an old British colonel speaking. He had just returned from a government mission to the colonies, and seated before a great open fire of his London club, he was relating to a crony some of his experiences while away. "It was while I was in Sidney. Knew a chap out there and thought I'd drop in on him. Walked up to the house and rang the bell. Deucedly pretty maid answered, and, by Jove, so strong was the force of habit, don't you know, I up and kissed her before I realized she was my own niece."

And don't think for a minute that the old colonel's experience was unique, except in a few minor details. Others may not have developed such osculatory habits, but many an officer has come back from the front and found his women folk working as domestics in London. The pretty young woman one sees polishing the woodwork of the hospital waiting room or busily dusting the furniture of the club parlor may be a duchess or countess or the daughter of a millionaire wine merchant. There's no telling these days, and the English public is so accustomed to being waited upon by its gentlewomen that it has come to accept it as a matter of course.

Not so with the Sammy, though, says an exchange. He'd be the first to resent the charge of being undemocratic, but still the thought of being served by one of the "400" is almost too much for him. He was a pretty fresh young man when he first hit England. He had a reputation for breeziness to uphold, and by the spike of Heinie's hat, he was going to live up to it. But when he learned that the young woman servant was the daughter of one of the peers of the realm he wilted.

For one may find the English gentlewoman any place and doing any kind of menial labor. She isn't the petted and pampered hothouse product popular novelists would have you believe her once to have been. Instead, she's a mighty sensible, industrious, patriotic person. Her brothers and sweethearts are "out there" doing their bit and she is "carrying on" back home. It's no longer a novel sight to see her manipulating the intricate machinery of the munitions plant or skillfully guiding a taxi through the fog-shrouded streets of London. In a white uniform she wears the red cross in the hospitals of France and her native island. And now she is plying the dust cloth and the mop, washing dishes, answering doors and doing the thousand and one other things that have to be done.

Nothing is too menial for her to attempt if it adds to the comfort of the men who have given their all for Britannia. There's Lady Evelyn King, eldest daughter of the earl and countess of Lovelace, who is a housemaid at a Weymouth hospital. She was a debutante just a few years ago and at the time she was presented to King George she was expected to become one of the leaders of London society. She is tall, with dark brown hair and eyes of the same hue, and is considered one of the most beautiful women in London. When war was declared she was rapidly fulfilling the predictions made for her popularity at the time of her coming out. But now she is a servant in one of the many hospitals in England.

Felines Set Ancient City on the River Dee in an Uproar, Following Call for Rat Killers.

About fourteen miles from Liverpool on the River Dee stands the city of Chester, which was founded by the Romans. It is surrounded by a high wall of old masonry, and contains the celebrated "Rows of Chester," which are arched passageways higher than the street, through which the sidewalks run. There are also many other peculiar features in this sleepy, antique and very interesting city.

One of the historic legends of old Chester is an amusing story relating to cats, Mary Hall Leonard writes in Our Dumb Animals.

When Napoleon was defeated by the English at Waterloo, in 1815, he was sentenced to exile at the Island of St. Helena, where he finally died, May 15, 1821. Just before the ex-emperor and his escort were embarked at Plymouth —so the story runs—a curious handbill was circulated up and down the old Rows of Chester. It stated, in effect, that the Island of St. Helena had been found to be dreadfully infested with rats; that his majesty's ministers had determined that it should be forthwith cleared of these obnoxious animals; and that an agent had been appointed to purchase such cats and kittens as could be secured for this purpose. All citizens who had cats that they were willing to sell were invited to bring them to the market place, where the purchase would be made.

At the time appointed the staid old town of Chester presented a curious appearance. The streets were filled with a hurrying crowd carrying sacks or baskets from which issued fearful noises. As the crowd grew denser and the people jostled against each other the cat concert grew louder. And as the people themselves grew excited by the din, they also grew quarrelsome. At last they dropped their burdens in the effort to extricate themselves and an indiscriminate scrimmage was the result.

Then the boys of Chester, who were as fond of amusement as American boys would be, opened the sacks and baskets, and several thousand of frightened and angry cats rushed squalling and scratching through the streets of the city. The excited citizens opened their windows to see what was the matter, and in rushed the cats, breaking china, overturning furniture and making a general uproar.

Then the people, roused to vengeance, joined in a defensive warfare against the disturbing felines, and in the morning the bodies of some hundreds of cats were floating down the river.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Why They Stopped.

One morning recently the children of the Indianapolis Orphans' home were assembled in the auditorium. They were patriotic and started to sing "The Finest Flag That Flies." Their leader and pianist had them sing the first verse. They did that so well she asked for the second stanza. They started. Suddenly every child stopped —not a sound escaped their lips. The leader, very much surprised and chagrined at the sudden, unexpected silence, said, "What is the matter?"

In one accord they replied, "We can't sing that next line."

She looked at the words and the next line read, "Dear old Germany."

"Certainly not," she told them, "we will leave that entire stanza out." She had not thought of finding anything like that in an American flag song. It had been written before the world war.—Indianapolis News.

Get Oil From Grain.

A discovery by Germans is that for extracting oil in quantity from grain. By a process called degerminating, a small germ resembling a hen's egg in composition, designed for the nutriment of the young plant, is extracted. Distilled, this germ yields a very good table oil, and at the same time a raw ingredient for margarine and an albuminous powder, which latter contains three and one-half times the nourishment of meat. Twenty grammes are equal to one egg, and already it has been put to use as an egg substitute. All large mills in Germany have introduced degermination, and the germs are being turned into oil, and albumin powder.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"Pneumonia left me weak and tired, with pains under my shoulder blades, a bad cough and no appetite. Five bottles of Vinol restored my strength and health. I gained in weight and my cough disappeared."—Mrs. B. Richter, 132 Menhan St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

This is because Vinol is a constitutional, cod liver and iron remedy which creates an appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood and in this natural manner restores health and strength. Formula on every bottle. Show it to your doctor. He knows.

NORTH POLE FEAST

Starving Men of Kane's Arctic Expedition Dined on Seal.

Members of Party Trembling With Anxiety When True Aim of Rifleman Ended the Crisis.

Some one has estimated that in the century-long effort to reach the North pole 400 lives and 200 ships were lost. One of the earlier expeditions was the one led by Doctor Kane in 1853, consisting of 19 men. The account of their hardships as told in "The Siege and Conquest of the North Pole," by George Bryce, is almost incredible, relates the Youth's Companion. Scurvy and the bitter cold made the sunless arctic winter of 140 days a continuous and horrible nightmare.

Their brig, Advance, was frozen into the great ice pack, which even the returning sun of summer could not loosen. With scanty supplies they were compelled to spend a second dreary winter in the arctic, during which several of the party succumbed to sickness and exposure. In June, when their provisions were virtually gone, a narrow channel opened, and the survivors, manning two small boats, fought their way southward. Starvation quickly weakened their efforts, but at that desperate crisis they sighted food—a seal. Doctor Kane thus describes the incident:

"It was an ursuk, and so large that I at first mistook it for a walrus. Trembling with anxiety, we prepared to crawl down upon it. We stationed Peterson, with the large English rifle, in the bow, and drew stockings over the oars as mufflers. As we neared the animal, our excitement became so intense that the men could hardly keep stroke. I had a set of signals for such occasions that spared us the use of the voice; and when we were about 300 yards off, the oars were taken in, and we moved in deep silence with a single scull astern.

"The seal was asleep, for it reared its head when we were almost within rifle shot, and to this day I can remember the hard, careworn, almost despairing expression of the men's thin faces as they saw it move; their lives depended on its capture.

"I depressed my hand nervously as a signal for Peterson to fire. The boat, noiselessly sagging ahead, seemed to me within certain range. Looking at Peterson, I saw that the poor fellow was paralyzed by his anxiety; he was trying vainly to obtain a rest for his gun against the cutwater of the boat. The seal rose on its fore flippers, gazing at us for a moment with frightened curiosity, and coiled itself for a plunge. At that instant, simultaneously with the crack of the rifle it relaxed its length on the ice, and at the very brink of the water fell helpless to one side.

"With a wild yell the men urged both boats upon the floes. A crowd of hands seized the seal and bore it up to safer ice. The men seemed half crazy. I had not realized how much we were reduced by absolute famine. They ran over the floe crying and laughing and brandishing their knives. It was not five minutes before every man was sucking his bloody fingers or mouthing long strips of raw blubber.

"Not an ounce of the seal was lost. The intestines found their way into the soup kettles; the cartilaginous parts of the fore flippers were cut off and passed around to be chewed upon; and even the liver, warm and raw as it was, bade fair to be eaten before it had seen the pot. That night, on the large halting-floe, to which, in contempt of the dangers of drifting, we happy men had hauled our boats, two entire planks were devoted to a grand cooking fire, and we enjoyed a rare and savage feast."

Meaning of "Sinn Fein."

"Sinn Fein" (pronounced Shinn Fain) is a Celtic expression meaning "ourselves alone," and is the name and motto of an Irish party which construes it as meaning both for and by the Irish alone. It dates actively from 1906 and claims to be more practical and comprehensive than any of the old parties that have aimed at Irish independence or self-government. Among other things, it proposes to establish a purely Irish parliament, army and navy, mint, civil and consular service, judiciary and school system; also the economic reorganization of Ireland by its own people on a purely Irish basis, including merchant marine, stock exchange, banks, etc.; all official and business matters and correspondence to be conducted in Gaelic, the use of English language to be boycotted in public offices, schools and business. These and many other interesting results are to be accomplished by passive means and peaceable methods. It is not stated exactly how, but by some kind of social and political pressure without violence.

The West Point Course.

The course of instruction at the West Point Military academy requires four years, and is chiefly mathematical and professional. Each cadet is paid by the government $700 a year while at the academy, that sum being about sufficient for his support. Only one leave of absence is allowed during the four years, and this is granted at the end of the second year. The regular session of study and academic duties continues from September 1 to June 1, the intervening months being spent in camp, where practical military training is given. At the end of four years cadets are graduated and commissioned as second lieutenants in the United States army.

Imagine a big mechanism that seems to have a malign life of its own, transcending human management, impervious to human attack. Imagine a giant caterpillar the size of a small house, a caterpillar whose skin is steel and whose eyes are death and spouting cannon. Imagine this monster crawling down upon you, immune from everything but the rare direct hit of a big shell; able to climb, delighting to amble into and out of holes, implacable, resistless, fatal—such is a British war tank—Exchange.

"THEY SHALL NOT WANT"

In a moment of inspiration an advertising man recently hit upon the above four words as epitomizing the desire and determination of the people of Canada that the Armies of the Allies and the suffering peoples of the Allied nations of Europe shall be supplied with all that Canada can possibly furnish of the food stuffs necessary for their support in the energetic and successful prosecution of their struggle for the defeat of tyrannical Prussian aspirations.

Compressed in this little sentence is more real throbbing meaning than most full pages of printed matter contain. In sixteen letters it expresses the determination of a people that a great cause must be sustained at no matter what personal sacrifice.

"They shall not want."

How aptly these words also express the attitude of the NORMAL, HEALTHY-MINDED MAN towards, those who under our social system, naturally look to him for support and protection. As he thinks of the wife who has entrusted her future to his care and of the children whom he has brought into the world, his thought and determination is "THEY SHALL NOT WANT."

This is always the attitude of the normal, healthy-minded man who is willing to sacrifice, if need be, to attain this noble end.

A policy in the Sun Life of Canada provides the safest and most economical means of fulfilling this noble desire and determination and incidentally, if fortunately in time this mode of protection is no longer necessary he may himself reap the benefits of his savings and thrift.

Thus virtue has its own reward.

St. George's Day Fittingly Observed Last Evening In St. John's Church

Archbishop of Ontario Delivered An Inspiring Message to a Large Audience—Special Music by the United Choirs of St. John's and All Saints' Churches--St. George's Day and What It Stands For.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S ADDRESS

A large congregation attended the festival service of St. George held last evening in St. John's church. The service was impressive and interdenominational in character. An appropriate and scholarly address was delivered by His Grace the Most Rev. G. Thornloe, D.D., D.C.L., Archbishop of Algoma, and Metropolitan of the Ecclesiastical Province of Ontario. The Rev. Canon Morley, of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, officiated, assisted by the Rev. W. H. White of St. Luke's, Rev. R. B. Grobb, of All Saints', Rev. James Price, of St. George's, and Mr. C. A. G. Spence of St. Alban's Mission, Brownton.

THE MUSIC.

During the day national and patriotic music was rendered on the chimes by Mr. J. Butcher and Mr. R. J. Devey, in honour of the patron saint of England. At the evening service the choristers of All Saints and St. John's formed a choir of over 70 voices under the leadership of the veteran organist and choirmaster, Mr. R. J. Devey. The procession marched from the school to the chancel singing "O God our Help in Ages Past," but the choir stalls only accommodated the lady choristers, the boys were seated in the chancel aisle and the men in the first five pews in the nave. The versicles and responses were to Tallis' ancient setting, the intoning being entrusted to an old St. John's boy chorister, Rev. F. J. Sawers. "Give Peace in our Time, O Lord," the prayer versicle reverently implored, and the deep resounding response, "Because there is none other that fighteth for us, but only Thou, O God," must have been fervently prayed by that congregation, meekly kneeling at the throne of grace.

A special hymn to St. George, the martyred saint, was sung in the office, copies of which were supplied to the congregation.

Before the sermon, a sweet voiced English lad, Sherward Kennet, sang "Home Sweet Home." Mr. George Chandler, now choirmaster of All Saints' and for some years a valuable member of St. John's choir, sang the peace solo in the offertory anthem, "Praise the Lord."

The highest praise is due to that large body of choristers, voluntary singers every one of them, who last night exemplified the old adage, — "Music is the hand maid of the Church." They very literally fulfilled their function of leading the service last night, from the small boy of tender years to the veterans of over 40 years service.

The anthem was well rendered, not the least pleasing feature being a stirring unison passage, "He hath not dealt so with any nation," by the tenor and bass voices singing in the nave. The themes of prayer and praise were interwoven all through the composition, ending with the Doxology, in which at a signal from the conductor, the whole congregation rose from their seats and heartily joined in singing.

Miss Maggie Flowers, organist of All Saints' church, assisted ably at the organ both in the anthem and in the hymns. An impromptu organ recital of old English airs (in which was included "Heart of Oak") was played by Mr. Devey, as the large congregation slowly left the old church, and the celebration of the Festival of St. George the Martyr was over.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S ADDRESS.

His Grace welcomed the Great War Veterans who attended the service in a body, and referred to them as a connecting link with the great conflict that is raging in Europe. "It has become commonplace to hear people say that the war has made us think, and this is taken as evidence that it is doing us good, as though thinking is a guarantee of blessing. It is well to remember that thinking leads to conclusion, and what we need is action. Our conclusions may be of an improper nature, whereas what we need is action, in a form acceptable to God."

WHY IS IT?

The war is deluging the earth with blood and involving all classes in the deepest sorrow. Why is it? Why is it that God with his almighty power and love, does not stop this war? It is not easy for everyone to realize that there are certain things which God cannot do. Free will and compulsion cannot exist together. Goodness cannot be produced by compulsion. Man cannot be made good by compulsion. You must touch his heart and he must choose it for his own good. If God compelled people to be good He would have a kingdom of slaves, not a loving, devoted family. It is essential not mere on in the battle that was then along the right lines.

Men under God are the shapers of heir own destiny. God is allowing sin to work out its own penalty in order that offenders may be brought to their own senses like the prodigal son.

A STATE CHURCH.

"I am glad to see representatives of the city here," said Archbishop Thornloe. "We have no such thing in this country as a state church, but it is well to remember that the state and the church have a common interest, and responsibility for the welfare of the people, and dependence upon God. We are gathered here tonight to celebrate St. George's day. In the church we have a beautiful system of celebration of the saints. It is a beautiful custom, because it brings before us men who have gone before in the way of holiness. It is a system calculated to do good to those who use it right. This day is not one of those. St. George is not one of the Scripture saints. The history of St. George is veiled in the mists of the past. We believe that St. George was a saintly soldier who lived and fought towards the end of the third century. At the end of the twelfth century it is reported that St. George appeared in a vision before the king of that day and cheered him on in the battle that was being waged being waged for England's sake. In the thirteenth century St. George was chosen as the patron saint of England.

AN INSPIRATION.

"The story is one of inspiration. The battle cry of England for ages has been: 'St. George! St. George! for England!' Owing to the legendary nature of the story it may count for little. I want to correct that," said the speaker. "Sentiment has a great deal to do with our ultimate success or failure. It is essential we should have high ideals. That is just what we gain from the story of St. George. From him we get the inspiration we need along certain lines. We cannot fight the battles in a low and earthly spirit. Our minds must be lifted up.

"St. George was a soldier. He is represented as fighting a dragon and so delivering a princess from danger. He bears upon the white field of his shield a red rose. It is true that warfare is being dragged down to a low level by the enemies we are fighting. I have felt my soul stirred within me as I read of the atrocities committed by the enemy we are fighting. If we attempted to imitate our enemies and practiced their unscrupulous methods then we would be lowering the standard of England.

A TRUE SOLDIER.

"St. George teaches us all that. He teaches us to be a true soldier. We must be soldiers of truth, purity and righteousness in order to bear that red crossed banner unsullied in the fight. On the very groundwork of the Union Jack we find the cross of St. George entwined with the cross of St. Patrick and St. Andrew, that has floated over the land, and has given us so much inspiration. The blue on the flag represents the mercy of heaven; the red represents the blood we must be prepared to sacrifice to purge ourselves of our enemies. The crosses represent the sacrifices we must make in an effort to preserve the liberties that go with a Christian civilization. The only way the Anglo-Saxon race can pursue that glorious destiny is to continue the course as symbolized by the flag. So much we learn from St. George, and the manner he has given us.

"It is the boast of English people that they enjoy a freedom that is not enjoyed by any other nation. Our liberty means more to us when we know that our King, whom we honor, has the power to veto the tyrannical acts of those in power, should such a course be necessary. There cannot be such a thing as a pure democracy. There mus be leaders over us. There you have democracy and aristocracy. The only difficulty is how we should choose those who rule. So much for the British liberty. I hope the day will never come when the people will go mad and overturn the throne.

A PARADOX.

"As free and yet as servants." It is a paradox. Liberty is not license to do what you will, and go where you will, and trample on the rights of people. It is to perform the duty that God put you in the world to do, and that is to serve God and fellowmen. Only by the assimilation of the gospel of Jesus Christ and the grace which the gospel ministers, can people have perfect freedom.

FOUR LINES OF SERVICE.

Honour all men, love the brotherhood, fear God and honour the King. There you have the four lines of service. Honour all men, even your enemies.

Love the brotherhood. I feel a jealous kind of respect for the fraternal organizations and the brotherly spirit that they manifest towards each othe. That is something that we should introduce into our lives.

Fear God as you go about your daily task. Let there be within you a consciousness of His presence. Fear God, not with the ordinary earthly fear but a reverent fear that a child has who shrinks from giving his mother pain.

Honor the King. There is no lack of authority in the Scripture for Kings. There is no lack of instruction in the Scripture as to the reverence and respect we should pay them. Thank God we have a king who may be honoured easily.

"In conclusion, I beseech you to follow not only the cross of St.Gerge but Jesus, the Captain of Righteousness, through whom you will learn the lesson of St. George's day, and become worthy soldiers of St. George, and followers of Jesus Christ.

Canadian Patriotic Fund Assistance For War Brides

Mothers Whose Sons Have Married In England and Whose Allowances Have Been Diverted Will Also Be Granted An Allowance

OTHER CHANGES

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 24.—English girls who have married Canadian soldiers in England and are now coming to Canada will be materially assisted by the action of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Following a recommendation from the Advisory committee, the executive decided to grant these war brides assistance at the usual rates in force in the localities in which they are settled.

In the case of men who on their return to Canada wish to marry without waiting for their final discharge from the army, the committee has now ruled that Patriotic Fund assistance shall be given.

HELP FOR MOTHERS.

Mothers whose sons have married in England and who were previously in receipt of assigned pay and separation allowance will, when these allowances are diverted to the wife of the soldier, be granted assistance by the fund to a maximum amount of $30 a month.

As the result of communications with the overseas military authorities it has been arranged that 70 per cent of the working pay due to a man in respect of whom separation allowance is issued, and which pay receives in addition to his ordinary military wage in certain Forestry Battalions, shall be sent to the dependent in receipt of separation allowance. Patriotic Fund allowances in these cases will only be reduced by the extent of such payments.

1200 TONS OF COAL PROMISED THE CITY FOR WINTER RESERVE

Most Jobbers Were Not Eager to Accept the City's Orders—Plans Completed For the Registration of Sales to Local Consumers.

Promises of 1,200 tons of coal were the present fruit of the visit Mayor Duncan and Ald. Taylor paid to the Buffalo and Cleveland offices last week. "We were informed," the Mayor told the Fire, Water and Light committee last night, "that the local dealers would not receive more than their 1916 or 1917 shipments. There were over 3,000 cars of steam coal on the tracks around Buffalo that had not been delivered during the winter. Steam coal has been selling comparatively cheap of late, but the price is expected to advance in the near future. In fact within the past month steam coal has become scarce."

One dealer in Cleveland first refused to send the city any coal at all, but under persuasion, and because the city has been doing business with them, they promised to send one or two cars a month.

"Another dealer," continued the Mayor, "was willing to talk about Canadians, the war, any subject but coal. He wouldn't listen to us; he said he couldn't give us any coal. The Lehigh Valley people told us they would send J. E. A. Fitzgerald more coal than ever because they had not given him full deliveries last winter. We placed an order in Toronto, and all told should get 1,200 tons if the promises are fulfilled. But we must keep in touch with them all the time. We can't afford to let them forget us."

Register Sales.

Ald. Dobbin's detailed plans for the registration of sales of coal by the local dealers were explained to the committee. The cost of a filing cabinet, cards and other incidentals would amount to about $45. Five thousand cards will be ordered, and the Coal Records office organized in a short time. The daily deliveries of coal by the local dealers will be registered; each consumer's purchases will be tabulated, and at any time the committee will know how much coal any citizen has received.

Ald. Weir pointed out that the system did not provide for finding out the consumer's normal requirements, but Ald. Dobbin stated that citizens had to give this information to their dealers.

Two Enemy Destroyers Sunk In Navy's Exploit At Zeebrugge

Complete Information of Results of Raid on Submarine Bases on Belgian Coast is Still Lacking—Believed to Have Been Wholly Successful.

London, April 24.—A sailor who participated in the raid on Zeebrugge, declared that two German destroyers were sunk in the harbor and one alongside the Mole.

London, April 23.—Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, in supplementing the Admiralty report on last night's raid aginst Zeebrugge and Ostend, said in giving the House of Commons such information as had come to hand of "this extremely gallant and hazardous raid":

"The plan was, after an intense bombardment of Zeebrugge by the monitors, the Vindictive, with auxiliaries, was to run alongside the Mole and attack it with gunfire as they approached. Storming and demolition parties were to be landed. Meanwhile three blockships, assisted by motorboats, were to make for the entrance to the canal, run aground and be blown up. Two old and valueless submarines, filled with explosives, were to run against the pile work connecting the masonry with the shore, in order to cut off the Mole from theshore.

"At Ostend the operation was more simple but the difficulties were considerably increased by the mist, rain and low visibility, and the consequent absence of aerial co-operation.

"The results thus far are known to be two blockships were run ashore and blown up at Ostend. It is too early to say definitely whether they acomplished their object, but so far as the officers could see in the darkness they were slightly off the course.

"At Zeebrugge two of three blockships attained their objective, being sunk or blown up at the entrance of the canal. The third grounded while passing in.

"A certain amount of damage, the extent at present unknown, was done by gunfire and torpedo attack on an enemy destroyer, and other craft lying at the Mole. Coastal motor boats report having torpedoed an enemy destroyer, which was trying to escape seaward. One of two old submarines gained its objective and destroyed the piling approach to the Mole.

"Storming parties from the Vindictive and the ferry boats attacked under an extremely heavy fire and fought with the greatest gallantry, maintaining their position alongside the Mole for an hour, and causing much damage to the enemy, and inflicting considerable losses. The objective of the storming and demolition partis on the Mole were the enemy forces holding it, and the battery upon it, as well as the destroyer and submarine depots and the large seaplane base upon it.

"After re-embarking their landing parties, the aforesaid three vessels withdrew.

"The attack primarily was intended to engage the attention of the garrison on the Mole, thereby allowing the blockship to enter the harbor.

"The casualties to the personnel, as we had expected in a harardous adventure of the kind, were heavy in proportion to the number of men engaged. Up to to-day the British losses reported are one destroyer sunk by gunfire and two coastal motorboats and two launches missing.

"We have sufficient information to show that the entrance to the Bruges Canal probably was effectively blocked, that material damage was done, and that the greatest credit is due to all ranks for their gallantry."

ECZEMA DISAPPEARED FOLLOWING A FEW WEEKS' TREATMENT

"SWAIZEMA" as a treatment for Eczema, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Boils, Pimples, and Running Sores is no longer in its experimental stages. For years it has been earning testimonials like the following:

While at College some years ago my daughter developed Eczmea on her hands. Treatment by skin specialists for many months, while beneficial, failed to effect a cure. On her return home I decided to try a specific advertised locally as "Swaizema" compounded by you. Improvement was noticeable in a short time and the disease disappeared following a few weeks' treatment. It has not returned for over two years."

COMING TO THE EMPIRE

D. W. Griffiths $2,000,000 Colossal Spectacle, "Intolerance" or Love's Struggle Throughout the Ages

By return engagement, with the Orchestra, D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance," his first and only production since "The Birth of a Nation," will be the attraction at the Empire Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, April 29 and 30. Matinees at 2.30. In this stupendous spectacle Griffith shows four prescient periods of the world's history. As in a vision one looks back into the far distant past and sees Balshazzar in Babylon, the Magnificent. In another a powerful, thrilling story of modern life is realistically shown. Again one turns back the hands of time to the Middle Ages, when the Huguenots of Paris were being massacred by thousands. These swift-changing scenes keep the interest of the spectator keyed to the highest tension. In every respect "Intolerance" is absolutely different from anything ever shown before on the stage or the screen. It is difficult to tell whether the suspense of the spectator is greater while following the maddening ride of the mountain girl in a chariot along the banks of the Euphrates or in the frenzied rush of a modern racing car speeding after a fast receding train. Words are absolutely inadequate to give any impression of the magnitude and the comprehensiveness of this truly wondrous spectacle. The scenes in Paris are like the pages of Dumas come to life. The episodes of Jewish history appear like vivified paintings of Tissot. To convey any idea of the Babylonian scenes will probably never be attempted for neither the pages of history or of fiction, nor masterpieces of great painters have ever made so real the splendor and magnificence of that mighty city of the past. An orchestral score akin to grand opera is played.

Sure Way To Get Rid Of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

NOTED ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIEST PASSES AWAY.

Rev. Father Michael Jeffcoat, who has been actively connected with the work of the Roman Catholic Church in Ontario for 26 years, died in Merritton yesterday after a brief illness, at the age of 60 years. He was born in Ireland and was educated at Louvain, Belgium. In 1882 he was ordained in Ireland by Archbishop Lynch in Killarney Cathedral, and, coming to Canada, he was private secretary to the Archbishop for a number of years. He was later private secretary to the Archbishop of Toronto. Father Jeffcoat was parish priest at Orangeville, Pickering, Oshawa, Stayner, Colgan, and at Merritton.

To Properly Treat Obstinate Wrinkles

Particularly where wrinkles are long and deep, the massage devotee is apt to rub too hard and too frequently. This loosens the skin, causes muscles to sag, aggravates the wrinkled condition—just the opposite result from that sought.

Better than massage or anything else, for the most obstinate wrinkles as well as the finest lines, is a remarkable formula which you may readily avail yourself of, as you will have no difficulty procuring the constituents from your druggist. It is this: One ounce powdered saxolite, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathe face, neck and hands in this. The effect is really marvelous, not only as to wrinkles, but also in cases of baggy cheeks and chin. The application is cooling and soothing, tending to relieve fatigue. Both the witch hazel and the saxolite are, of course, entirely harmless to the skin.

Bit Too Clever.

A pretty good illustration of the way in which cleverness often overreaches itself is provided by the English sparrows, who conclude in their smart and superior way that the piece of nice, nourishing suet swung to a branch of our cherry tree by a prominent member of the Audubon society is some new kind of trap and won't go within smell of it, with the highly satisfactory result that the less self-sufficient and more trusting cardinals and downy woodpeckers get all the good of it.—

Battle Against Dry Rot.

Dry rot is a wood disease that is giving serious trouble in some localities and engineers are prescribing preventive and curative remedies. It is especially urged that every trace of the infection be removed from timber for buildings. The infected spots are to be oiled to retain the spores and are then to be completely removed and burned. The diseased wood is to be kept from contact with other building material, while saws used in cutting it are to be afterward sterilized.

Worth While Quotation.

Lapps Wanted Laws Changed.

An unusual venture in representative government was made by a recent conference of 100 Lapps in northern Sweden. These delegates represented the whole nomadic people, and their purpose was to frame a united protest against certain laws affecting their reindeer herds. The Lapps rarely have any settled habitation, moving from place to place after the herds and often coming into hostile contact with the settled Scandinavian farmers. The law of Sweden requires the Lapps to pay fine and damages when their reindeer damage crops, and it was to secure a modification of this statute that the Lapps held a representative conference.

TWENTY-NINE PERSONS WERE FOUND GUILTY

Hindus, German Consular Agents, Business Men and Others Tried to Foment Revolution in India.

Canadian Press:

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Twenty-nine persons, Hindus, former German Consular officers, business men and others were found guilty early to-day by a jury in the Federal Court of conspiracy to violate neutrality of the United States through plots to foment a revolution against British rule in India. Sentences will be passed on Tuesday. The German defendants were not entitled to bail, Judge Van Fleet ruled and Franz Bopp and others were ordered interned. The bail of each Hindu defendant was fixed at $25,000 and others from $25,000 down.

Shot Fellow-Hindu.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Ram Chandra, editor of the Hindu publication Ghadr, was shot, probably fatally, here yesterday by Ram Singh, another Hindu defendant, in the trial of thirty-two persons charged with conspiring to foment revolution against British rule in India.

The Court had just adjourned for the noon recess.

U. S. Marshal J| B. Holohan, who was present, across the court-room from Singh, drew his revolver and shot Singh, who fell to the floor.

GERMANY NEEDS WAR MATERIAL

Holland May Be Forced to Make Some Concessions to the Enemy.

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Holland was believed here to-day to be making some concessions to Germany to stave off war. Germany has demanded the right to get badly needed gravel and other war material from the neutral nation. Holland has steadfastly declined to make certain alterations in the policy, but it is considered likely here that she is striving to do the difficult task of keeping on nominally friendly terms, at least with both the Entente and Germany.

Why I Believe In Nuxated Iron

As a Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder

Probably no medicine has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron. It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress; Physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monsegneur Nannini, a prominent Clergyman, recommends it to all. Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician.

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor dep't.) New York and the Westchester County Hospital says there are thousands of men and women who need a strength and blood builder but do not know what to take. In his opinion there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for enriching the blood and helping to increase the strength and endurance of men and women who burn up too rapidly their nervous energy in the strenuous strain of the great business competition of the day.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by former members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and other prominent people with such surprising results and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron preparations it is easily assimiliated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by McDermid & Jury, and by all other druggists.

With regard to the arrangement instituted whereby correspondence of a private and family nature can be forwarded from individuals in Canada to persons in enemy and enemy occupied territory through the medium of Thos. Cook & Son, 530 St. Catherine St., W. Montreal, difficulty is being caused owing to persons remitting the charge for forwarding these letters (35c) by postage stamps instead of by means of a Postal Note for 30 cents and five cents in postage affixed thereto.

The attention to persons sending such correspondence is particularly directed to this as in future where the charges are remitted by means of postage stamps the letters will be returned to the senders.—R. M. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster General.

New Rules Affecting Conscientious Objectors

Will Not Be Compelled to Go to France But Must Serve in Canada

TORONTO, April 24.—Conscientious objectors who refuse to fight will not have to go to France and face the Huns, but they must serve with the Canadian forces in Canada.

This is the latest edict from Ottawa which reached headquarters yesterday. The order states: "Men objecting to serve on conscientious grounds will in future, not be sent overseas, but will be obliged to serve in Canada in the Canadian Engineers, Army Service Corps, Army Medical Corps, or on clerical duties and may be transferred accordingly.

Those refusing to obey orders after such transfer will be dealt with accordingly, which means that if a "C. O." refuses to serve he will be tried by district court martial, sentenced, and then handed over to the civil authorities for detention and then sent overseas with the first available draft.

Since the Military Service Act came into force, scores of objectors have been sentenced to long prison terms by military and civil courts and now the question is asked—will these men be released and be permitted to serve in Canada? Very few of the objectors are willing to undertake any war work, but the chief objection is to fighting.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

A Message For All.

(Ottawa Journal.)

"Canadians, in this fateful hour, I command you and I trust you to fight as you have ever fought, with all your strength, with all your determination, with all your tranquil valour." That message of General Currie to our troops should be accepted also as an exhortation to all of us.

The War Garden.

(Kingston Whig.)

Whether or not we have enough to eat next winter depends entirely upon the effort we put forth this spring and summer to increase production. Cutivate that war garden.

Britain's Sacrifices.

(Hamilton Herald.)

In this country we have not yet suffered a tithe of what the people of Britain have been enduring with patience and fortitude and even cheerfulness—and we shall never be obliged to suffer what the people of France and Italy, not to mention the Belgians, have long been suffering. In fact, we are just beginning to feel the pinch of the war. But it will be seen that the Canadian people are capable of real self-sacrifice, once they are convinced that it is necessary to the cause.

No Prosecutions

(Guelph Mercury.)

The inference by the Financial Post that former Food Controller O'Connor persecuted the packing and other big interests is hardly right. All he could do was to investigate and report on conditions as he found them. It was the duty of the department to prosecute, and plenty of evidence was at hand to make out a good case of food hoarding and food waste by corporate interests. But there was no prosecution in Canada. There was in England, where the cases were not so flagrant, but no one in Canada had to suffer in prison or make restitution to the public for unholy gains from food speculation.

Unexplored Canada.

(Vancouver Province.)

It is believed that nearly 30 per cent. of Canada is still undiscovered, and if Indian reports are to be believed, there is in the basin of the Mackenzie river one of the largest areas of possible oil bearing country on the face of the earth. The Indians report the existence of lakes 100 miles and over long in Yukon that no white man has ever seen, while even the Indians apparently know nothing of the as yet untrodden Mackenzie mountains.

Canadian Sugar.

(New York Sun.)

That Canadian sugar mills turned Canadian sugar growers last year will nearly $1,000,000 into the pockets of bewilder those who think of sugar making as a tropical or semi-tropical industry. But some changes are going on in Canadian farming which will give the world other supplies. In the Canadian peninsula between the Niagara and Detroit rivers farmers are raising nearly every fruit and berry used in that British beloved delicacy, jam. So Canadians gleefully boast. With sugar for preserving, our neighbour will soon stop importing and begin exporting that essential article of diet, and then—happiness, immigration, unbounded wealth!

Winning the War.

(Buffalo Express.)

If the Germans can be broken completely by the stubborn British lines, a counter-blow can be delivered by the French and American reserves which will be far-reaching and decisive. Every day that the British hold out, even at some loss of ground, without requiring the aid of the French and Americans, justifies stronger confidence in this eventual outcome. It is the German purpose so to punish the British that the French and American reserves will have to come to their aid and be used up in their turn. The Germans have not done that yet. Therefore, let us shout: Bully for the British! They are doing more than merely holding on, at some points, losing a stretch of battle front. They are winning the war.

An Unexpected Meeting

ANYONE who knows the Canadian Pacific Rockies knows that north of the main line of the C. P. R. and in the neighborhood of the headwaters of the Bow River there is good country. At one point where a crystal lake nestles in the chill grey rocks of 10,000 feet elevation there can almost always be found fresh indications of the peak dwellers.

Now, old goat hunters will tell you that there is nothing more difficult to approach from below than a band of Rocky Mountain goats. Their keen eyes and sensitive senses, their exaggerated caution and incessant watchfulness makes it a game of highest skill. But once let a hunter get above a band of goats and they are practically at his mercy. Trained as they are in the safety of the peaks, knowing full well that danger comes from below they watch the down slopes and are inclined to be careless about the trail behind, down which they have come in safety.

An old he-goat, tall as a yearling calf and odorous as an Indian fish camp, went down to the lake to drink, and started back up the rock slide to his waiting band. It was summer, or rather early fall. Only old snow was yet in the mountains, and it lay only where the shadows of the cliffs protected it from the rays of the sun. It was above the timber line, there was no brush, but plenty of succulent lichens. The old goat was well contented. He drank, he turned and climbed. Topping the grade, five hundred feet above the lake, he stopped astounded and angry. A fierce black animal, neither wolf nor bear nor cat, faced him with fiery eyes, gleaming teeth, and deep throat rumblings. It was the lone hunting dog of a hunter. The dog had been trained to get above the goats and dispute passage until the hunter came to kill.

"But what's the use of killing him when I want to get sheep further up," the hunter reasoned, as he snapped his kodak shutter and whistled the reluctant dog to heel, while the goat still stood paralyzed with amazement.

MERCHANTS WILL CLOSE EARLY

Largely Attended Meeting Was Held Last Evening.

A largely attended meeting of merchants was held last evening in the Y.M.C.A. Dry goods, shoes, hardware, jewellery and many other merchantile sections were represented at the meeting. It was unanimously agreed to close each day at five o'clock, instead of six, commencing the first of May. The grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association will meet on Thursday evening to discuss the early closing measure.

The retail merchants plan to meet each month for the purpose of discussing and dealing with matters pertaining to the interests of the merchants of the city.

Peterboro' Hockey Club Held Banquet Last Evening

The Peterborough Hockey Club held an informal banquet last evening in the Empress hotel.

In his presidential address Mr. C. G. Graham, president of the club, said that he was pleased with the showing made during the season. He recalled the different games. He said it was as good as a championship to beat Lindsay. (Cheers.) Mr. Graham then reviewed the season's performances.

"I am very satisfied and more than satisfied," said Mr. Cranfield in his remarks, which briefly prefaced those of the president.

"You have gone further than I thought you would. Next years we will have a much stronger team. A team that will not stop for De La Salle, but will go right through.

At the conclusion of the banquet the boys went for an automobile ride around the city.

Music & Drama

With a plot that was novel if not very deep, a cast of clever entertainers and a score in which Rudolf Friml, composer of "High Jinks," "Katinka," and "The Fire Fly," has done some of his best work, "You're in Love," at the Grand last night, proved one of the most enjoyable musical offerings in a season that has been notable for attractions of that type. The music was the biggest feature of the production, the score abounding in tuneful numbers, of which the title song, "You're in Love," was the most enjoyable, but which had little advantage over Loveland," "Married Life," "I am only Dreaming," and several other numbers.

The action centres around the marriage of Georgina and Hobby Douglas, who are bound by a contract not to do any of the usual "billing and cooing" of married life for one year, this condition being enacted by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Payton, who after three ventures in the matrimonial gamble, losing her third husband by the French leave method, has soured on the sterner sex. Hubby No. 3 turns up early in the play and his appearance has the lutimate effect of quashing the contract, and every one is happy.

The cast was a thoroughly capable one. Edna Pendleton was a delightful Georgina and Billy Cotton did splendid work as Hobby. Ralph Whitehead sang nicely and showed histrionic ability as well. Alice Johnston was most amusing as Mrs. Payton, and her topical song, "Keep off the Grass," scored heavily, while Raymond Crane had a rich comedy part in the wandering husband, a role reminiscent of that played by Richard Carle in "The Tenderfoot."

The scenic effects were unusually sumptuous, the second act showing the steamer "High Hope," being a masterpiece.

Another big musical success will come to the Grand to-morrow (Thursday) night, in Irving Berlin's "Watch your Step."

Big Difference In Prices To The City

One result of the city's invitation to local dealers to quote for supplies used by different departments was mentioned at the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night. For sulphuric acid needed by the Fire Department one quotation was $5 a gallon, and another from the Peterborough Lock Co. was $1.10. This big difference was explained in a statement that the Lock Company was probably offering the acid to the city at cost.

One thousand cards were ordered for Chief Grange, with which he will keep a record of his proposed regular inspection of the premises of all stores and buildings in the fire limits. It was stated that the conditions already reported of rubbish and other refuse piled in cellars were the best warrant for his inspection which will be adopted as a measure of fire prevention.

Mayor Duncan's suggestion that hydrants be installed in the long blocks between George and Aylmer streets, brought a report from Ald. Dobbin, locating fourteen hydrants, which the Mayor considered an excessive number. Five were suggested for Hunter, four for Simcoe and five for Charlotte streets. The Mayor said that one or two in these blocks might be sufficient. He and Ald. Dobbin will discuss the question further.

Staff Position For Col. Ackerman

His many friends will be interested in learning that Lieut.-Col. Chas. Ackerman has been appointed a position on the headquarters staff at Ottawa with the rank of Major. He has been made conservation officer of equipment and ordnance stores, and his duties will carry him from one end of Canada to the other, from Halifax to Victoria.

MINOR OPERATIONS HAVE MATERIALLY IMPROVED POSITIONS.

LONDON, April 24.—(By Reuter's Ottawa Agency). — Despatches from British Headquarters in France state that there are more definite signs this morning of the new phase of the enemy offensive. German artillery is active to-day over practically the whole front south of Arras, and particularly on the southern flank of our line. Minor operations have materially improved positions, but otherwise there is no change in the situation.

WHEN THINGS SEEM BAD, change the style of your newspaper advertising—it has an influence in improving things—just as coreet style makes you look more favourable upon people.

BALLOON LIKE BIG TADPOLE

Latest French Aircraft for Observation Purposes Requires Fifty Men to Maneuver It.

Among the latest triumphs of the French aerial service is an observation balloon, named "Le Caquot," writes a Paris correspondent. In shape it resembles a great tadpole. Whereas other types are inconvenienced by a wind of from 50 to 55 feet a second, Le Caquot can remain in the air unless the wind exceeds 65 to 75 feet per second.

It takes 50 experienced men to maneuver it, for as soon as it leaves the shed great attention must be paid to the wind currents, so as to save the envelope from being torn. Attached to the balloon is a wicker car, in which the observer is installed with his maps, charts, arms, barometers, and telephone, the latter fixed over his ears so as to leave his hands free. He is also provided with glass and a white silk parachute for an emergency.

When the balloon attains an altitude of from 2,000 feet to 3,000 feet the windlass to which the cable is fixed is drawn by horses or motor car at a moderate pace to a point near the enemy lines, where a refuge excavated in the soil has been prepared. This accomplished, the observer transmits his instruction by telephone.

Two anti-aircraft posts are established nearby to keep off enemy airplanes. If the balloon is menaced the crew bring it down from 5,000 feet in seven to ten minutes.

FINDS BULLETS IN THE BODY

Electro Magnet, Proves of Value in Canadian Hospitals Along the Lines of Battle.

A sound "very much like the whistle of a steamboat" in a stethoscope placed on the patient's skin is the manner in which an electro magnet tells the position of a bullet in a wounded soldier's body, according to Surgeon General Fotheringham of the Canadian army medical service.

The new magnet has been found to be of great value in a large number of the Canadian hospitals in the battle zones, as with it the exact location of any electro magnetic substance, including the German bullet, can be determined. An easily discernible vibration is set up by the magnet when the bullet is not deep-seated.

In cases of deeply imbedded bullets the electro magnet is placed on one side of the patient's body and a stethoscope is moved about on the side opposite the magnet. The nearest point to the foreign body is indicated by the "steamboat whistle" and the skin is marked at that point. The operation for extracting the bullet follows.

Roman Glass Makers.

Rome is supposed to have entered upon glass making only some 300 or 400 years before the Christian era. She brought it into the empire along with her other conquests. Alexander Severus, 220 B. C., levied a tax upon its manufacture within the imperial city, and in the reign of Tiberius the glass makers had an entire street to themselves in the Porta Capena.

Have you considered that perhaps RIGHT NOW you can buy a Ford car for less money than you will be able to for some years to come?

If you contemplate buying a car THIS YEAR, you would be well advised to do so without delay.

Even if you do not want a Car until next year, it might pay you to buy RIGHT NOW.

The prohibition of Foreign cars to Canada will undoubtedly cause an unprecedented shortage and increase in price.

In addition, there is daily expected an Excise Tax of 10 p. c. on all unsold cars.

City Will Pay For Mitts, Caps, Socks And Rope Obtained From Merchants During Neill Fire

The bills for mitts, caps, socks, rope, etc, handed out by merchants on the morning of the Neill fire will be paid by the city, according to a resolution reluctantly passed by the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night. Enquiries made by Mayor Duncan and Alderman Dobbin failed to disclose who got the majority of the mitts. The police accounted for nine pairs bought from T. C. Elliott at forty cents a pair, but the persons who received forty-six pairs at ninety-nine cents each, and eight pairs at fifty-five cents each, are unknown.

Mr. Elliott informed the investigators that Detective Newhall and P. C. Deannard had ordered the nine pairs, and Alderman Dobbin expressed the opinion that when the public learned of this "handout," they filed in for their share, Mr. Elliott assuming that the larger orders had been duly authorized. His bill totalled $53.54.

D. H. Hickey gave a pair of socks each to P. C. Deannard, P. C. Lawrence and Detective Meagher. Two other pairs were simply marked as missing.

Mr. E. Hurtubise got three caps from Merrell and Meredith for the Lindsay firemen whose helmets, it was said, were frozen to their heads.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre moved, seconded by Alderman Jones, that the bills be paid by the city. The merchants, they contended, should not be held responsible, having furnished the articles in good faith.

Mayor Duncan stated that they must know in future that such orders must be signed by the Fire Chief, the Mayor or some other city official. Similar instructions will be forwarded to the police.

The mystery of that morning, Alderman Dobbin remarked, centred in the fact that 128 pairs of mitts were obtained, mostly by persons unknown, and there were only twenty-two men on the Fire Chief's pay list.

Death Of A Well Known Peterboro' Man

Mr. George Albert Reid Passed Away in Vancouver

The death took place at the family residence, Tenth avenue, Vancouver, April 8th, 1918 aged 60.

Mr. Reid had been suffering more or less for the past year with heart trouble; while his death was looked for it came as an unexpected shock at the last.

Mr. Reid was born in Clark township, Ontario, in 1857. Later he married Miss Marie Welch of the same place in 1884. Taking up residence in Smith township, County of Peterborough, he was a successful farmer for twenty-two years, after which time he retired from farm life, and moved to Peterborough with his wife and three daughters, where he lived for several years. In Peterborough he was employed by the Davies Thompson Insurance Company and was a member of the Charlotte street Methodist church, where he was an ardent worker.

In the spring of 1910, Mr. Reid journeyed to Vancouver, B.C., with his wife and three daughters, where he entered the employ of the R. V. Winch & Co., Ltd., with which firm he was connected up to the time of his death. Mr. and Mrs. Reid were members of the Mount Pleasant Methodist church, where they made many friends.

Mr. Reid leaves to mourn his loss a wife and three daughters— Mrs. Hamilton of Vancouver, B.C.; Mrs. Wing of Montreal, Quebec, who was visiting her parents at the time of her father's death; Miss Florence Reid at home; a sister, Mrs. W. J. Owens of Newtonville, Ontario, and a brother, J. J. Reid of Port Hope, Ontario.

The funeral took place from the family residence, Wednesday afternoon, April the 10th. Rev. Doctor Sipprell officiated and gave a very helpful and impressive service. The quantities of beautiful flowers covering the casket were tokens of the high esteem in which Mr. Reid was held. The pallbearers were: Henry Stewart, James McIlmoyle, Mr. Allan, Mr. Ford, William Cox, Andrew N. Cameron, all of Peterborough, Ont.

The many friends of Mr. Reid both in the east and the west, will be sorry to hear of his demise.

City To Advertise For Purchase Of Hardwood Supply

The city has one hundred cords of hardwood piled in its fuel yard, which it will offer to the public in a few days, Alderman Dobbin informed the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night. He also said that a citizen was bringing in 1,000 cords, and with the supplies the other dealers are expected to furnish for their customers, it is thought that the local demand is being gradually provided for. However, to augment these resources, the Fuel Committee was authorized last night to advertise for the purchase of additional quantities if they are available in this district. It was believed that in the north country there might be wood already cut, that might be brought into the city by water.

Alderman Dobbin, in a little soliloquy, remarked that if the dealers failed to import adequate supplies of wood, it might then be too late for the city to get busy. On the other hand if the Fuel Committee became an energetic competitor it might force the price up, and the last condition would be worse than the first. "Again," the chairman mused, "we have to make an effort to get wood, first in the hope that we may get it, and second to show the people that we have tried to get it. We must save our faces."

That is one phase of the psychology of the Fuel Committee, and on the whole the problem is not an easy one.

An offer for first quality hardwood was thrown in the waste basket for the reason that the price of the wood when delivered to consumers here would cost $14.85 a cord.

"Never," exclaimed Alderman Saunders, and that tender walked the plank.

The long hardwood stored in the city's yard will retail at $12.00 a cord, and some that has been cut will be a trifle higher.

The committee decided that the safest plan was to anticipate a shortage by getting wood if possible. Hence the advertisements in the papers, not confined to Peterborough.

Alderman Dobbin stated that a shipment received from J. E. Erwin of Sharbot Lake had not been entirely satisfactory. He came to Peterborough and agreed to a penalty of two cords in one car, reducing the quantity to be paid for from sixteen to fourteen cords. Another car was cut down from seventen to sixteen cords. The reason for this action was a too liberal dilution of small limbs in what was purchased as "body harwood." Mr. Erwin will ship several more cars of first-class wood, and apparently that is the only delivery the city has in sight for the present.

POWER COMPANIES TO FORM MERGER

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE HELD THIS AFTERNOON.

(Special to The Examiner.)

Albany, N. Y., April 24.—An important conference over the Niagara Falls waterpower, was held by the Public Service Commission of the Second District this afternoon. C. E. Hill, president, and all of the other commissioners, were present.

Two Senate bills authorize the consolidation of the three power companies of Niagara Falls and permit their successor to efficiently utilize any power from the Niagara district.

ARE IN FAVOR.

It is understood the Washington authorities are in favour of the merger of the power companies if it is not against the public policy. The discussion this afternoon was over the proposed consolidation, operation and capitalization, and the powers of the Public Service Commission under the bills passed and now before the Governor awaiting his approval.

The Irish Customs Question.

(Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

For all economic purposes England and Ireland are one. There is no more reason why Ireland should have a separate tariff law than that Scotland or Wales should have one. Home rule in Irish affairs is desirable for many reasons. But the customs question is not a local one. A home rule scheme which left in Ireland the right to have separate customs laws would hardly be consistent with the principle of imperial unity.

A DEGREE FOR REV. R. G. PEEVER.

LONDON, April 24.—The degree of doctor of divinity will be conferred upon Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., pastor of the First Methodist Chuch, this city, at the convocation exercises of Wesley Mehodist College this evening. Mr. Peever, who is a graduate of Wesley College, has recently completed his examinations for the degree of Doctor of Divinity, though it was only to-day that notification came from Montreal that he had passed with the standing to make him eligible for the degree. He went down to Guelph early yesterday morning, before the letter from Principal Smythe of Wesley College arrived, and Mrs. Peever has been trying to get in touch with her husband to give him the news. He will, if possible, leave for Montreal to reach there in time for the convocation exercises.

Mr. Peever, who was born at Renfrew, Ontario, and received his education there and in Montreal, has held a number of important charges in Quebec and Ontario. He came to London last July from George Street Methodist Church, Peterboro, and previous to that was stationed at the McLeod Street Church, Ottawa.

Put Up the Flags.

(Kingston Standard.)

Therefore, with courage and with confidence will the flags be put up in these April days. They will carry the conviction to our hearts that the men of the Empire have still the same unconquerable spirit which kept the flag of Liberty unvanquished. And in our thoughts we must bear those brave allies who are helping us. They have the same great spirit which says "We must be free or die." The great fact that these flags will impress upon us all with certainty is that "It is not to be thought of that the Flood of British Freedom should perish, and be lost forever."

GRAIN MARKET

A let up in the export demand for spot oats, and uniformly bearish crop news from all quarters yesterday, resulted in a general weakening in the tone of the market. Winnipeg went off 3-4c on the May and July options, spot quotations at Fort William following suit to the same amount. Barley and rye are not in great demand just now, but buckwheat is strong and in good demand for export to New York and Boston. "Price Current" in its crop news to-day reports that seeding of all small grain crops has been completed under most favourable conditions.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts 64 cars, with 714 cattle, 765 calves, 1,899 hogs and 16 sheep and lambs.

Yesterday's market was probably the strongest on record for Toronto, or for the whole Dominion of Canada. A comparatively light run of cattle offering met an unprecedented demand, with the result that prices scored some of the highest advances yet made in this season of high records. A few choice picked heavy steers sold up to $15, while more straight loads of choice butcher steers and heifers, in proportion to the receipts, sold at prices around anywhere from $12 to $13.50. Choice selected cows sold as high as $12.25. Everything was high in proportion. The average advance would be a good 25c over Tuesday, making 50c or over as the average advance for the week.

Hogs advanced 25c over Tuesday, at $20 on fed and watered.

Government Will Not Probe Activities Of Bolo Pasha

Government Not Aware $170,068 Was Transferred From His Account—M. S. A. Regulations Fully Explained

NEWS FROM THE HOUSES

OTTAWA, April 25.—Hon. Mr. Murphy in the House yesterday afternoon asked if the Government was aware that in a report from Perley, Morse & Co. of New York to the attorney-general of New York State it was disclosed that Bolo Pasha had transferred the sum of $170,068 from his account in the Royal Bank of Canada to J. P. Morgan and Company. Mr. Murphy asked further if the Government had taken any steps to investigate the dealings of Bolo Pasha in Canada.

To each of the questions, Hon. Mr. Rowell replied "No."

Mr. Baldwin asked if at the time the Government took over the Ross Rifle factory, the British Government had stated that it was in a position to manufacture all the Lee-Enfields needed.

Major-General Mewburn; "The British Government had, at the time of the taking over of the Ross Rifle factory stated that it was in a position to supply Canadian troops with the necessary rifle."

NO DISCUSSION ON PROHIBITION.

Mr. Casgrain questioned if prior to the general election last December the president of the Privy Council, Hon. N. W. Rowell, had an interview with Rev. Dr. Chown, Rev. Dr. Shearer and Rev. Ben. Spence, regarding the question of temperance or Dominion-wide prohibition.

Hon. Mr. Rowell—"No."

Before the orders of the day were called Dr. J. E. Fontaine, Hull, referred to the shooting of a man in that city by a member of the military police enforcing the Military Service Act. He asked what information the Government had about the shooting.

Sir Robert Borden replied that the Minister of Justice would probably be in a position to make a statement with regard to that matter to-morrow.

J. A. Robb, Chateauguay Huntingdon, asked the Government whether under the new Military Service regulations the only son of a widowed mother, who was engaged in agricultural pursuits, would be forced to report for service.

Premier Borden replied that this matter had been discussed with the Minister of Militia and that the latter would probably have a statement to make later on.

EXPLAIN M.S.A. REGULATIONS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that the Minister of Militia would confer a favour if he would explain clearly the meaning of all the new regulations under the Military Service Act. Premier Borden agreed that it might be advisable to have a full explanation by the Minister of Miltia and a discussion of the regulations.

Jacques Bureau asked the Minister of Militia whether men coming into medical Category D would be required to report for service.

General Mewburn explained that registrars would be instructed to notify men who were physically fit. What was wanted was men who had been passed by the Medical Boards. Those who had not passed would not be required to report, and there was no intention of disturbing them at present.

Third reading was given to the $500,000 war appropriation bill.

Rapid headway was then made with Government bills. Third reading was given to the bill to encourage the organization and co-ordination of employment offices, and to the bill to amend the Indian Act. The Act to amend the Companies Act, was then given second reading and reported from committee.

Light Best Suited to Eyes.

Recent investigations into the kind of light best suited to the eyes have important practical significance. The studies were made from the point of view of "contrast" to determine the ideal contrast between the object looked at and the surrounding background. It was found that the usual contrast in brightness between objects out of doors rarely exceeds the ratio of 1 to 20. The eye can detect contrasts as delicate as 98 to 100. Indoors, contrast in light and shadow often runs as high as 1 to 200, and a dark window frame against a bright sky presents a contrast of 1 to 10,000. The scale of contrasts best suited to the eye lies btween 1 to 20 and 1 to 100

Epworth League Notes.

The service Monday evening, which included a talk by Rev. H. Clare, of Cavan, on a" A boy's right relationship to his Sunday school" was full of interest and helpfulness, and was calculated to impress on all present the importance of the period of preparation in life, during years from 12 to 20. What the life of achievement shall be depends largely on the choices made during this period.

Mr. Byam and Miss May Byam further impressed the matter of decision by singing a duet "Jesus and shall it ever be, a mortal man ashamed of Thee."

Next Monday is the annual meeting for the reception of reports from the various departments and the election of officers for the coming year. As the success of the services for the coming year hinges largely, from a human standpoint, on the kind of leaders chosen.

Pathé
The Simple "Why" of Pathe Superiority

SOME articles achieve fame by their intrinsic merit as viewed by the public. Others by the puff and blow of their producers. The Pathephone success is as simple as it is sure. It is due to its being an improvement upon anything which has come before it or since.

The original Pathe' Freres took the old-time talking machine and developed it until it is now the supreme achievement. Note these improvements: Instead of the old, scratchy, ever-changing steel needles—a genuine polished sapphire ball. Instead of a metal sound chamber—an all-wood one (on the violin principle). Instead of recording in narrow sound waves—a unique Pathe' method with long broad sound waves, more contact, more tone, richer music. Instead of "varnished boxes"—handsome cabinets—in historic period designs. Instead of playing only one or two kinds of records—the Pathephone will play all makes of records.

Make Your Own Fat Compound.

Many folks object to paying the present high price for lard, but realize that with the price of hogs and with the probable future demand it is unlikely that the price will be reduced soon. It becomes important, then, to find a cheap or satisfactory substitute. Dr. Louise Stanley of the Missouri college of agriculture, suggests that housewives consider suet as a source of cheap fat. Suet has not been as extensively used as lard on account of its harder consistency. It can be obtained at about 9 cents a pound. From this can be obtained 14 ounces of pure fat at a cost of 12 cents a pound. In order to bring this to the consistency of lard it is only necessary to add oil in the proportion of one of oil to two parts of suet. This gives a compound fat which is very satisfactory for general household use. Cottonseed oil or corn oil can now be obtained at about 21 cents a pound. On the basis of the above proportions a satisfactory lard substitute can be had at a cost of 15 cents a pound.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS.

A CONTRETEMPS

CHAPTER I.

While for months I had questioned George's neglect — had resented his apparent willingness to leave me alone—I never had really considered the possibility that there might be another woman in his life, someone for whom he was neglecting me. But now I had a little scene in my heart whenever I thought of the "bunch," those women who had been his intimates before he ever heard of me, and whom he held up as a pattern for me to copy.

Mrs. Sexton had telephoned to find how the dinner had gone, and had appeared delighted when I explained that everything had been perfect.

"I am sure it was," she said with just the proper amount of enthusiasm. The amount I never, under any circumstances, could manage to inject into anything I said.

Evelyn and I had gone down-town to get the frames for our place cards. We were laughing and chatting as we walked along, when Merton Gray joined us, and, three abreast, we continued on our way first telling him what we were going to do and enlisting his interest.

We had gone but a little way when we ran into Mr. Carpenter. He immediately asked if he might join us, and, without thinking, I gave assent.

He then walked with Evelyn, and Merton Gray and I trailed along behind them. We had gone but a little way when we met Julia Collins.

"The town gossip!" Mr. Carpenter said, over his shoulder as she passed. "We are in for it now."

Innocent But—Indiscreet.

"In for what?" I asked.

"Why, it will be all over Moreland that two charming young matrons were out with two old men about town."

"Speak for yourself, Carpenter!" Merton said, an angry scowl on his face. "It is careless in us to expose the ladies in unkind comment. Come! let's go the other way, you and I. If I mistake not, we'll meet Mrs. Collins again, and then she will have nothing to tell."

"Oh, but we wanted you to help us select"—

"Sh—!" he said, as he looked significantly at Mr. Carpenter. "I'm sorry, but I better not. He would trail along too and where three is, and looks innocent, often four does not. Trust me, it is better," he finished as I looked my dissent.

Grumbling, Mr. Carpenter allowed himself to be turned the other way, and Evelyn and I went on alone.

"Oh, dear, Evelyn! I never shall be able to understand the right and wrong of things. They do lots of things here which none of us at home every thought of doing, and think nothing of it. Then when I am doing some perfectly innocent thing like walking along quietly with some one I know, it is all wrong. I declare, sometimes I think one might as well be bad as good."

"I do too Helen. Why they should expect us to be prim and precise about one thing, and give us the greatest license in so many others, I can't understand. You can't imagine how discouraged I used to get, before I knew you. I felt so alone."

Mr. Gray is Thoughtful.

"I feel that way almost all the time, Evelyn. I know I shouldn't have been able to endure a lot of things if it hadn't been for you. And really I don't think, you could have been as lonely as I was. You see Kurts' friends are all young and jolly, like the Lawson girls and Peter Rivers and his wife; while George's friends are so different. So much older and—wiser in a way."

"Wasn't Merton Gray thoughtful; I think he is half in love with you, Helen. Think of him, turning back for fear that cat of a Collins woman would say something about us. It was dear of him."

"I have an idea it wasn't exactly on account of Mrs. Collins, either. I think Mr. Carpenter had something to do with it."

"What do you mean?"

"Nothing particular, but the day he came to the table when I lunched with George I didn't think he, George was pleased, and again, when Mrs. Sexton and I were lunching and he came and sat down with us, she didn't act as if she enjoyed having him. I may have been mistaken, of course. But isn't he—well—rather gay?"

"Oh, yes. That's no secret. I was wondering how you met him. Kurts knows him well (they occasionally have business relations) so I have known him slightly, ever since we were married. But I know that neither Kurts or his people approve of him. I guess he is too free and easy to suit them."

"Oh, well, we can select our frames without them, I guess," I said as we went into the shop. But before we had come to any decision I heard someone say:

"You must be very hard to suit. I had really no hope I should find you," and Merton Gray stood smiling at me.

To-morrow—A Dangerous Compliment.

A Mother's Endorsement

"With the children Nujol has done wonders"

Mothers! Assure the lasting, robust health of your children—health founded on regular bowel habits—by relieving their constipation with Nujol, the safe, effective remedy recommended in the following letters:—

Dixondale, Va., Jan. 1, 1917.

NUJOL LABORATORIES,
STANDARD OIL CO. (New Jersey),
BAYONNE, N. J.

Dear Sirs:—

I have given Nujol to my two year old daughter with very beneficial effect. She had always been constipated, and I think the regular use of Nujol was what cured her and caused her to form regular habits.

Very sincerely,
SELINA L. (MRS. N. S.) HOPKINS.

Now read this extract from a mother in Winslow, Arizona:

"With the children Nujol has done wonders. A dose or two when they begin to fret results in their being as bright and happy as possible the day following."

Regular as Clockwork

EVERY mother knows how insidiously constipation saps vitality. The moment your children's bowels fail to act, their bodies become easy prey to many serious ailments. By all means keep their bowels—and your own—naturally regular by the use of Nujol—the pure, safe, drugless remedy which cannot harm the smallest child, and which thousands now use instead of harmful pills and physics. Remember that repeated dosing with strong laxative drugs dangerously weakens the natural bowel-vitality.

Nujol relieves gently and thoroughly, without stimulation, griping or injurious reaction. Nujol is palatable, healing and reliable. Be "regular as clockwork"—use Nujol.

ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS

There are no substitutes—there is only Nujol.

Inventor of Lewis Gun

Gave Weapon to British When Snubbed in America

WHEN the late Sir Hiram Maxim showed his gun to the Kaiser, that astute monarch patted its barrel, and said, 'That's the gun!" And that gun is not superseded to-day.

But for trench work, for aeroplanes, if you ask our boys, they have but one name to say—"Lewis"—that wonderful little machine-gun, manageable by one man, light, efficient, dependable.

Like the Maxim, it is the invention of an American, Col. Isaac N. Lewis. Englishmen are apt to think that an invention has at least a double chance of success in the States, yet both the Maxim and the Lewis guns were taken up by the British, and it seems a providential circumstance, considering what an asset the Lewis gun has been to our men in the trenches and tanks, and in the air, that British capital came to Col. Lewis' aid only some 12 months before the war broke out.

After detailing his failure to give his gun to the American Government, the colonel told the U.S.A. military affairs committee:

"I went over to Brussels in 1912, but I soon found that my Belgian company was in the hands of the Germans. My president and managing-director were both under German influence. My company was about to pass under German control. I succeeded, by the help of my loyal Belgian associates, in ousting our president and managing-director.

"I went to London," he continued, "to the Birmingham Small Arms Co. I did not know anybody connected with the company, but I made an appointment to go there with the gun. In forty-eight hours I had closed a contract for the exclusive manufacture of the Lewis gun in Europe. We are working under that contract to-day. They are delivering guns every week to the British forces."

In writing to the Secretary of War at Washington, under date Dec. 11, 1917, the colonel has some very interesting information to give. He says:

"The Lewis gun is no longer a new and untried weapon. It has successfully met every military requirement, under a grilling test of more than three years of daily service on the battlefields of Europe during the greatest war in history."

The colonel's story of how his own Government turned his gun down is remarkable:

"As early as 1911, when the first model of the Lewis gun was built, I took it myself to Washington and presented it in person to the chief of the staff, requesting him to examine it."

He goes on to tell how his offer was ignored again and again, how, when he wrote as lately as December, 1913, to the Secretary of War, renewing his offer, and asserting his willingness to relinquish royalties aggregating two and a quarter million dollars on forty thousand guns already under contract for the Government, no reply was vouchsafed. Asked why he wished to make these great sacrifices, Col. Lewis said:

"I got my education at the Government expense. I developed my gun under very discouraging circumstances. I was a poor man with a large family. But there is a deeper question, a far deeper question. This country is facing the struggle of its life. Are we to be a vassal nation or a sovereign nation? That is in the balance to-day."

HOW TO USE COAL PROPERLY

House Should Not Be Allowed to Become So Warm That Doors and Windows Are Opened.

If you want to save coal never allow the house to get so hot that you have to throw open the windows and doors. Thermostats are cheap these days. They automatically slow down the fire when the temperature is rising to the uncomfortable point.

To get the most out of the heat in coal, the house air should be changed once an hour. Arrangements for such a change should have been made when the house was built. But if that was overlooked when the house was built you can get the change of air in several ways, says a writer in the American Magazine. I do not believe in getting this result by having loose windows, as we used to do on the farm. I prefer tight windows, carefully weather-stripped. If that has not been arranged for, or if the cost is too great, I find that storm windows are relatively cheap. Then, air slots which let in air when you want it are good.

An Actor's Wish.

George Ade, on his return from a visit to Camp Mills at Mineola, brought a story back home, says the Indianapolis News. While in New York city Mr. Ade dropped in at the Lambs club, where a lot of actors past war age were sitting around talking about the trenches. Everybody was anxious to fight, but all said they were too old. One of the company said he regretted greatly that he was not eligible, but he hoped that he might do his bit in some way on this side. He said: "I would even be willing to go to France on the next transport if I could get the kind of war job I have in mind."

"What's that?" asked another actor.

"Well," replied the would-be warrior, "I should like to go to the front as the chauffeur for a general with a yellow streak."

SAYS CANNERS WERE BUSY

President Peck of National Food Commission Asserts American Women Do Not Waste Food.

Charles Lathrop Peck, president of the National Emergency Food commission, said at a dinner in Washington that the women of America have canned 500,000,000 jars of fruit and vegetables.

"They who charge the American woman of today with food waste," he said, "are as ignorant as the huckster was."

"A huckster said to his mate:

"'Gee, Bill, you look down in the mouth!'

"'Ain't I got cause to look down in the mouth?' said Bill. 'Everything's gone wrong with me lately. First, an automobile runs into and kills my hoss. Naturally, I try to comfort myself with a few beers, and get pinched for drunk and disorderly. They gimme a week, and when I get back home I find my wife's gone off to her mother's with peritonitis.'

"'What?' said the other huckster. 'What? That Dago ice cream juggler down Biddle alley? Poor old Bill!'"

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

STOLEN TREASURES OF ART

Germany Will Hold Rare Collections Taken From France and Belgium Unless Peace Terms Interfere.

Will one of the peace conditions involve a return to Belgian and French art treasures removed by the Germans since 1914 from the occupied territories? asks the New York Evening Post.

Until the present war's outbreak, everyone has supposed the custom of nations changed since Napoleon's time, so that it would no longer be possible for a conqueror to fill his museums with plunder. That supposition, like so many others, seems to have been given the lie by the kaiser, whose agents are said to have emptied the Antwerp and Brussels museums for the benefit of Berlin. Even the emperor's grandfather, in the war of 1870, took practically no toll of Paris art treasures.

Malice has ascribed this moderation to the lack, in that Spartan generation, of appreciation for art, which led those earlier invaders to confine their activities, for the most part, to ormolu clocks and silver services. The modern Prussian, however, from the crown prince down, has become a dilettante, an art connoisseur. Hence the very thought of cleanup made of art objects. Berlin, willy nilly, is to be made a world art center. If tourists prefer Paris because of its greater natural charm, they will, in any event, be forced to visit the Prussian capital in order to see Rubens "Descent From the Cross."

A monopoly of the world's potash supply, and a collection of stolen art, is to keep the world at Germany's mercy—unless the terms of peace provide otherwise.

True Gospel of Work.

Work is the glory and delight of life, and the only acceptable excuse for being in this world, and the object of all practical investigations of the principle of fatigue and recovery is to find out, not what is the least possible amount of work that a human being can get along on, but what is the greatest amount that he can do without decreasing his working capacity. Such is the gospel of work, which those who are not of the elect may regard as hard doctrine.

Reached His Capacity.

The first floor of the home was reached at the rear by climbing a flight of stairs. One evening the family came from town with a good many parcels, which the father, mother and son, Eugene, proceeded to carry into the house. Eugene going up the steps first. As they neared the top step the father said, forgetting momentarily that the youngster's arms were full, too, "Open the screen door, son," to which the youngster replied: "I can't papa, I'm all used."

Plume Hunters.

Florida once upon a time was alive with wild birds, says the Florida Times Union. According to William T. Honaday, author of American Natural History, no other state in America, except possibly California, ever possessed a bird fauna quite comparable with Florida. Florida bird life was one of the wonders of America. But the gunners began to shoot and shoot.

The plume hunters have practically exterminated the roseate spoonbill, the flamingo, the scarlet ibis, and the Carolina parrakeet, and the limpkin and ivory-billed woodpecker have about disappeared, largely in the interest of the millinery business to ornament fashionable hats. The robin and other song and insect-destroying birds are fast going. Unless a stand is taken by well enforced laws the noble bird life of the state will eventually disappear and the multiplicity of insects must imperil or destroy agricultural interests.

Suffered Great Agony FROM PAIN IN STOMACH FOR OVER 5 YEARS

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arises from disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, bilious spells, headaches, sour stomach, coated tongue, sallow or muddy complexion, specks floating before the eyes, you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and note the change.

Miss Ida Hogan, Dunrobin, Ont., writes: "For over five years I have suffered great agony from pains in the stomach. I tried several remedies but got no relief until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I started with two vials and before I had one quite used, I found much relief. I continued until I used four vials, and they have completely cured me. That was fourteen months ago and I have not had the slightest return since. The best praise I could give them is not enough."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Woman Versus Woman

By SADIE OLCOTT

Florence, during the period when the De Medici family flourished, was in many respects a sinkhole of iniquity. It was a common practice to get rid of an enemy by means of poison. The De Medicis derived their name from the fact that the founder of the family was what today would be called a patent medicine exploiter.

This man who established a family lived many years before that family became the most prominent in Italy, giving sovereigns to Europe as well as popes. This story pertains to one Cecelia Del Carpo, whose mother was a De Medici.

One evening a young artist named Ricardo Cenci was strolling on the street in Florence that leads from the cathedral to the Ponte Vecchio, an ancient bridge that crosses the River Arno. As he entered upon the bridge he met Cecelia face to face. Ricardo was as handsome as Cecelia was beautiful.

Ricardo was betrothed to Lucrecia Marini, as lovely a girl as there was in Florence. He did not notice Cecelia as he passed her, for he was going at the time to visit Lucrecia and was thinking of her alone. Cecelia inquired of a friend who was with her who Ricardo was and learned not only that he was a promising artist but also where his studio was.

The next day Cecelia appeared at Ricardo's studio and offered him a large price to paint her portrait. Ricardo declined because he was expecting an order to do some mural painting in St. Peter's at Rome. But Cecelia begged so hard, saying he could do her work at such times as he chose, that he yielded.

Cecelia, who had great influence at Rome, wrote to a relative there to delay the order for the mural painting and her object was accomplished. She came every day to Ricardo's studio and applied all her arts to win him. Sometimes she would appear gentle and innocent as a dove. Sometimes she would appeal to him through his art. Sometimes she would attempt to master him by dominating his will, and he resolved to foil her by marrying someone else.

It was not long before Ricardo began to dread her power over him and, fearing that he might wrong his betrothed, proposed to Lucrecia that they should be married. Lucrecia, who had learned of the situation, assented and they went to a priest and were united without the banns being published and without witnesses.

The day Cecelia's portrait was finished Ricardo announced to her that he had been married. She flew into a rage that caused the artist to fear her more than ever, but in a different way. She left the studio in this mood, but presently returned in a different one. She said that it was only selfish of her to berate him for loving another, and since she could not possess him she would claim him for her friend. She hoped also to make a friend of his wife.

Ricardo was partly convinced by these professions and asked her to call on the woman who had vanquished her. He did not think it worth while to put Lucrecia on her guard, for he did not see any wrong that Cecelia could injure her and he did not wish to further incur the latter's enmity. The two women met and, on the surface at least, were so friendly that Ricardo believed there was no rancor between them.

Cecelia invited them to sup with her in her palazzio, as they call fine dwellings in Italy. Lucrecia did not wish to accept the invitation, but her husband desired to avoid offending their would-be hostess and persuaded her to do so.

At the appointed time Ricardo and his wife repaired to Cecelia's palazzio and were received by the hostess in the most friendly manner. Ricardo was deceived. The only sensible thing he did after meeting the woman who was bent on bewitching him was to acknowledge to himself that she would succeed. But now he was acting very stupidly.

Lucrecia, being a woman matched against a woman, was on her guard. She pretended to have taken a desperate fancy to Cecelia and hoped that they might always be friends, but all the while during the dinner, if Cecelia forced upon her any dainty she declined it on the ground that it would not agree with her. She would drink no wine because there was gout in her family.

Finally Cecelia offered her a little dish of confections, saying: "Surely one of these will not hurt you?" Lucrecia took one of the sweets, saying that she loved something of the kind before going to bed. She would eat it at that time.

Cecelia turned pale, but she did not oppose her guest. Soon after this all arose from the table and, after a brief sitting together at a window overlooking the Arno, whose banks were beautifully lighted, Ricardo and his wife went to their home.

The next morning Cecelia's palazzio was closed and Cecelia was not in Florence. She had fled. Lucrecia gave the bonbon she was to have eaten before going to bed to a cat and in a few minutes the animal was dead.

In this war of wits between two women Lucrecia had won by securing the evidence that her enemy was trying to poison her. Cecelia never returned to Florence.

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH BRONCHITIS
Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup GAVE INSTANT RELIEF

Bronchitis is a disease which is very prevalent during the late winter and early spring, when there are sudden atmospheric changes. It is a condition of inflammation of the bronchial tubes which produces mucous or phlegm. This irritates the throat and causes you to cough in order to get rid of it. The cough may be tight or loose according as to whether this mucous is sticky and hard to remove, or soft and easily expelled.

Bronchitis is not really dangerous but the complications which are liable to follow makes it necessary to get rid of it at the first sign. This you can do by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for over 25 years

John D. McFarlane, Jr., S.W. Margaree, N.S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I found gave me instant relief. It is the best remedy for bronchitis I know of, and I now take care that I always have a bottle of it on hand."

See that you get "Dr. Wood's." Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c.; manufactured by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NO NEW COAT FOR BINDLE

Moths Play Leading Role in Seasonable Tragedy, All in Favor of the Lucky Wifey.

"I wonder whether I must wear that last winter's coat again this season," mused Bindle as he dragged the trunk out of the closet and into the light of day.

"I am afraid you will!" exclaimed Mrs. Bindle. "That's a perfectly good coat. I don't remember seeing you in one that looked nicer on you. It always had such stylish lines. It made you look so boyish, don't you know!"

"No, I don't know," replied Bindle sadly. "I had my eye on one of those new fashioned military effects—with the belt attached and all that."

"Why, my dear!" said Mrs. Bindle, "a man in civil life has no excuse for trying to look like a drum major. If he wants a military cut, there is just one place to do it."

"I get you!" said Bindle. "And if I have to wear that last year's overcoat again, I'd just as soon join the army—a whole lot sooner."

Bindle raised the lid of the trunk and fell back in astonishment.

"Look! Wife, come quick!" he shouted. "Ah, here is some of your efficiency for you. Gaze downward at this thriving moth village in our little trunk of winter things. How did this happen?"

"Don't know. Can't see how a moth got in—the trunk was locked."

"One of 'em had a key, I suppose," said Bindle. "Didn't I tell you last fall to put some tobacco in the trunk for the moths?"

"Yes, dear, but I wasn't sure of the kind of tobacco they liked. You didn't say whether smoking or chewing."

"There you are," said Bindle, bringing forth a near-seal coat of his wife's from the depths. "Your best garment shot full of holes. I figured that coat would last you for the next seven years. That's what you said when you bought it."

"But there is a new style on the market this year! I'm just as well pleased that the moths made merry with this one. I really want a coat of the new aviatrix model."

Each time that Bindle came up for air he brought something else that the moths had feasted on. Mrs. Bindle's two winter suits were peek-a-boos. Her sweater jackets and sport coats were reduced to skeletonized form. The last thing to come out of the ill-fated trunk was Bindle's last winter's overcoat. He held it up—perfect!

"Thank goodness for that!" cried Mrs. Bindle. "I'm so glad it was my things those awful moths ate instead of yours, Meredith. I'll have to get an entire new outfit and you, lucky boy, can wear that coat another season."—Chicago News.

Youngsters Love Soldiers.

The old saying that "all the world loves a lover" might be changed these military days to "every kid loves a soldier," or his uniform, at least. Just watch the little boys and girls as a soldier passes. Those admiring glances would not be bestowed on a "slacker." Here are two cases in point, cites the Indianapolis News:

"I jus' lov ou soders," said three-year-old Charles Ulrich, son of Fred Ulrich, Big Four agent at Shelbyville, as he entwined his arms about the neck or Sergeant Ross Reed, of Greensburg. Reed, with several Decatur county soldiers from Camp Taylor, were on the way to Greensburg, by way of Shelbyville, and the sergeant after buying a ticket had leaned up against the railing of the ticket office when the three-year-old hugged him.

A second illustration occurred when Sergeant Reed reached Greensburg on the way to his parents' home. He was confronted by a tiny soldierly figure that saluted with all the grace and courtesy of a trained soldier. The sergeant exchanged the salute, and then learned the tribute had been paid by six-year-old Henry Jerman, son of Prof. E. J. Jerman, superintendent of Greensburg's city schools.

Glass Eye That Moves.

Capt. J. L. Aymard, a British army surgeon, describes in the Lancet an improved glass eye which can move. The chief drawbacks to the ordinary glass eye are that, being simply a convex shell of glass, it tends to sink back into the socket and is fixed in a stony stare. Captain Aymard gets over these difficulties by placing in the socket of the eye a sphere of living cartilage or gristle taken without risk from the patient's ribs. It is all one operation. While one surgeon removes the destroyed eye, another surgeon removes the pieces of cartilage from near the patient's breastbone. Two pieces are made into a little globe, which is placed in the socket, and the thin outer covering of the eye, the conjunctiva, is sewn over to hold it in place. The ordinary glass eye shell is inserted over this and is prevented from sinking backwards. Some movement of the eye by the wearer is said to be possible.

Sheet-Metal Work Old.

Sheet-metal work is one of the oldest trades known to man. Ancient Egyptians, Babylonians, the Asiatic races and even the American Indians were engaged in this trade.

Left-Handedness.

At least one human being in fifty is left-handed. This is the minimum estimate. Some authorities say four in fifty. W. Franklin Jones declares that 5 per cent of the race are born left-handed, but about three-fourths of these are converted by training into more or less imperfect right-handers. On the other hand, about 1 per cent of the race, though born right-handed, is trained to use the left hand because of accidents to the right.

Agriculture in France.

The French government has undertaken to supply the depleted ranks of the farmers and to give assistance to the amateur farmer by means of a correspondence course, which has been eagerly received. The pupil receives instructions as to a course of reading, the management of a small experimental plot, the carrying out of simple experiments, visits to neighboring farms, etc. The Union of Agricultural Syndicates, which has assumed charge of this work for the government, has appointed a number of "monitors" to supervise the work of pupils. The pupils prepare monthly examination papers and render monthly reports.

To Reduce Airplane Explosions.

Airplanes equipped with machine guns run a certain degree of risk from an explosion caused by the flame at the muzzle of the gun. Hence considerable study has been devoted to obviating this danger, and a young Florentine chemist is said to have recently given a demonstration before an Italian military commission of a new powder invented by him which burns without either flame or smoke and does not flare on detonation.

Tempting Natives to Work.

Tempting natives of British New Guinea to work was a process which was explained during the hearing of a case in London recently. A man who has lived many years there said that he had solved a very difficult labor problem in New Guinea. The men could not be tempted to work for money, and he hit upon the idea of offering them beads, gaudy clothes, dogs' teeth and musical instruments. To get these they worked for a twelvemonth and then induced others to do likewise.

Maize From Venezuela.

As a result of a suggestion from the American consulate, based upon the higher prices for maize in the New York market than in Venezuela, shipments of maize from Venezuela to the United States have been undertaken for the first time on record, and already 80 tons have been sent. If present New York prices hold until the new crop of maize comes in there may be large shipments, as the crop is extraordinarily good.

Overwork Paralysis

Doctors Said His Case Was Hopeless—Could Not Walk or Write—Speech Almost Gone—How Cure Was Effected.

ST. ANN'S, Ont., March 21.— Paralysis is far more easily prevented than cured. For this reason it is only wise to be warned by sleeplessness, headache, nervous indigestion and neuralgic pains and begin reconstruction treatment before the nervous system becomes too far depleted.

This letter from Mr. Hyatt is quoted to prove to you that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is effective even after paralysis has set in. It is not advisable, however, to neglect nervous disorders until such conditions are developed.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, Blacksmith, St. Ann's, Lincoln County, Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade, and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything I would say. Being only a young man, I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Any householder in your neighborhood who has a garden plot, or who owns a piece of suitable vacant land that is not being put under cultivation in order to increase food production, is (though he or she may not believe it) giving aid and comfort to the enemy in restraining food production, as really as is the Submarine Commander who sinks an Allied ship laden with food.

RETURNED SOLDIERS COMPLAIN ABOUT PENSION SYSTEM

Should Not Suffer Because of Inefficiency of Medical Officers, Says Their Representative—Larger Allowances.

OTTAWA, April 25.—Complaints of returned soldiers, regarding the administration of the Board of Pension Commissioners, were aired yesterday before a special committee appointed by the House to enquire into the report of the commissioners.

N. Knight represented the Great War Veterans' Association and intimated that while the returned soldiers believed the Board was endeavouring to carry on its work properly, they had many complaints to make. He thought that pensions should be looked upon in the sense of compensation.

QUESTION OF DISABILITY.

Referring to the question of disabilty, Mr. Knight declared that men who had passed all medical examinations in Canada and England before proceedding to the front, shoul be assumed fit. It happened in many cases that a man, in applying for a pension, was found to have some disease or physical infirmity which the medical board decided prevailed before enlistment. In such a case Mr. Knight maintained that the man had been at the front and it was only fair that it should be assumed his disease or injury resulted from participation in the war.

"The Government appoints the medical board, which examines men prior to enlistment, and if they do not select efficient officers, the soldiers should not suffer," he said.

MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS.

The secretary of the War Veterans then called attention to the medical examinations given soldiers prior to their return to Canada. He pointed out that in his anxiety to return to Canada. He pointed out that in his anxiety to return to his home a soldier might inform the board that he was in good health and so effect his return, although it might be the worst thing possible. This he thought, might be rectified by the soldier being cautioned.

Mr. Knight expressed the opinion that a relative of a sildier who becomes a foster father or mother, should receive the pension ordinarily afforded the parent.

A LARGER ALLOWANCE.

Mr. Kenneth Archibald, the legal adviser to the Board of Pension Comissioners, who was examined earlier in the sitting, suggested that the soldiers' civil re-establishment department in the case of soldiers treated in civil establishments, should pay them an allowance, instead of a pension, until they are discharged. He suggested an allowance slightly larger than the pay and separation allowance, because the patients would not have the benefit of the Patriotic Fund.

THE MAN WHO WINS

Some men seem to have all the luck. If there are any good things going these men seem to get them. They make other people do their will—they are leaders. If they are business men they are successful; if they are workmen they get the foreman's job. They have the power of influencing people.

The same thing is true of women. Some have the charm that makes men seek them out; others are always neglected. But this is not luck—It is due to a personal gift—vitality. Men and women of this sort are never weak, puny individuals. They may not be big, but they are full of life and energy. The whole thing is a matter of good blood, good nerves and good health. Everyone would wish to be like this and the qualities that make for vitality and energy are purely a matter of health. By building up the blood and nerves, sleeplessness, want of energy, weakness of the back, stooping shoulders, headache and the ineffectual sort of presence which really comes from weakness can all be got rid of. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made many weak, tired men, vigorous and healthy, and many pale, dejected girls and women plump, rosy and attractive, by improving their blood and toning up their nerves. If you are weak, ailing, low-spirited, or unhealthy, begin to cure yourself today by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cts a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SULTAN IS FOND OF READING

Turkey's Ruler for Weeks at a Time Shuts Himself in Private Suite, Surrounded With Books.

Although the sultan of Turkey is reputed to be the laziest potentate in Europe, he is passionately fond of reading. For weeks at a time he will shut himself in his private suite, surrounded by literature of all kinds—classical works, novels, magazines and newspapers. With the exception of his personal attendants and ministers of state, no one is allowed in the imperial sanctuary during the sultan's literary "fits."

But the sultan is at something of a disadvantage, says a British weekly, because his knowledge of European languages is limited.

In order to overcome the difficulty he employs a translation office. Here there are officials who speak all the languages of Europe and the East. They read all the political and illustrated newspapers of importance, and translate extracts from them for the sultan. There are 15 superior translators, called dragoman secretaries, in that office, and their pay is from ten to forty Turkish pounds monthly.

They do not limit their translations to political publications; they translate novels and romances in all languages for the Sultan, and many thousand volumes of their work have found their way into the imperial library. They are all written on thick, white, royal, octavo, gilt-edge paper, and are fastened together with green and red ribbons by the translators themselves.

After circulating through the harem they are preserved in the library. The sultan's favorite reading is criminal romances. He subscribes to all newspapers that contain reports of the proceedings in the law courts and there is no famous writer of stories of crime in any language whose works have not been translated for him.

The Real Thing.

It makes a fellow step higher when some big man says of him: "He is the smartest man in this town!" But that is nothing by the side of having a little chap snuggle up to your side and whisper softly, "I like you! You're so good to me!"

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintzman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street.—B. H. Britton, Manager. 'Phone 256.

That the FORD is the only car now selling for less money than before the war?

Have you considered that perhaps RIGHT NOW you can buy a Ford car for less money than you will be able to for some years to come?

If you contemplate buying a car THIS YEAR, you would be well advised to do so without delay.

Even if you do not want a Car until next year, it might pay you to buy RIGHT NOW.

The prohibition of Foreign cars to Canada will undoubtedly cause an unprecedented shortage and increase in price.

In addition, there is daily expected an Excise Tax of 10 p. c. on all unsold cars.

Allies Withstanding Renewed Hun Efforts

Germany Now Holds The Mailed Fist Over Holland

ONCE MORE HUNS SHOW RUTHLESS DISREGARD FOR THE RIGHTS OF NEUTRALS

German Designs on the Netherlands Are of Long Standing --Germany Would Welcome a Chance to Open a Road Through Holland in Order to Get Troops and Supplies to Belgium---Allied Forces Might Have to Be Sent to Holland's Aid.

A DEARTH OF OFFICIAL NEWS

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 25. — Germany is holding the mailed fist over Holland to enforce sanction of supply shipments through that country into Belgium.

In her desperate effort to drive to a decision on the west front, Teuton diplomacy is once more showing its ruthless disregard for the rights of neutrals.

The situation appeared fraught with war possibilities, but there was a strange dearth of official news here concerning developments.

If war comes, Germany will undoubtedly seek to plough through Holland, opening a path to Belgium, which she wants for troops and supplies. Holland's border is well protected by highly trained troops, but it is doubtful that the Dutch could withstand long, any serious attempt at invasion.

It is held certain here that Holland will not agree to Germany's demands unless she is willing to sacrifice her neutrality.

Holland knows that if she throws her lot in with the Germans the Allies are in a position to take virtually all her ships and her colonies.

Position Becomes Gravely Dangerous.

Hence, the little neutral's position becomes gravely dangerous. If the British have succeeded in bottling up the German U-boat outlet at Ostend and Zeebrugge, Germany is forced to take drastic action in Holland or see her submarine campaign utterly fail. German designs on the Netherlands are of long standing. Some years before the war, German influence sought to drive a measure through the Dutch parliament to fortify the mouths of the Schelt, thus affording protection against attack from the sea. This was aimed at Great Britain, and England protested so strongly as to constitute a virtual ultimatum and the bill was defeated.

Military experts here believe that unless Allied forces are sent to Holland's aid, it would require scarcely more than a half million Germans to overrun the little country.

Result Depends on Holland's Determination.

This would depend on Holland's determination, to literally "sink or swim." The scheme of defence of the little neutral embodies concentration of her forces in a restricted area—the "Holland Fortress," comprising the provinces of North and South Holland, with parts of Zeeland and Utrecht. Two-thirds of this area is surrounded by sea. On the land side are strongly established military works, rendered exceedingly difficult of attack by inundations. The German land approaches to the Holland border are hilly. Amesterdam is well fortified and there also are inundation protections which might preclude a successful attack by the Germans.

Control of the inundations has not been entirely in military hands, however, and the fear is expressed here that Germany's long arm of intrigue may have stretched to the point where the flooding of the country to prevent invasion may be jeopardized by German agents.

Summary Of To-day's War News

SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The Associated Press summary to-day says:—British, French and American troops on a twenty mile front in Picardy are withstanding renewed German efforts to reach Amiens. Battling furiously, and with the help of heavy artillery fire, the enemy infantry has gained but little and on most of the fronts his attempts are being repulsed by the Allies.

Apparently the Germans did not resume the offensive with as heavily massed forces as were used in previous battles in Picardy and last week in Flanders. Probably they are counting on the artillery to blast a way for smaller bodies of troops, losses since March 21 in massed assaults having necessitated economy in man power.

Increase in Fighting.

It is not yet clear whether a renewal of the fighting east of Amiens means another desperate attempt to reach that city or whether the Germans are carrying out attacks on a large front in an endeavour to straighten out their line. The German positions from Albert south to Montdidier have several small and dangerous salients in them and the enemy may desire to wipe them out. There has been some increase also in fighting activity in Flanders, especially at the apex of the new enemy salient.

ORANGES TO BE CHEAPER.

The cost of most things that make life worth living these days seems to have a tendency to go skywards. It is, therefore, welcome news to hear that the present high price of oranges is likely to drop within the next two or three weeks. At the present time navel oranges cost from 75c to $1.25 a dozen, while Valencias run from 60c to 90c.

TWENTY ALIENS WERE TARRED AND FEATHERED.

Johnston, Pa., April 25. — Twenty aliens, the majority of them Austrians, were tarred and feathered by residents of Conemaugh, a suburb, when they refused to contribute to a fund being collected to purchase uniforms for home guards. The men, it is said, had refused to purchase Liberty bonds of any of the issues, to join the Red Cross, or to participate in any movement which had patriotism as its incentive.

The tarred and feathered men were paraded through the streets and later were arrested.

AFTER DISLOYALISTS.

Hutchinson, Kas., April 24.—Hand bills printed in black type and signed "night riders" made their appearance today in the eastern part of Barton county where there is a large population of German origin. The posters which were nailed to barns and fences warned "German spies, German sympathizers and slackers" that a visit from the "riders" might be expected.

The Germans Captured the Village of Hangard After Hard Fighting —Heavy Losses Inflicted on the Enemy

PRISONERS TAKEN

Canadian Press:

PARIS, April 25.—The Germans have captured the village of Hangard, on the front south-east of Amiens, the War Office announced to-day. The battle continued with violence through the night in this sector. The French lost Hangard, recaptured it, and finally were again forced out of the town, but are holding the ground immediately around it.

The statement says:

The battle continued with violence around the village of Hangard, on which the Germans concentrated their efforts during the night. French troops resisted valiantly and counter-attacked several times with success. The village was lost, then retaken by the French, and finally remained in the hands of the Germans at a cost of heavy losses. The French are holding the immediate outskirts of Hangard, and the Germans have not been able to debouch from the town, in spite of repeated efforts. On both banks of the Avre the artillery fighting continues with violence. The French made several successful raids, especially west of Lassigny, south of Douoyle Chateau, and in Lorraine. We took a certain number of prisoners. The artillery fighting was very active in the Woevre, in the region of Flurey and Regneville. Elsewhere there is nothing to report.

British Have Made Progress In Counter Attacks

Situation on the Villers Bretonneux Ridge Looks Better This Afternoon

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

With the British Armies in France, April 25. — Desperate fighting boiled on heights east of Amiens throughout the night.

As this is cabled the situation on the Villers-Bretonneux ridge looks better. A British counter attack appears to have made progress, driving the Germans out of Aquenne Wood, west of Villers-Bretonneux. The situation in the town itself is uncertain, being of a touch and go nature.

First reports suggest the British tanks drove the others of the field, since the German infantry, supported by its tanks, has been flung back.

Two British tanks crawled up and dow the lines, mowing the German infantry down in windrows.

PRETTY WEDDING IN LAKEFIELD

LAKEFIELD, April 25.—Yesterday afternoon at one-thirty o'clock a pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John's Church when Miss Mary Tourigny became the bride of David H. Charlton. The bride was given away by Mr. J. W. Ridpath. Miss Hazel Ingam was bridesmaid and Mr. Max. Kidd was groomsman. The bride wore a fawn coloured cloth suit with hat to match, and wore a corsage bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore a navy blue suit and carried pink roses.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. Spencer. Miss Atwood presided at the organ. Carnations were placed on the altar by the Girls' Auxiliary of the church of which the bride was a member.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Charlton motored to Peterborough and will spend a short honeymoon in Toronto.

DEFINITE SCHEME FOR HOME RULE HAS BEEN DELAYED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 25.—A division of views has prevented the Cabinet committee appointed to draft the Home Rule Bill for Ireland from elaborating a definite scheme as speedily as was hoped, the Yorkshire Post says. Certain members of the committee are standing for a recognition of Ulster's position. Meanwhile the Federal plan is being discussed widely. The Unionists generally regard it as desirable in any scheme of Federalism that Ulster should be included as a unit.

Cavalry Appears On The Frontier

Holland Receives a Strong German Note Demanding a Quick Reply —Free Transportation

MAIN DEMAND

Special to The Examiner:

THE HAGUE, April 25.— German cavalry has appeared along the Westphalian border, hitherto guarded only by Landstrum.

A strong German note demanding a quick reply has arrived.

The main demand is for free transportation of materials through Holland to Belgium.)

Westphalian is a Prussian province, extending along the greater part of the Dutch frontier. It contains the Rhine Valley.

Opinion of Dutch Officials.

Holland's 400,000 troops now on the border will answer Germany if the latter tries to force through the transportation of material, is the opinion of Dutch officials here. Although no official information has reached the Dutch Legation here, diplomats see no ulterior motive in Germany's ultimatum.

Military officials point out that Germany, by taking Holland, would add approximately 300 miles of sea coast to her territory and would also give her an advantage of thousands of miles of railway and equipment.

It is the opinion of military officials here that British troops will be sent to Holland in the event of a declaration of war. It is not thought that Germany can afford enough men to combat Holland's forces.

If the Germans would succeed in entering Holland, the Dutch could release their dykes and flood one-third of the land, but this would re-act on Holland and compel her to put her own populace in danger.

No official information has reached the Legation here as to the withdrawal of the Dutch Ministry from Germany.

PRESENTATION TO PTE. H. DRUMMOND

Returned Soldier was Presented with an Address and Gold Watch.

A largely attended meeting was held at the Town Hall, Westwood, on Tuesday evening, the occasion being the presentation of a gold watch and chain to Pte. Harry Drummond, recently returned from the front. The chair was taken by Col. Birdsall, who stated that this was the fifth presentation of its kind made so far. "We who are unable to go to the front ourselves," he said, "wish to show that we appreciate those of our boys who represent us."

Rev. Mr. Irwin gave a very pointed address on Production and Conservation, and stated that very few farmers knew anything about sacrifice so far.

Mr. Jos. Wearing, M. A., of Peterboro, gave a patriotic address, reminding his hearers of the heroic stand taken by the Canadians at the Second Battle of Ypres, and mentioning the particulars of the death of "Scoop" Taylor, while giving a drink of water to a wounded Highlander. Mr. Wearing also reminded the audience that it was St. George's Day, and briefly outlined the reasons for England's greatness.

Several patriotic solos and duets were splendidly rendered by Miss Maisie Armstrong and Miss Eva Fusee of Peterborough and Mr. Comstock of Weston gave a violin solo.

After the presentation, Pte. Drummond thanked those responsible for the gift, and also thanked the ladies for boxes received by him overseas.

A vote of thanks was given to those taking part in the programme, including Mr. Ross Dobbin, who took the Peterboro party down in his car.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

Three Heavy German Attacks Were Repulsed by the British —Heavy Fighting Continues

INTENSE BOMBARDMENT

Canadian Press:

LONDON, April 25.—Three heavy attacks made by the Germans on the British positions east of Amiens have been repulsed, it is announced officially. On the Flanders front late yesterday the Germans attacked the French positions north-east of Bailleul and were repulsed. Early this morning, after an intense bombardment, they renewed their attacks in this sector, and against British positions further east. The British regained ground around Villers Bretonneux by counter-attacks, and took prisoners.

Severe fighting was in progress all night in and around Villers Bretonneux, and still continues. Heavy casualties have been inflicted on the enemy there. On the Bailleul sector the battle is continuing over a wide front.

The statement says:

The fighting yesterday on the whole of the front was most severe, and heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy by artillery, infantry and tanks. North of Villers Bretonneux-St. Quentin road, the enemy three times attacked our positions, and on each occasion was repulsed with loss. During this fighting the enemy made use of a few tanks. Late yesterday evening the enemy also attacked the French positions north-east of Bailleul and were repulsed. Fighting continues in this sector on a wide front. The hostile artillery has been active during the night in the Festubert and Robecq sectors.

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUES.

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, April 25.— Heavy fighting continues on the sector east of Amiens, the Reuter's correspondent at British Army Headquarters reports. The Germans obtained a footing in the Aquenne Wood, west of Villers-Bretonneux, but the British counter-attacked and drove them back to the fringe of the wood. At several points the British have retaken the ground, and their positions have improved considerably. Both British and German tanks are participating in the fighting at Villers-Bretonneux. Two British tanks, the correspondent says, got among a mass of Germans and did great execution. The Germans made a determined effort to rush toward Kemmel Hill yesterday, but without appreciable effect. The French counter-attacked and restored the positions. At two o'clock this morning the Germans put down an intense gas barrage on the Anglo-French front in Flanders, and two hours later deep waves of infantry delivered an assault. The fighting is still in progress.

Maurice Houedry Severely Injured On Italian Front

Maurice Houedry, for a number of years the representative in Peterborough of Houedry and Sons, fancy pea merchants in France, has been severely wounded on the Italian front, where he was fighting with the French army. Writing from Venice on March 30th, to Mr. G. N. Gordon, he gives the following brief information of his experience:

"I cannot resist the desire to send you a card from Venice or Venezia, the beautiful, as I have a chance. I am on my way to France. I am very low, and perhaps will never be able again to use both my lower limbs with energy or thought. My next address will be 45 Rue De La Palestine, Rennes, France."

Evidently, Mr. Houedry was one of the soldiers in the French forces that were sent into Italy to assist the Italians in stopping the Austro-German drive last year. He had many friends in Peterborough, in the old days before the war, and was also known to many farmers in this district from whom the firm of Houedry, Fils et Cie., purchased peas for export to France. His friends here will regret to learn of his injury and hope that it may not be permanent.

Austrian Prince Was Stationed In Montreal At The Outbreak Of War

Left Canada Very Hurriedly Some Months Later—Worked in a Secret Capacity.

PHOTOGRAPH RECOGNIZED

Special to the Examiner.

MONTREAL, April 25. — Prince Von Hosenlohe, Chief of Court to Emperor Charles of Austria Hungary, who was practically "kicked out" of office at Vienna, last week, has been recognized from a photo published of him as a polished and very discreet gentleman, who, in 1914, and probably for some time previously travelled quite a bit about the Dominion, and also back and forward to the United States.

RECOGNIZED PICTURE.

Officials of the Consulate Offices in this city, when shown the picture of the Prince, recognized him at once as "Mr. De Hand," who was in 1914 connected in some secret capacity as an attache of the Austrian Consul-General in Montreal, Hermann Hann Von Hannenheim. He was often met travelling back and forward between Montreal, Ottawa and the West of Canada, and also the United States, conveying probably information and plans from Austrian representatives in these places to the Austrian Consul General in Montreal.

LEFT IN A HURRY.

He left Montreal very hurriedly and secretly in the last months of the year 1914 for Washington, and about one and three-quarters years ago had to get out of the United States when the other Austrian Consuls and their officials were handed their passports.

STEFFENSON LIES DANGEROUSLY ILL AT HERSCHEL ISLAND

FORT YUKON, Alaska, April 25.—Bringing an appeal for a doctor by Vilhajalmar Steffenson, the Arctic explorer, who lies dangerously ill on Herschel Island, a messenger reached here late yesterday after a record-breaking trip from the north. In the message carried by the courier, Steffanson told of being ill fifty days after being stricken with typhoid and pneumonia followed by complications. A Northwest Mounted Policeman and two Eskimos have died of typhoid, while several others are ill, the messenger said.

Allies Detected Hun Operations

Third German Push Met With Stiff Resistance--Villers Bretonneux Is An Important Centre

AVIATION BASE

(United Press Service.)
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, April 25.— Allied airplanes detected the vast, hurried concentrations of the German troops yesterday, enabling the Allies to prepare the stiffest resistance when the third German push was launched.

Villers-Bretonneux, the first German objective (which Haig admits the enemy has captured), was the scene of some of the German's most important manoeuvres in the battles of 1870. Likewise, during the battle of the Somme, it was the aviation centre of France's most brilliant squadrons, including the Lafayette Escadrills.

Important Centre.

Villers-Bretonneux dominates three national roadways, leading out like a fan toward Amiens, Albert, St. Quentin and Roye. Likewise, three railways lead out like a fan toward Amiens Albert, Nesle and Montdidier.

During the original drive against Amiens, the Germans engaged 110 divisions (1,320,000 men) which, coupled with 31 divisions (320,000 men) engaged at Armentieres, leaves the Germans about sixty divisions (720,000 men) not yet engaged in the present offensive.

Count the cups and count the cost. You will find Salada Tea the most economical in the long run.

AN INTERESTING CORNER

B. Chesler has arranged with the Examiner to use a daily space to announce special bargains for the following day. It will be well worth while watching his advertisements, as his offerings will be real money savers every time. Look up the first one on another page to-day.

Frank Jenne Says:

Now if people would only conceive that the merchandise they buy should have a definite artistic value over and above its mere utility—they would always buy the best. That "artistic value" in clothing is the combination of the best material, best style, and best workmanship possible. All Semi-ready clothing has an established merit of its own. "Come to me."

It was hardly necessary to burn down the house to roast Mr. Bourassa.

The Sun is by no means unique in its views which have been voiced by many other papers throughout Canada, including the Mail and Empire the Globe and the Montreal Gazette while the Manchester Guardian has also felt constrained to regard the regulations as rather too drastic.

A BRIGHT PUBLICATION.

The Great War Veterans' Association is to be congratulated upon its official organ, "The Veteran," now in the sixth month of its career, and steadily growing in merit. It is a well-edited, splendidly printed and brightly illustrated periodical, and a glance through the pages of the current issue is sufficient to convince one that "The Veteran" should be a welcome visitor. While, naturally, of course, giving prominence to matters affecting the returned soldier, it does not confine its activities to these problems, but publishes many articles of general interest, a well written description of Giessen prison camp, by Sergt. Gibbons, who was for some time a prisoner in Germany, beng a feature of the April number.

The quality of the editorial articles in "The Veteran" may be judged by the following extract:

A strenuous effort at recuperation is an immediate necessity for Canada. It cantot be put off till after the war. It is part of the war, and our whole fiuure depends upon its organization. We must plan to offer homes and work not only for our returning army but to all willing workers, if we would guard against further loss of population and manpower and provide for national survival. Sins of omission no less than sins of commission earn their retribution. With a growing debt, and a lessening population, an exodus after the war would enormously increase our debt per capita, and leave Canada a stranded and chronic economic cripple. Our national recuperation must rely upon the efficient development of our national resources, and to this problem the energies and abilities of the Union Administration should immediately devote itself.

Frances Fenwick Williams contributes a striking article on "The Soldier in Government," an interesting study which contains the following illuminative passage:

The World War is part of our world, part of the world which we have made, part of the world with which we must reckon. Therefore from several points of view the choice of a soldier for Parliamentary representative is a good choice. The man who has learned that loyalty to his comrades and his country is the first virtue; the man who has learned that words count for little and actions for much—the man who has learned to know what he wants and then to fight for it; such a man should make a good representative for any body of people whose minds are free from muddle and hypocrisy.

I believe that the soldier in government will stand somewhat aloof from the traditional things, that he wil regard with hard, keen eyes of suspicion the dear old political mystery dance. I think that he will be apt to meet all meaningless palaver with the stern, sharp query —"But what about US?"

A call to renewed courage and optimism at home in the face of the war situation, is the poem, "Steady All," by "Sergt. G.," which is worth reproducing in full. It is as follows:

Hell unspeakable is raging,
Steady all;
The last mad fight the foe is waging,
Steady all;
As at Verdun, Frenchmen beat them;
So our boys, too, will defeat them,
The Lion's aroused; cheer up, he-ll eat them,
Steady all.

Rumours wild, and German boastings, take no heed, and
Steady all;
Britain's bent? Maybe, but bending gathers strength, so
Steady all.
Show your faith in them out there,
Heed no rantings of despair,
Save your breath, and do your share, be
Steady all.

He laughs best, they say, who holds it to the last, so
Steady all;
Leave the Bosche to his grinning, ours will come, so
Steady all;
Just the cause for which we fight,
Scorning those whose law is might,
Our battle-cry "Defend the Right," so—
Steady all.

And then there is the monthly contribution of "Corporal Convalescent" who deals with current topics in a breezy style, the unconventionality of which does not detract from the truth of his remarks. As a sample here is his plan of dealing with the problem of titles:

"Now I have got a real scheme about this title stunt that looks good to me. What's the matter of setting up a market in titles just as in real estate and wheat? Right now titles are handed out either for voting the straight ticket for 20 years, putting up the dough, or squaring somebody, or else for splashing money around for hospitals or giving the Duke a swell dinner. But they don't ever make no call for ready cash for titles, and seeing what a big bunch are out chasing them, it would be put up in barrels if only it was asked for. Now the canteen fund of our dear Dominion is mighty hard up for dough. And the way this title business has been handled in the past would make Sir Sam Hughes, who was no economiser, sick. For all the stuff that has been sold, there has never been a try to regulate the market. If you're selling pork or wheat, you don't start a fool game loading up the market with all the supply in sight, for it's a dead sure thing it will soon be on the blink. Yet the guys that run the honor market have been playing this crazy game, and thrown knighthoods about like drunken sailors till the market's all in.

"Now, I'm all for calling a halt to this mug's game when we need the money so bad. First of all I'd reform ranks in the organization of the business. Free bidding in an open market would be my order of the day. Let the Government come right out and put their goods on the counter with the starting prices ticketed on. I'll bet you in nine cases out of ten the market would take a heavy jolt up. Get this new stunt in shape and in a few years we would be wise to what was a fair price for each title and how many the market could stand without breaking. Of course we'd have to forget all this fool nonsense of going easy with the highest lines of titles. If Mr. Munge Munitioneer is ready and willing to come through with $500,000 to break even with Lord Atholstan, why ask him only for $50,000 to get in on the same floor with Sir Edmund Walker? It's like a saleslady in Eaton's asking a customer who'd come in to buy a thirty dollar hat to hit the trail for home with a two dollar take. She'd hold her job a long time, I guess. The title market has been handled cruel, wasteful."

The extracts given are only a few of the good things to be found in "The Veteran," whose circulation will steadily grow if the present high quality of the magazine is maintained.

A FARMER'S VIEW.

(By a farmer in 'Canadian Courier')

Food—that's the need of the hour. And food is going to be the need of the hours in the next 365 days, and, perhaps, in the next several periods of 365 days. The Allies want food; Great Britain wants food; and Canada is going to be in want of food. In a recent letter written to Canada, Lord Rhondda, Food Controller, said:

"The Canadian farmer and Canadian farm hand now have the opportunity to make an effective reply to the enemy's present onslaught by bending their undivided energies to the increased production of those food supplies for which we depend to such vital extent upon your great Dominion."

And all the good loyal souls in Canada's cities and towns bowed their heads and uttered patriotic amens.

And yet, in spite of these amens, the Allies, Great Britain and Canada, are going to go right on wanting food.

Why does Lord Rhondda continuously appeal to Canada for food? Why do British and allied statesmen persistently mention this country when casting about for supplies with which to feed their hungry millions of civilian and militarv population. Because—no country has a greater expanse of arable land adjacent to market facilities—uncultivated. We have the soil that could supply in abundance the whole of the United Kingdom and all the armies of the Empire with the much-needed cereals and fats.

Let us put the situation in tabloid form. As compared with the principal friendly and unfriendly countries each Canadian stands in relation to arable land as follows:

FARM LAND—ACRES PER CAPITA.
Canada	49-71
Russia	3-5
Germany	1-9
U. S. A.	19
France	3-2
United Kingdom	1-7
Austria-Hungary	1-3

What a wonderful opportunity to serve the cause for which we profess so much love? We—you and I—as Canadians, posses in greater abundance than any other country, one of the two things essential to food production—land. But the other thing—we lack. There are Canadians who will face the perils of the battlefield and discomforts of the air; Canadians who will gladly and heroically brave the terrors of general elections and endure the discomforts of Parliament and Legislature; Canadians who will cleverly spin food-production editorials; Canadians who will spend nerve-wracking eight hour shifts over counting-tables and lathes; but none of these will produce food. We have the Land. But, without—Labor, our arable lands are as useless as the Dead Sea. And when it comes to actual farm work, politicans, editors, clerks, artisans, and all the hordes of men who live in Canadian towns and cities, with one mind, offer up excuses. "I have married a directing job and cannot go into the farm-yard," says the politician. And he believes it. Fully one-half of the country follows the example of the men in the directing jobs—and believe that their services are not required in food-production. The civilian recruiters who said "go into the trenches," made a bad fist of it, and until our leaders of public thought are prepared to sacrifice their unbent backs and flabby muscles in the fields of Canada's basic industry; until they say, "Come into the fields and let us together make food," Great Britain and the Allies will look to Canada in vain for their daily bread.

And, thinking of someone else, the patriotic town reader will probably fervently exclaim, "Amen!"

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sault Ste. Marie is arranging a big Dominion Day celebration for its returned soldiers, each of which will be presented with a sterling silver medal. There is need of a similar spirit in Peterborough.

Some restaurant keepers apparently regard the new food regulations as being designed to raise prices rather than to conserve food. Several Montreal concerns have been doing this by giving an extra helping of wheat bread and charging five cents extra.

Sir Eric Geddes described the naval raid against Zeebrugge and Ostend as "an extremely gallant and hazardous one." The world will agree with the statement of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin has asked for passports in order that he may visit Washington. Is he coming over to make trouble or to dodge trouble?

Canadians who are inclined to complain of the high prices of food in this country will be interested in learning that the price of beef has increased 134 per cent. and the price of pork 143 per cent. in France while the price of vegetables has jumped to 393 per cent. over pre-war figures.

LORD ROTHERMORE HAS RESIGNED

(Special to The Examiner.)

London, April 25.—Lord Rothermere, chairman of the British Air Board, has resigned, it was announced to-day. He is a brother of Lord Northcliffe. Premier Lloyd George, in accepting his resignation, expressed his regrets that Rothermere should leave his post after successfully launching the unification of the air force.

World-Thrillers For Royal Shows

Mr. Pappas, of the Royal Theatre, when in Toronto this week, made special arrangements for showing at the Grand Opera House the best programmes procurable in the motion picture world. Such productions are costing more than the usual run of bills, and for these special shows, priced elsewhere from 50c up, the Royal's charges on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays will be 15c for matinees and 15c and 25c at night. For the first three days of each week prices will remain at 10c for matinees and 10c and 15c in the evening. These prices will obtain until further notice, and there will be Royal shows at the Grand every night for which a road company is not booked.

The first of these mammoth special stories will be shown to-morrow and Saturday, when Wm. Farnum will be seen in "When a Man Sees Red." This is a world-thriller of the first magnitude, and a phenomenal success everywhere shown. See it!

DUTCH WILL OBSERVE NEUTRALITY TO THE END

Ministers Have Left Holland and Germany in Meantime.

AMSTERDAM, April 24. — The Hetvolk announces that the German Minister to the Netherlands has left The Hague for Berlin, and that the Dutch Minister to Germany is on his way from Berlin to The Hague.

The Berlin correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant is informed by a person in authority that difficulties have arisen in the negotiations between Germany and Holland; the negotiations are not making headway.

The Hague correspondent of the Handelsblad says that the question of the transport of sand and gravel and the use of the railway line through Limbourg depends entirely on the intentions of Germany. The correspondent adds that the Dutch Government will firmly observe neutrality, whatever happens.

HONOUR TO WHOM HONOUR IS DUE.

To the Canadian Y. M. C. A. must be credited the institution on a large and comprehensive scale of social and Christian work amongst soldiers. Its aggressively helpful spirit that won the recognition and commendation of Lord Roberts during the South African war, has earned for the Association undying fame in the greater war raging to-day in Europe.
